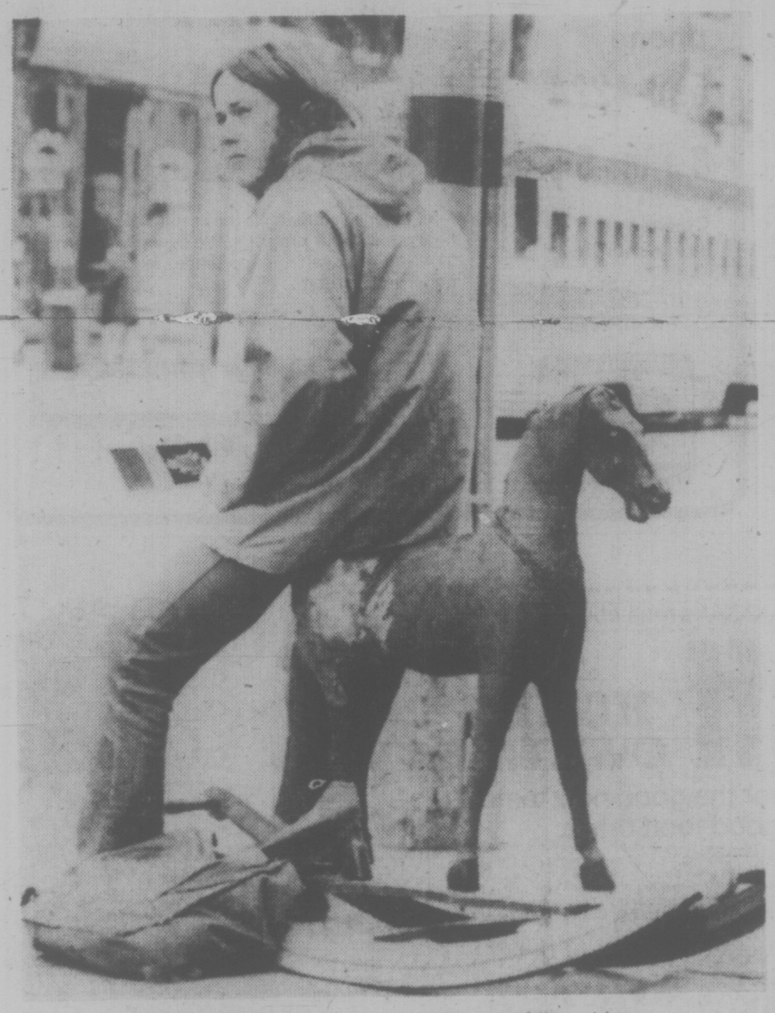
15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

ENTRIES POUR IN

More than 200 Victorians have already entered the Times-CJVI meet-the-stars contest and another big sack of entries was yet to be sorted this afternoon.

Entries must be postmarked before midnight Saturday in order to qualify. Official entry forms are printed daily in the Times with today's form on page 33.

The winner of a weekend for two in Hollywood, complete with a tour of a movie studio, will be drawn from among those who have correctly predicted the Academy Award winners for best actor, best actress and best picture. Three consolation prizes will also be awarded.



HOBBY HORSE makes a handy seat while waiting for a street car in Toronto. David Spearin, 18, explained he wasn't horsing around — he had spotted the old rocking horse in an antique shop and thought it would add to the decor of his room.

FIRMS FEAR LONG TEAMSTER STRIKE

City Shelves to Go Bare?

The strike by Teamsters against 97 British Columbia trucking companies will produce temporary shortages of some food products and store goods, company spokesmen said today.

How serious the shortages are depends upon the length of the strike and the availability of alternative means of moving goods to Vancouver Island.

"Almost everything that comes from the mainland arrives by truck," said Herb Harris, manager of Johnston Terminals.

"The strike has stopped everything but some companies either have alternative means of transportation or are arranging for it. It is difficult to predict how serious this will be."

He said the companies were hopeful that talks today with the Teamsters and Labor Minister Allan Williams would prode a quick settlement.

"If there is no settlement today, this could be a long dispute."

The province's 4,500 teamster truckers and warehousemen walked off the job Tuesday afternoon with the union seeking an increase of $1.40 per hour in a one-year contract. The increase would give them $7.80 an hour, parity with long-distance haulers in western Canada.

Teamster president Ed Lawson said the union was seeking a quick settlement and would refer the contract to the Anti-Inflation Board to determine whether it was within federal guidelines. The Teamsters were prepared to abide by the decision of the board.

The Teamsters have also been on strike against B.C. Railway for three weeks but Lawson said the union wanted to keep that dispute separate from the truckers' walkout.

Together with the BCR shutdown, the trucker strike will affect about 80 per cent of all freight shipments in B.C. directly or indirectly.

In Victoria, Simpsons-Sears store manager Jack Hutchins said the truck strike is "a great inconvenience" for department stores. His company uses its own truck, driven by Simpsons-Sears employees, for light hauling from the mainland warehouse. Larger loads were handled by private trucking firms that employ Teamsters.

As long as the goods could be delivered to the mainland warehouse, the store could continue to get small regular shipments on their own trucks. He said it was too early to be sure how the rail and truck strike might affect the flow of goods into the warehouse.

Spokesmen for other companies said they expected some independent (non-union) trucking firms would be into the area on a short-term basis.

Companies would also make greater use of their own trucks and employees.

Williams said this morning he would be meeting with both sides in the trucking dispute first and the would hold meetings with labor and management representatives in the B.C. Railway dispute.

He met Tuesday evening with the Teamsters in hopes of getting an agreement to send the dispute to binding arbitration but after "an exchange of information" the talks were recessed until this afternoon.

Told that Lawson had been quoted as saying the trucking strike need not last for more than one day, Williams replied: "If he thinks there is no reason for a strike, then he should stop it."

NEWS BRIEFS

Fish Packer Safe

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — A 99-foot fish-packing vessel made it to the safety of Campbell River early today after water filled the engine room and its engine cut out in heavy seas. The Pandora 2, a survey vessel, came to the assistance of the Shirley Rose and was prepared to take the crew off the fishboat, which was loaded with 140 tons of herring.

Mail Hike Queried

TORONTO (CP) — Two groups representing 124 magazines and 550 weekly newspapers have applied to take the post office before the Anti-Inflation Board for increasing international postal rates by up to 414 per cent.

First Surplus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. basic balance of payments was $1.4 billion in surplus for 1975, reflecting the first annual surplus since current record keeping began in 1960, the commerce department reported today. The basic balance had been a near-record $10.7 billion in deficit in 1974.

Seal Protest Ends

ST. ANTHONY, Nfld. (UPI) — The Greenpeace Foundation today ended its campaign protesting Canada's annual seal hunt after seals and sealing fleets moved beyond the range of the environmental group's aircraft. The volunteer demonstrators left today to return to Vancouver.

$1M FISH FIRM FIRE ON VANCOUVER DOCKS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A four-alarm fire early today destroyed the three-storey Norpac Fisheries Ltd. Building on Vancouver's waterfront, but the fire was prevented from spreading by the Burrard Inlet fireboat, Fire Chief Armand Konig said.

He estimated damage at $4 million. The fire was believed to have started just before midnight in a compressor machinery room below the Norpac cold storage area.

There were no injuries.

At the peak of the blaze there were 11 fire trucks, the Vancouver fireboat and various support vehicles on the scene.

Inside the building were 40 tons of herring roe which last year sold for about $6,000 a ton. There were also undetermined quantities of herring and other fish in cold storage.

Legal Aid Chops 13

Attorney-General Garde Gardom Tuesday promised to provide details of the firings of 13 employees of the British Columbia Legal Services Commission.

Gardom said in an interview he will ask departmental officials for a report on the firings and other cuts within the commission.

The attorney-general commented after a spokesman from within the commission said 13 were given dismissal notices Friday and are expected to continue working with the commission until the end of April.

The spokesman said money was needed for B.C. corrections operations and it was taken directly from the budget for the commission which resulted in cuts in staff.

There are indications that contracts of those dismissed had not expired and some will seek large cash settlements from the government.

Mr. Gardom said he was unable to confirm the exact number of dismissals or specify which programs have been cut or dropped.

Asked if belt-tightening within the commission could result in people appearing in court for the first time on summary offences not being able to get legal aid lawyers, Gardom replied, "anything could be a possibility.

"We just know that we've got to reduce or hold the line on some of the dollar impacts."

The commission was established last August under New Democratic Party legislation and was given the power to administer a $4.2 million Legal Aid budget.

It was also empowered to provide information to the public on B.C. law and develop experimental programs on the provision of legal services in the province.

Gardom said he had asked his departmental officials to study the effectiveness of the commission and look at all delivery of legal services in B.C.

The federal government is also examining legal services on a nation-wide basis, he added.

The attorney-general said more money is needed to maintain the commission and if funds are available, as many programs as possible will be retained.

A firm decision on the future of the commission has not been made, he added.

When the legislation to set up the commission was intro-

Kissinger Won't Deny Cuban Invasion Threat

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger refuses specifically to rule out a United States invasion of Cuba if troops of the Caribbean country engage in further intervention in Africa.

Kissinger declined to specify what action the United States would take if Cuba — as it did in Angola — sent armed troops into another southern Africa country.

"What we will do I cannot say, but we are serious and we have pointed this out to Cuba," Kissinger said here Tuesday during one of a series of regional visits designed to bolster support for U.S. foreign policy.

"We were accused of not making our issues clear in Angola.

But we are making them clear to Cuba."

In recent weeks, Kissinger repeatedly has said Cuba should not ignore U.S. warnings against further African intervention.

He was asked specifically during the news conference if the United States might invade Cuba if it defies the U.S. warnings. Kissinger replied: "I do not want to answer that question."

Meanwhile in Zambia, four African presidents gathered at Lusaka today for talks that might bring full black African backing for an all-out guerrilla war against Rhodesia's white rulers.

The three-day meeting follows the collapse last week of constitutional negotiations between Prime Minister Ian Smith and black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo in Salisbury.

Presidents Samora Machel of Mozambique, Sir Seretse Khama of Botswana and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania arrived this morning and were greeted by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

Another arrival was Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the militant faction of the Rhodesian African National Council, which opposes the moderate wing headed by Nkomo.

U.S. Eyes Mass Flu Vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two dozen of the top scientists in the United States are meeting President Ford amid reports that government health experts are recommending a campaign to inoculate every U.S. citizen against a rare and deadly flu strain.

Any such immunization program would be the largest in U.S. history and would be aimed at the swine flu virus, a strain that has been dormant for nearly a half century.

The swine flu strain was blamed for 20 million deaths world-wide during a 1918 epidemic.

Last month, the virus killed an army recruit and afflicted four other soldiers at Fort Dix, N.J.

Since then, public health specialists have been considering whether a public inoculation program should be launched. The Washington Post says that Ford's health advisers have concluded that such a program is needed.

Officials at the National Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta indicated that a decision will be announced shortly.

The centre said Tuesday it would take nearly six months to produce enough vaccine to provide shots for 215 million U.S. citizens.

Estimates of the crash program's cost range from $107 million to $150 million.

Lockheed Deal Lobby Denied

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — One of two former deputy ministers who have formed a consulting firm acknowledged Tuesday holding a contract with the controversial Lockheed Aircraft Corp. which is negotiating a billion dollar deal with the government. (See also Page 41).

But Jim Grandy, former trade and commerce deputy, denied lobbying with the government on behalf of Lockheed over the sale of 18 Orion long range patrol aircraft.

He stressed that the firm which he has formed with former deputy finance minister Simon Reisman never has and never will act as lobbyists for any corporation with the government. He also denied a suggestion that the firm has even had a contract with any government department.

The issue was raised in the House of Commons by Conservative House Leader Walter Baker who declared it would be improper for a former senior public servant to act on behalf of a company trying to get a contract with the Crown.

Baker stated that he has information that Grandy was under a consultation contract with the prime minister's office or other agency of the government in the past and asked acting prime minister Allan MacEachen whether this was after the firm "went to work for Lockheed." MacEachen said he didn't know.

The Tory MP noted that the firm of former deputy ministers has "immense influence" and said that it could have been used to give Lockheed "the inside track" on the contract.

He demanded whether the government will bring in guidelines to govern the freedom of retired public servants to "go to work for corporations precisely in order to lobby in areas of their intimate government expertise and with former colleagues."

Reagan, Carter Win

Times News Services

RALEIGH, N.C. — Ronald Reagan bounced back from five straight defeats Tuesday to beat President Ford in the North Carolina Republican primary and keep his sinking presidential campaign afloat.

Jimmy Carter beat Gov. George Wallace for the third time, giving the former Georgia governor four wins in six primaries and tightening his grip on the leadership in the race for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination.

Reagan's win was an upset that even the former California governor had not publicly predicted. It left him well behind Ford in the GOP nomination contest but no longer under party pressure to give up his challenge of Ford, the first president to come to office without election.

Both winners scored clear-cut majorities — Carter crushing Wallace 54 to 35 per cent, Reagan whipping Ford 52 to 46.

Carter's margin made him the first Democrat to win a state with more than 50 per cent of the vote.

Ford conceded "I expected to win," but said the loss would fire up his campaign to more strenuous efforts.

Rogers Morton, Ford's chief political strategist, discounted the importance of Reagan's victory in basically conservative North Carolina.

"I don't think we've been dealt a very serious blow," Morton said in Washington.

Victoria May Bid for Western Canada Games

The Greater Victoria area may make a formal bid to host the 1979 Western Canada Games, but only if municipal councils can be assured on two important ifs:

—Whether federal and provincial government funding will be available in generous quantities.

—And whether existing sports and accommodation facilities, with some renovation and upgrading, will be adequate without involving taxpayers in any disastrous capital cost commitments.

Careful investigation of these points as a preliminary to submitting a formal application was stressed when the matter was discussed Tuesday at the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

No one actually mentioned Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and the Olympic Games fiasco, but the awful spectre seemed to be hovering over the committee room at City Hall.

A technical committee composed of the recreation directors of the four core municipalities has been studying the implications of hosting the Western Canada Games for several weeks.

What seemed to impress municipal representatives was the committee's report noting that Regina, which hosted the games last summer, had no cause to regret the gesture.

Said the recreation directors: "The games can be a financial success, as the Regina budget called for a $20,000 deficit and we have now been advised that a small profit will be realized."

Their report recommended that a bid be submitted if assurances of senior government help are obtained, and provided capital expenditures for new facilities can be kept to an absolute minimum.

After the meeting, Victoria Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of the Intermunicipal Committee, told reporters he is optimistic that the various sports facilities of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt will prove adequate for staging the event, even though some modifications may be required.

Pointing out that Regina has received provincial and federal grants totalling more than $600,000, Tindall said that base of financing supplemented by ticket sales and other sources of revenue could make the games an attractive proposition for Victoria.

CLC Quits Two Councils

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress has pulled out of two major federal government advisory councils in its latest protest move against the anti-inflation program of selective wage and price controls.

The 30-member CLC executive council decided Tuesday to withdraw from the Economic Council of Canada and the Canada Labor Relations Council because it feels that further labor participation is pointless, CLC president Joe Morris said.

He said the withdrawal of labor representatives will effectively destroy both advisory councils 'because they are tripartite councils and they cannot continue to operate if one of the legs is missing."

Labor Minister John Munro immediately described the CLC decision to pull out of the Economic Council of Canada and the Canada Labor Relations Council "as almost a self-destruct kind of action."

He said if the CLC sticks with its decision — and it says it will — the labor relations council is finished.

Morris said the CLC executive council also had discussed the possibility of calling a country-wide general strike to protest the federal anti-inflation program, but he had no announcements to make.

CUT IN FUNDS CLOSES CO-OP

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Housing Foundation (UHF) said Tuesday that it can no longer develop co-op housing in British Columbia because of a lack of government funding.

Johnson Akam, acting executive director of UHF, said the foundation will close its operations at the end of the month, leaving more than 3,000 of its applicants for co-op housing high and dry.

The UHF is the largest co-op housing developer in Canada and since its inception in 1972 has completed 930 units of co-op housing in B.C. and a further 253 units are expected to be occupied by July.

"It's unfortunate we will have to wind down our operations but we've been dependent on the provincial government for funding," Akam said. "I regret the government didn't see fit to fund us."

Besides being the largest such organization in the country, the UHF assisted in setting up similar foundations in Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario.

The foundation relied on a $16,000 government grant and also covered its expenses by levying a 1.5-per-cent development fee on groups setting up co-operative housing.

The UHF board met with housing minister Hugh Curtis last month in an attempt to secure funding, but the minister said there would be no further government assistance until the Social Credit housing policy had been established.

Ten staff members — three in the UHF Victoria office and seven in the foundation headquarters here — will be laid off March 31.

Coup Finally Ends Peron Reign

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — One of the most-anticipated coups in history occurred early today when the commanders of Argentina's three armed forces ousted President Isabel Peron and flew her under arrest to the interior of the country.

The military takeover, which had been expected for months, ended 21 chaotic months in office for the Western Hemisphere's first woman government head.

A communique broadcast over the national radio network, said the army commander, Gen. Jorge Videla, 50, was heading a three-man junta which was in "operational control" of Argentina. The other members are the navy commander, Admiral Emilio Massera, and the air force commander, Gen. Orlando Agosti.

The junta accused Mrs. Peron's government of immorality and incompetence. It said Argentina was faced with "a tremendous power vacuum threatening to sink it in disintegration and anarchy."

Several shots were fired as troops took over the headquarters of the Peronist metalworkers' union, and there was token resistance by some Peronist diehards. But generally things were peaceful as troops moved swiftly to strategic positions behind tanks and machine-guns.

The formal takeover during the night was preceded by several days of troop movements. The junta announced there was absolute calm throughout the country.

The military returned to power after three years of civilian rule because Juan Peron's widow, after she succeeded to his presidency when he died in July, 1974, was unable to quell political terrorism, reverse the steady worsening of the economy, check the world's worst rate of inflation—423 per cent for the last 12 months—or unify the divided Peronist movement.

Possessing neither the charismatic leadership of Peron's second wife, the late Eva Duarte Peron, nor executive, political or governmental ability, Mrs. Peron demonstrated that her chief qualification for office was her husband's name.

Shortly before 1 a.m. a helicopter took her and her suitcases to the downtown Buenos Aires airport, which had been closed to traffic for hours. Military sources said a jet flew her under guard to El Messidor, a luxurious governor's residence in the Andes, 900 miles south of the capital.

Legal Aid Fires 13

duced last May, former attorney-general Alex Macdonald said it was an important move to "take legal services out of politics completely."

He said the establishment of the commission would hopefully mean an end to "cash register justice".

Macdonald said in an interview Tuesday that he is extremely worried about Social Credit cuts in legal services.

He said he hopes the new government doesn't intend to revert to the old legal system by which only those who can afford lawyers will get them.

Any cuts in justice service "would be disastrous because it takes years to catch up," Mr. Macdonald said.

He said he believes the Social Credit government is producing a phoney financial crisis to make the former NDP government look incompetent and added that many cuts and expected cuts are unnecessary.

Linda Mann, office manager of the commission, said in an interview there will be a total of 13 staff members on the commission, including two full-time commissioners, after the staff cuts become effective.

Full details of the cuts won't be known until the provincial budget is brought down Friday but indications are that the commission has been cut in half and will be left with "a skelton crew" to perform the functions, she said.

A total of five commissioners, three part-time, will have to rearrange the commission's priorities, she said, adding that the work of the commission is primarily of a preventative nature rather than to actually provide services.

Dan Jabour, chairman of the commission, was not available for comment.

The Socred government has also abolished the NDP's $250,000 "Ask B.C." telephone information service.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said the service started in late fall will be replaced by a less costly service, involving one general government information number in Vancouver.

Victoria already has a telephone number for people wishing government numbers not listed in the telephone book and McCarthy said a similar number will be established in the Lower Mainland in May.

That phone number will be manned by two of the 15 people hired for the more elaborate information service and will cost about $30,000 a year.

The other 13 employees have been given termination notices and told an attempt will be made to find the other jobs within the public service.

B.C. Recovery To Lag—Report

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottaw aBureau

OTTAWA — An improved performance of the Canadian economy is expected in 1976 but recovery in British Columbia may lag behind the national performance, according to a report submitted to the Commons committee on regional development Tuesday.

The third largest and one of the most rapidly growing provinces of Canada, British Columbia experienced some sharp setbacks during 1975.

Gross provincial product, which increased about five per cent in real terms in 1974, will probably have showed no improvment in 1975.

The survey of the B.C. economy was part of a supplementary working paper submitted to the committee by Regional Economic Expansion Minister Marcel Lessard.

The economic slowdown in the western world has hit the lumber and metallic minerals industries of B.C. particularly hard.

The unemployment rate in B.C. during 1975 was more than eight per cent — well in excess of the national rate.

Most of B.C.'s prospects in the short-term depend on a rapid expansion of United States and other foreign markets.

The committee was informed that the province is concerned that its industrial base is too dependent upon resource extraction, with too little value added before export. In addition there is a need to stimulate economic activity outside of Vancouver and Victoria as a partial remedy for population pressures in the lower mainland.

It was estimated that the population of B.C. totalled 2.5 million by the end of 1975, an increase of 50,000 residents or 2.1 per cent over 1974.

This was the lowest percentage gain since 1962, and the smallest absolute increase during the past decade.

Over 61 per cent of the population of B.C. totalled 2.5 lower mainland and southern Vancouver Island.

Employment data for 1975 reflected the effect of work stoppages in the forest and other industries, depressed economic conditions and, to a lesser degree, a seasonal down turn in activity. The average unemployment rate during 1975 was 8.3 per cent.

DEPUTY QUITS HOUSING POST

Deputy Housing Minister Gary Begg has resigned from the government to return to the private sector.

The 35-year-old engineer and lawyer was hired by the NDP Feb. 1975 and was earning $43,000 a year.

Begg was not available for comment today but Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said there was no ill feeling between the two men and Begg had told him he would be leaving the government shortly after Curtis took over as minister.

Begg stressed that his departure had nothing to do with the change of government but simply a desire to return to the private sector, said Curtis.

The minister said he asked Begg to re-consider his decision to leave, but the deputy was firm in his resolve.

He said he found Begg "helpful and knowledgeable" and accepted his resignation with "very real regret."

In his letter of resignation, Begg said he was willing to help the minister handle departmental estimates and legislation in the house on a daily basis after his official departure April 30.

Curtis said he has begun looking for a new deputy.

the weather

A strong westerly flow of cool moist Pacific air lies aeross British Columbia. A weak disturbance caught in this stream moved inland last evening but little or no precipitation spread into the interior. A much more active system was early this morning producing moderate rain over the southern coast. This system will also move inland and weaken but will produce more precipitation than its predecessor. The moist cool air behind it will maintain showers or rain occasionally mixed with snow along the coast and snowflurries across the B.C. interior. Some clearing is likely before the next storm reaches the southern coast late Thursday.

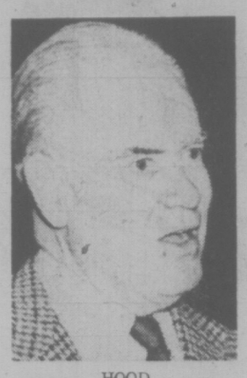
Bureaucrats Blunt City Budget Paring



HOOD

GLAZIER

WRIGHT
. . . cut refused

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria city council, which in recent weeks has been rolling merrily along cutting back public works projects, services and assorted frills in an effort to pare the city's 1976 budget, bounced up Tuesday against a solid brick wall of bureaucracy. (See also Page 17)

Try all they might, alderman could apparently make little or no dent in the expenditures of the administrative machinery which keeps City Hall ticking.

In its longest budget session this year, which droned on for more than four hours with only a brief break for coffee and sandwiches, council picked away at an administration budget of more than $3.6 million but managed to trim only a miniscule $13,750.

It also approved without demur the police department budget — earlier pruned by the Victoria police board — of $3.6 million.

No jobs were axed and no salaries cut, although there were occasional quibbles about the size of certain officials' salaries; questions as to whether some functions were overstaffed; and complaints about the way some planning department salaries were costed out against various activities.

Ald. Alf Hood summed up the difficulties involved in cutting back expenditures when he noted that more than 91 per cent of the police department budget is accounted for by salaries.

Council made no reduction in spending bigger than $4,000. That sum was cut from a proposed $20,000 allocation toward meeting the various management and upkeep costs involved in a wide variety of property holdings throughout the city.

A $2,000 item to set up an "employee identification card system" was chopped as unnecessary, and a $12,000 appropriation to send various senior officials to conventions in Canada and the U.S. was reduced by $2,500.

Ald. Murray Glazier, who questioned the value of allowing staff to attend professional seminars and conferences, suggested council establish a policy restricting attendance to functions within B.C.

He pointed out that the $12,000 figure shown wasn't an accurate one, as it reflected only the actual expenses incurred. If staff time were also taken into account the figure would be more like $50,000.

Ald. Bob Wright suggested the sum be cut by one-third to $8,000, but Mayor Mike Young received council's backing when he proposed a more modest cut bringing the conventions budget to $9,250.

City manager Jim Bramley assured council that senior officials had not been "overdoing" the privilege in the past, and added: I would like to think that the gentlemen who come back from these things have gained something."

"Weight," suggested Young.

In the closing stages of the discussion Ald. Ron McKenzie seized on a number of smaller budget items and tried to convince council they could all be eliminated, but he was only partially successful with one of them.

First he wanted to save a few hundred dollars by having the city's annual report printed without its usual colored cover bearing Victoria's crest.

But the idea was ruled out because the report has a wide distribution and aldermen apparently felt that its appearance sans cover would cheapen the city's prestige.

Then McKenzie sought to squash these items: $1,500 for decorating downtown streets during the Christmas season; $3,000 for a year-round decoration of City Hall; $5,000 for "parade floats;" and $400 maintenance costs for the light known as the "candle," atop the city's water tower in the Rockland district.

But the only reduction actually ordered was $1,000 from the City Hall decoration budget.

Sail Ald. Hood in obvious disgust: "Christmas is a rather special time and if we can't damn well afford $1,500 to light our downtown area there's something wrong somewhere."

Ald. John Hayes, who is vice-president of the Downtown Business Association, added the reminder that "60 per cent of the city's tax base comes from downtown."

Council learned that it couldn't cut the $5,000 for parade expenditure even if it wanted to.

The city manager pointed out that some weeks ago council approved the preparationof a float for this summer's festivities, "and it's under construction right now."

Even that didn't satisfy Wright, however.

"How much can we save by not sending it away?" he asked.

Bramley replied that as other cities send their floats to Victoria's parade, the least the city can do is reciprocate — especially as far as Vancouver and Seattle are concerned.

"Instead of sending it away by ferry perhaps it will float off by itself," joked Young.

Sex Row Renewed In Sooke

The controversy in Sooke over family life and sex education for elementary schools erupted again Tuesday with the resignation of Trustee Noel Haas from the family life committee.

Haas said today the family life committee just "wants to get the program through, although they don't admit it."

Haas, however, is against the program at elementary level "because there's no evaluation at any government level as to what effect the type of program has on young children."

She said the program teaches sex education, morals and values from kindergarten up and when home and school associations in Sooke are told about the program "the presentation is far too vague for a parent to make a decision as to whether they want a program in the first place."

Industrial Plan Okayed

Saanich aldermen Tuesday approved a 10-point plan for the development of the Royal Oak industrial park.

Council's lands, planning and housing committee recommended that park developers handle servicing costs estimated at about $60,000 an acre for the site between Vanalman and Mann west of the Pat Bay Highway.

Initially, Saanich will have to declare the area a development area to allow light industrial, warehouse and office uses, planner Gil Laurenson told the committee.

Laurenson also said he intends to prepare a master plan outlining development guidelines and standards for the area.

Recommendations approved by the committee, chaired by Ald. John McDonald, are that the engineering department prepare final estimates on servicing costs and a cost sharing formula; a start be made on sewer design and traffic flow.

Unnecessarily Insensitive

Does the provincial government go out of its way to be unnecessarily crude and insensitive in its public utterances? Or does it naturally fall into such gems as "let them sell their cars" or "they better get their shovels?"

Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis was needlessly insulting and callous with his declaration this week that public clamoring for suites in a now-cancelled government public rental project in Burnaby is probably from those people who "would be the type that would create a ghetto."

We know what he meant to say or should have said — that building public housing exclusively for low-income families or welfare recipients is a failure. Enlightened housing planners try for a mix of income groups — in this case, 25 per cent low-income — and attempt to avoid the massive, sterile projects erected in the past.

But that's not what Curtis did in fact say. He leaves the impression that the government thinks low-income families live in slums because they prefer the atmosphere, or that run-down neighborhoods are shabby and rickety because the people living there — usually renters — deliberately let the area deteriorate.

What's ironic about switching the project from rental units to condominiums is that Burnaby has a moratorium on such conversions, meaning that unless the new Socred administration wants to override a municipal bylaw (it has the power to do so), and alienate its best political friends in the province, the process of making this badly-needed housing available will be delayed even more.

The minister says the poor response to advertising in December is the reason the government now plans to sell the apartments. Perhaps the huge response from the public since the story hit the headlines — surely not every inquiry is from those who "would create a ghetto"? — will prompt a second look and a change of mind. At the very least, the minister owes people an apology.

"... I hate these demonstrations ... nobody can sleep a wink inside ..."

Pay Now, Fly Later

For the sake of argument, you are operating on a tight budget and forced to make a major purchase in a foreign country. Just when you think the deal is completed the foreign manufacturer says he can't afford to fabricate your purchase unless you lend him the money to do so. At this point, if you have any business sense whatsoever, you would give the manufacturer a knowledgeable wink—if only to acknowledge his incredible brass—and take your business elsewhere.

If you happen to be the Canadian government, though, things tend to become topsy-turvy. Defence Minister James Richardson says consideration is now being given to borrowing as much as $300 million from banks to help finance the purchase of 18 Lockheed patrol aircraft for the Canadian armed forces.

That's just one of five options the government is toying with in its attempts to iron out financing on this beleauguered project. After years of delay, Ottawa finally decided on the Orion. Weeks later Lockheed admitted publicly it was in dire financial straits. Charges of bribery against company executives further hurt the multinational corporation's reputation and continues to rock the governments of Japan and Holland, where much of the bribe money ended up.

Naturally, Canada went ahead with its deal. But it appears there was a misunderstanding between Ottawa and Lockheed. Each thought the other would put up the seed money to get the 18 aircraft rolling down the production line. Since Lockheed stands there with pockets turned inside out, it is apparently up to Canada to work out a solution. It's amazing.

The same government that spent $80 million in grants and loans to United Aircraft only to see the money spent in the U.S., the same government that helped finance New Brunswick's ill-fated Bricklin sports car is now considering bailing a U.S. multinational company out of hock with Canadian taxpayers' money.

If $300 million must be spent in these austere times, surely it should be spent in Canada on a Canadian enterprise. If this is too nationalistic a sentiment for this cautious country, then its time to haul down the flag.

Like almost every other defence purchase in recent memory, this one is sticky with politics, faintheartedness and a callous attitude towards the armed forces who have to live with Ottawa's second-hand roses. It has been so long since the government replaced any of its obsolescent military equipment our allies are beginning to get twitchy. The American pressure is twofold. They want Canada to be a credible NATO and NORAD partner. A juicy order for one of their largest ailing multinational corporations is also welcome. Even our European friends are watching the progress of the sale with interest as Canada and Common Market countries prepare to sign a contractural link that could be of much benefit to Canada.

If Ottawa has once again worked itself into an unfortunate dilemma it is one that might have been avoided by more careful negotiation, less politicking, and a capacity for making decisions. However we extricate ourselves from the current mess, it should not be through a loan to Lockheed. The Canadian government subsidizes too many industries on this side of the border, without adding a large U.S. firm to the list.

W. A. WILSON

Needed: Public Confidence

OTTAWA — The judges' affair which has preoccupied parliament for the last three weeks has freely been compared with the pipeline debate in 1956 in its probable political impact and up to a point there may be some validity in that proposition.

It is best to remember, though, what gave the bitter political squabble over pipeline financing its ultimate political effect. The dispute itself created great tension in the House of Commons which reached its peak with, first, a dubious position adopted by the speaker of the day and then the final decision to use closure to bring the debate to an end within the deadline the late C. D. Howe had unwisely accepted.

Outside, the House of Commons, among Canadians far from Parliament Hill, the fight aroused great interest but much less tension than it did in the capital.

The real impact came the following year when Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, nearing the end of a term, called an election and the full effect of the debate depended upon an additional factor. John Diefenbaker, who had been chosen Conservative leader late the previous year, proved to be an exceptional campaigner in his new role as head of a political party. He gave the pipeline issue its cutting edge, using it to present the Liberals as a party whose long hold on power had left them arrogant towards public and parliament alike.

Clark Not Dief

Without Diefenbaker's exceptional campaign skills it is unlikely that the pipeline debate would have been such a memorable event in Canadian politics.

The Liberals have not yet been in power as long as they had been in 1957 but they have been there long enough to have attracted to themselves some fervent accusations of arrogance and unresponsiveness. Prime Minister Trudeau, however, is two years away from an election and at this time he has no reason to fear that he is facing another Diefenbaker anywhere in the ranks of his opponents. So the analogy with the pipeline debate should not be pushed too far.

But if that is true on one side, on the other the Liberals would be wise not to dismiss the affair too lightly. It has been instructive to many as a current indicator of the Liberal attitude towards power. It has taken place when the party is already unpopular with many and, judging by the opinion surveys, inspiring a far greater number with great doubts.

The prime minister has adopted some positions so filled with sophistry that his own image must be affected by them to some degree. Three ministers have had to apologize publicly for improper actions. One has resigned over it and had his resignation rejected. Another has resigned, more effectively, as one outcome of the affair but without admitting anything.

By any standard of measurement, that is quite a total for a government to run up on the unfavorable side of the ledger in a three-week period.

Trudeau has made a great point that, when the affair first became public, he did not question the ministers involved because there was no suggestion of illegality, only of improper action.

He had, he says, a "duty" not to question them closely under those circumstances. Trudeau, to put it bluntly, invites the reminder that to be accepted as an honorable man it is necessary to do a little better than just keep out of jail.

He has begged the question of impropriety in his government in a way that asks for the suspicious reaction that he did not want to know what was going on, that he hoped nothing would come out.

CANADIANS
... government a substitute?

One minister set the excellent example of resigning because his actions had been found improper. The prime minister wiped out the value of that example by rejecting the resignation.

Even if Drury had resigned a second time, later on, the demonstrated acceptance of high standards would have been lost — later, it would just have been a response to serious political pressure and that is quite a different matter.

The most unhappy aspect of this affair, by far, is that Trudeau has chosen to protect ministers rather than public confidence. He has treated the possession of office as a matter of privilege, not of responsibility.

Belief in the need to protect public confidence in the basic institutions of the community is, admittedly, a somewhat conservative approach and it is not by any means universally held to be of great importance.

The institutions of our society have themselves been under serious attack ever since the wave of dissent commenced in the mid-1960s with its challenge to authority in almost every form. The level of dissent is subsiding and some renewed value is probably attached both to institutions such as the judicial system and to public confidence in them.

I believe that any society draws its strength from the health and vitality of its fundamental institutions and the morale of the community. But there is an alternative view, widely held in the 1960s and still current in the corridors of power in Ottawa.

This alternative approach is that the strength of society can be equally well protected by wide-ranging and forceful state action, that the power and interventions of big government can successfully be substituted for vigorous health in the essential social institutions.

This is not quite such an either-or situation as that suggests because it is rather more a matter of emphasis and of degree.

Still Skeptical

In his revealing year-end broadcasts Trudeau had a good deal to say that bore on these approaches to our problems, agreeing that there is "a great deal of unease in the society. People are wondering who is in charge of the economy, who is in charge of the society and they're concerned, they're worried and they have cause to be ... We'll have to take new directions, new and bold directions ..."

I cannot remember ever having heard Trudeau's views on the judicial system but he has made it clear that many of our institutions must change, and not only economic ones. He is forthright in his opinion that parliament worked badly, is increasingly irrelevant and should be changed.

He has been equally emphatic that economic institutions must change and that he is quite prepared to use political interventions to bring this change about. It seems likely that if a man believes deeply in the need to change many of the institutions upon which society depends, he will not simultaneously place a high value on preserving public confidence in them.

The difficulty that many of us have with this arises from skepticism that the current impulses of politicians and bureaucrats will much improve upon the process of social evolution. Our institutions will change but it seems highly unlikely that we can afford to dispense with public confidence in them for a while yet.

HMS Raspberry

I notice in the March 17 issue of your valued paper the arrival at Esquimalt of the Canadian squadron accompanied by HMNZS Canterberry. No doubt a sister ship to Raspberry.—G.P. Kelly, Mill Bay.

Fact And Fiction

I must protest the ignorance demonstrated by the individual who covered the student protest at the opening of the legislature on Wednesday (see article on page 28 of Thursday's Times).

It appears that your reporter was somewhat disappointed by the lack of violent activity and obscene sloganeering on the part of the demonstrators. I can appreciate that this restraint does not make a journalist's day, but surely, to criticize students for failing to make an effort to "go beyond a rope barrier" or give anyone any "trouble" is most irresponsible.

I submit that your reporter implies that Education Minister Pat McGeer ignored the protest. While the demonstration was occurring, McGeer met with a delegation of students from Notre Dame University in Nelson. Clearly, this fact should have been included.

Had your reporter interviewed some of the students, rather than another journalist, he-she might have realized the very real concerns of the students over education cutbacks.

It is clear that misleading and irresponsible reporting could go a long way to put these concerns before the public. I suggest that your reporter be sent back to journalist's school in order to learn the difference between fact and fiction. This is granting, of course, that courses in journalism are available under the new government.

If not, you, Mr. Editor, may have to teach the difference yourself; it could be a long and tedious job.—Nick Sidor, Victoria.

Divide And Conquer

As an outside observer of the current Springridge-Fernwood N.I.P. debacle, it is obvious that the current so-called "squabbles" have been seeded by city aldermen, bolstered by one-sided reporting in the Times and other local papers hot after a sensational headline, in an attempt to "divide-and-conquer," scuttling the N.I.P. program before it is launched.

Aldermen have charged that the N.I.P. committee is not representative of the community.

The central issue here is local control of improvements and development. Some members of the N.I.P. committee, chosen at a city-organized public meeting, may have expressed their concern over this issue through membership in other neighborhood organizations, but that doesn't make them the power-hungry factions that city council sees challenging their omnipotence. I say more power to any individual or group willing to stand up and challenge the city council's development policies, whose only motivation seems to be the almighty buck! Unfortunately, the press has been suckered, the public has been shafted, council has another great game of political football going, and they own the football! — Neil Wilton, 1228 Oxford Street.

More Tickets

Re Onlooker's comments on parking tickets on Field Street. (letter Lesson for $2, March 18):

As a resident of Newfield Apartments I find it very frustrating to come home at night and not be able to park my car because do-gooder parents don't know what Residential Parking Only means and apparently don't know that it is illegal to park on yellow lines, in turn-arounds and in the middle of the road. I also find it amusing to be threatened with court martial by young smart alecky sergeants for turning my car around in the only available space which is their private civil defence land half-empty parking lot. Hope the rookies keep giving the tickets and be sure to keep an eye on onlookers who are just loitering around parked cars.—Apt. 16.

California A-power station — not all are dangerously unsafe.

Atomic Power

When I saw the headline Atom Power on your page five articles March 17 I was very pleased, thinking at last there would be some relevant discussion in Canada about this vital topic. I quickly realized that the articles were written in the United States, dealt very largely with problems associated with the American and similar nuclear power programs, and certainly did nothing to acquaint Canadian people with our own unique nuclear power program. Presumably your diligent reporters have already asked Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, or some other reliable source of information on the Canadian reactor program, about relevant safety factors, etc.

The average Canadian is quick to assume all nuclear power programs are the same and will continue to do so until such time as the media make it clear that this is not true. For example Canadian nuclear fuels and waste products are different. The articles you printed were concerned with conflicts of interest between scientists and industry. In Canada nuclear power is controlled by a crown company, not by private companies. I feel the full page you devoted to nuclear power would have been much more useful had it been devoted to a comparison of Canadian and American systems. Generating blind opposition to nuclear power is doing a tremendous injustice to Canadian scientists.—Edward L. Mathie, Victoria.

Employee Interest

The following letter was sent to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission:

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, local 230, represents all the employees of Victoria Cablevision Ltd., many of whom have been there since the company's start. The technicians have received their training through night school programs, apprenticeships and on the job training. The apprentices are involved in the same type of program, even day school. The employees therefore feel they have a vested interest in the future of their employer.

At a recent meeting of the majority of the employees there was a unanimous vote to record their rejection of Capital Cable Co-operative's takeover bid. The employees are most aware of the technical and social problems that they had to overcome to build up the system to the point that it is being offered to the public today. They also expressed their concern over the amount of publicity that Capital Cable has received from the media and the lack of exposure that Victoria Cablevision has received. This lack of exposure has prompted the employees to request their union to write this letter to express their concern with and their lack of input into the issue itself.

We have experienced a good relationship, both in administering the collective agreements during their term and negotiating renewals. Would this be maintained if Capital Cable were successful? Particularly in the light of the fact that the interveners have an apparent lack of "technical" experience in the operation of such a system. Admiring the big apple is one thing, but being able to chew it if it should come into your possession is another.

IBEW local 230 is well aware of the position of organized labor toward co-op's in general. We support that theory again in general and each one should be looked at on its own merit.

The employees of Victoria Cablevision Ltd. are members of the community and are proud of the service they provide and the rates charged. They are aware of the time and cost that have gone into the rebuilds and extensions to the systems, the new studios and controls for Channel 10, the company's interest and involvement in establishing a proper cable apprenticeship through the department of labor that has benefitted all cable systems in British Columbia.—James R. McAvoy, Business Manager, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local230.

Bus Driver

Pertaining to Max Low's article March 17, Penny Harding and the Back Seat Driver, a Quick Route Change, I would like to now have my say, as the article was about me.

Max Low wanted an interview on bus driving. Fine. My personal life? No.

Mr. Low never got around to the subject of bus driving — he was too interested in why I had an unlisted phone number and why I didn't give out my address. He even went so far as to suggest I even have an "unlisted husband." These things have nothing to do with my job as a bus driver.

Mr. Low stated in his column that "the world couldn't care less what my address and phone number were." If Mr. Low felt that way, then why did he make such ludicrous assumptions such as I was "living in a cloak and dagger world all my own" and some rubbish about spies and microfilm?

I feel it is my privilege to whom I give out personal information. There are many people in this city who exercise this privilege as I do. As for having an "unlisted husband," do I? I wonder where Mr. Low gets his information. Also, what possible business or interest is it to him? As a private citizen I feel that I have the right to keep my personal life personal, without supposition in print by a complete stranger.

Therefore I feel Mr. Low owes me an apology and a retraction of statements made by him of me personally and printed in this paper.—Penny Harding, Victoria.

A Prober Turns the Tables on Ralph Nader

By ELLEN ROSEMAN
The Globe and Mail

WASHINGTON — It is now 10 years since General Motors put a detective on the tail of an obscure lawyer who had written a critical book on automobile design called Unsafe at Any Speed.

In the decade since Ralph Nader settled his suit against GM for $425,000 and leaped into national prominence, the movement he launched has become a mini-conglomerate.

Nader earns at least $250,000 from writing and speaking engagements, while his fund-raising group, Public Citizen Inc., brings in an annual $1.2 million, mostly in contributions of $15 apiece.

His Nader-franchise public interest research groups at 145 colleges and universities (including the University of Waterloo, McMaster in Hamilton and another one in the works at the University of Western Ontario in London) generate another $1 million a year.

And he has written or co-authored 40 full-length books on subjects as diverse as vanishing air and Vietnam veterans, working with a staff of 50 to 60 in satellite offices.

Vetoed by Ford

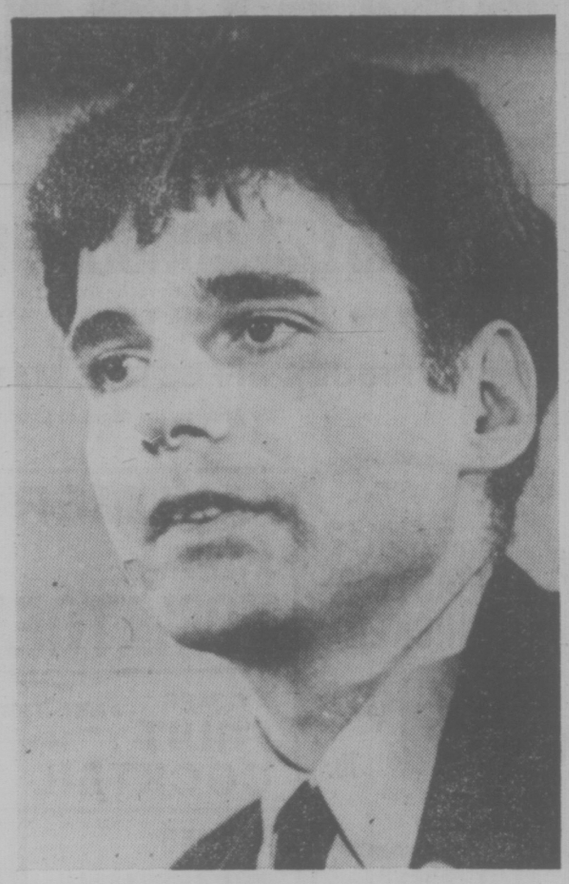
Interviewed in his downtown Washington fifth-floor office, Nader literally bounces with enthusiasm about the prospects for his movement, despite recent legislative setbacks.

President Gerald Ford has vetoed or threatened to veto much consumer-oriented legislation; in particular a plan to set up a consumer advocate within the federal bureaucracy.

"I'm the last one to say something is rosier than it is and I think the consumer movement will expand like crazy as soon as we get a president who doesn't veto everything," he said, pacing around the room with almost radioactive nervous energy.

But two blocks away from Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law, New Republic managing editor David Sanford sprawls in an armchair and says Nader's moment in history has already passed.

"Ralph Nader is a media celebrity. He chit-chats on the Johnny Carson show, he's a co-host on the Mike Douglas show, he's even been roasted by Dean Martin," Sanford says.



NADER . . . chips out of the myth

"But the public tires quickly of celebrities and they'll start getting disillusioned about him in the same way as they did with John F. Kennedy and J. Edgar Hoover."

If disillusionment does set in, Mr. Sanford may help speed it along with a book he is publishing this June called Me and Ralph: Is Nader Safe for America?

In his book, Sanford spews out accusations about Nader like a vacuum cleaner in reverse. He compares Nader to former President Richard Nixon in his fondness for secrecy, his paranoia and outright rejection of criticism.

Sanford, 32, is no conventional hatchetman. A liberal Democrat, he has written widely about consumerism and supports many of the Naderist reforms.

But in the 10 years he's been watching Nader, first as the New Republic reporter who caught the GM hired detective in the act and later as one of the magazine's editors, he's grown to dislike many of the Naderist tactics.

For one thing, Sanford says, Nader won't document his personal finances even though he espouses full disclosure for others. It's part of the myth that he keeps $5,000 a year to live on and turns over the other $245,000 to his groups. But who's to know if it's true — least of all the students Nader gets to work for him in the summer for $100 a week.

Same Standards?

Nader responds that Henry Ford doesn't have to disclose his personal wealth either. And why should Nader's corporate enemies know what his resources are?

But Sanford says Nader has set himself up as "a paragon of virtue and a common scold" and that means applying the same standards to himself as to anyone else in the public eye.

Chipping away at another corner of the myth, Sanford asks what basis there is to believe Nader really lives in an $85-a-month rented room. Neighbors will testify that he hangs his hat in a house in an affluent Washington neighborhood which his brother (according to the deed) paid $80,000 for in 1971.

Sanford says Nader is also not above tampering with the truth to suit his own purposes. He cites testimony by Lowell Dodge, former director of the Nader Center for Auto Safety and now a government lawyer.

Dodge wrote the first draft of a 1972 book called Small on Safety: The Designed-In Dangers of the Volkswagen. Nader thought the book's conclusion was too wishy-washy, so while Dodge was away on vacation, he rewrote the conclusion to read: "The Volkswagen is the most hazardous car in use in significant numbers in the United States today."

Dodge felt the evidence didn't support such a strong conclusion and told Sanford he has felt guilty about it ever since.

Another example of Nader's questionable tactics, says Sanford, is the way he finances his campus groups.

The student groups get the budget to hire a professional staff through a checkoff system in which $5 of each student's fees is automatically deducted. Students who don't support the group have to line up to get a refund, and some universities subtract five to 15 per cent of the money as a handling fee.

Some university administrations have been pressured into accepting the checkoff system when Nader organizers have presented them with petitions of support signed by more than 50 per cent of the student body, Sanford says.

"On some college campuses the pressure works on the boards of trustees and on others they haven't been successful. The conservative Young Americans for Freedom have been actively opposing this pressure tactic."

Sanford compares the checkoff to the technique used by book and record clubs, which send you a selection automatically every month unless you write and say you don't want it. It's a technique that thrives on people's apathy and laziness, and Nader deplores it in other circumstances.

But Nader uses the checkoff system for his campus groups, Sanford argues, because that way he can get 80 to 90 per cent of the students to join. At a Washington, D.C., campus where the contribution is not automatic, often only 10 per cent of students give.

Sanford says the media have fallen under Nader's spell and are afraid to criticize him because it might do damage to the consumer movement.

"But I'm tired of the notion that reporters should go after Richard Nixon and leave Ralph Nader alone. Ralph Nader has gotten away with a lot in 10 years. It seems to me that's long enough for arrogance on the loose."

'Personal vendetta'

Naturally, Nader has his own ideas on why Sanford is saying these nasty things about him.

"He has a personal vendetta against me because I wouldn't let him co-author my syndicated column. He also wrote about my ideas on no-fault insurance and had to retract part of the article because it wasn't true," he says.

Nader calls Sanford "an intellectual coward" because he didn't approach him for an interview even though his office is a few blocks away. He says he's spoken to Sanford maybe two hours in the past nine years.

Sanford, for his part, replies that anyone who disagrees with Nader is said to have a personal vendetta. He did call Nader for an interview, he says, but his call went unanswered.

Nader disagrees that the consumer movement is fading. He thinks it's just about to flower. As he talks, he races in and out of the room bringing back literature on all his pet ideas.

His vision is of a kind of decentralized socialism in which the workers own the factories and the consumers own the retail stores. It's a contrast to the early days when he simply let the facts speak for themselves on unsafe cars or poisonous chemicals. Now he talks about structural issues such as breaking down the giant corporations and getting government in touch with people.

Wants More Co-Ops

Some components of the Nader vision:

—Economically, he'd like to see the creation of a consumer co-operative bank that would help finance co-op grocery stores, repair shops and so on. He supports federal chartering of corporations to make them more accountable, stronger anti-trust legislation, and a scheme to make public utilities serve as fund-raising agents for opponents of rate increases.

—Legally, he'd like to see a loosening of the rules on class actions, which allow consumers to sue as a group against business. He also argues that government should pay legal fees for citizens or groups that want to sue government and can't afford to do it.

—Politically, he'd like to see an institutionalized consumer advocacy agency to plead the consumers' cause at regulatory hearings. He also supports a system in which a prescribed number of citizens can petition for submission of proposed laws directly to the voters.

The ideas are interesting but abstract and, as Mr. Nader admits, not the kind of thing that always turns on large audiences or television reporters.

As for Sanford, he thinks Nader has become a "hopeless visionary."

"He foresees a society in which people will move to small towns, stop driving their cars and start building windmills from Heathkits in their back yards. The petrochemical industry will be closed down because it's unsafe and ordinary people will all turn into grass roots activists. I just don't see it," he says.

WOMEN CAN'T FIND EMPLOYMENT

Work for Welfare: Where are jobs?

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Reasonable people have no quarrel with the Ontario government's principle, stated in this month's Speech from the Throne, that people who have the opportunity to work won't get welfare.

Welfare recipients themselves, with rare exceptions, would be among the first to say that they'd rather work. It doesn't just save the taxpayer money; it gives human beings a sense of dignity and self-worth and lets them make productive contributions to society. Since men and women both feel this way, there's nothing radical about applying the principle to women as well as men.

One wonders, though, whether the government, and especially Social Services Minister James Taylor, are being realistic in applying the principle at a time of high unemployment.

What's one to make, for example, of Taylor's remarks that in families dependent on a welfare cheque "perhaps an older son might go to work," and where a mother on welfare is raising children alone and has special qualifications as a teacher or a nurse she could easily be working?

The facts are that last December nearly half the 697,000 Canadians who were out of work were between the ages of 14 and 24. In Ontario in that same month, the general unemployment rate was 6.1 per cent, but for young people it was almost 10 per cent. And provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough has said that unemployment in Ontario is going to increase this year because he foresees a decline in investment by business and industry.

As for teachers and nurses, surely Taylor knows that because of hospital bed closings, nurses are being laid off? Scarcely a climate in which a mother on welfare, qualified as a nurse, if indeed there are such, can go out and find a job.

Nor has there been an overwhelming demand for teachers. School boards across the province are having to restrain their spending, too, and enrolments are dropping. It's more likely there'll be fewer, not more, jobs for teachers.

Taylor also glossed over the very real difficulty facing women with children who want to go to work and who actually find jobs. Such women — unless their children are all teenagers — need day care. "We've got 50,000 (day care) places," Taylor said. So he has — but they're all occupied and he's not keen on adding many more.

The reality of a welfare mother's search for employment was put best in a letter from a group of such women in Ottawa to the Canada Manpower department:

"We want positions where we can pay for day care or babysitting fees for our children; pay our own OHIP, pay for our drugs, pay our own dental care fees, pay our own optician fees and glasses; with enough money left to pay rent, hydro, telephone, groceries, our children's and our own clothing.

". . . If you can't find us decent jobs, we might as well stay at home and collect welfare, unemployment insurance or mother's allowance cheques and look after our children by ourselves. Mothers don't come cheap. Help us and we'll help the government."

That's the real task for the Ontario government — not to get lazy people off the welfare rolls, but to create a climate of economic development and growth so that worthwhile, rewarding jobs are available for the able-bodied men, women and young people who need them.

The Screen that Roars

russell baker

- Nightmares by a roaring television screen:

I am wandering in the desolate wilds of the American stomach. It is located at the southern extremity of the American esophagus, and it would be harder to imagine a more forlorn place. Stomach acid sloshes about at all hours. The entire landscape is obscured by impenetrable vapors, which I instantly recognize as the notorious "stomach gas."

From far above I hear the esophagus shouting to the stomach. "Potato chip with cheese dip coming down!" it cries. The stomach groans furiously. In an instant there is a thunderous roar overhead. Potato chip and cheese dip shoot through the gas like meteors from blackest space and plunge into the acid.

Then, without warning, a drenching torrent pours down upon me. The stomach snarls in rage at the esophagus. "Why didn't you warn me this bum was about to drink half a martini?" it cries, "I'll fix him."

In a murderous act of treachery, the stomach produces a dense mass of stomach gas and forces it back up the esophagus. I am caught in the updraft and am forced up, up, up, until I am wedged right under the breastbone. There, trapped, I hear the esophagus calling again. "Brace yourself down there! A whole anchovy coming down!"

Looking up, I see a gigantic salted fish plummeting upon me. I struggle to race back down the esophagus, but my feet are stuck in cheese dip, and the anchovy is gaining rapidly. . .

I am jolted briefly into blessed wakefulness, then doze again. I have retained a baby sitter named Mrs. Marsh for the evening. She has brought a huge suitcase containing toothpaste, toothbrushes, sticks of chalk, glasses filled with dyed water and a Thompson submachine gun, which she is pointing at me with one hand while dipping chalk into dyed water with the other.

She is determined not to let me go out to the movies until she has showed me how deeply her toothpaste will penetrate the enamel of my children's teeth. She is demonstrating with the chalk sticks. Sure enough, the dye is turning the chalk bright hues all the way through.

"You wouldn't do that to my children's teeth!" I am pleading. She cackles insanely, "Hah!" I cry. "Your toothpaste may penetrate chalk, but chalk isn't tooth enamel!" Mrs. Marsh fires a burst of machine-gun fire over my head to remind me to keep my hands up.

"My toothpaste," she gloats, "will penetrate anything. Look!" And she rubs it on the televison set, which turns bright purple.

Is there nothing I can do to stop her mad plot? One thing, she tells me. If I agree to stay home and sit with her until midnight while she demonstrates her toothpaste's penetrating power on the Queen Anne chairs. . .

I open my eyes and close them again, then reopen them wide because, standing right there before me, is my blue pinstripe suit. It is in an ugly mood. "I've got something to tell you stupid," says the suit.

"What's holding you up?" I ask. "Do you have the invisible man inside?"

"I wish I did," says the suit. "He's probably got enough sense to realize a man needs twice as much protection."

"Where do you talk from?" I ask the suit. "Your voice seems to be coming from your right pocket, but I don't see the flap moving."

The suit says it has not come here to talk about suit anatomy. "Well, flip off then," I say. "I don't hold with wool that talks."

The suit makes a terrifying grimace with its left lapel and calls for reinforcements. In an instant, I am surrounded by angry clothing—sweaters, underpants, socks—all prancing around the room and jabbering furiously. I swing a right hook at a pair of socks, and miss, and in the next moment the clothes have all leaped on me and are about to break my arm, when I awake.

Breathing heavily, I lumber off to bed and put out the light. There is a stranger in the room. I demand to know what he is doing there. He says he is looking for the washing machine so he can surprise me next time I do the sheets by showing me a soap that gets white things twice as white. I lead him to the cellar. He thanks me. On the stairs I am mugged and robbed of all my vacation cash. When I get back to bed Karl Malden tells me always to carry traveler's cheques.

Deadly Tussle in Lebanon

Times News Services

LEBANON — Rival militia and army units today battled for control of Beirut and strategic sectors of Mt. Lebanon in one of the deadliest days of Lebanon's civil war. Moslem leftist forces shelled the palace of holdout President Suleiman Franjieh.

There were reports that Franjieh, resisting strong pressure to resign, planned to seek foreign military intervention to keep the tide of battle from sweeping closer to his beleaguered palace.

Fierce artillery, tank and corner-to-corner machine gun duels in Beirut and its surrounding area claimed more than 200 dead and 500 wounded in the past 24 hours — one of the highest daily tolls of the 11-month-long civil war.

An attempt by Syrian negotiators to arrange a truce fell through when leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt refused to meet with them, saying he was "too busy" directing the fighting in the Mt. Lebanon region.

Elsewhere on Middle East issues, the United States told the UN security council Tuesday that Israeli settlements in the occupied Arab territories damage the chances for peace in the Middle East.

In the first public U.S. attack on the Israeli practice of establishing Jewish settlements in the Jordanian West Bank, the Golan Heights and the Sinai Desert, the new American ambassador, William Scranton, charged that "unilateral acts such as civilian population transfers have been taken which serve to inflame emotions on both sides."

He indicated that the U.S. would support a resolution by the council demanding that Israel put an end to actions that change the status quo in the territories.

U.S. officials expected the Scranton statement to upset the Israelis. Washington has in the past indicated privately to Israel its opposition to the establishment of settlements in the occupied areas, but it never has articulated this position in public.

Tuesday's statement came on the second day of the council debate on demonstrations by Arabs in Jerusalem and the West Bank. The meeting was called by Pakistan and Libya, on the initiative of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Arabs were preparing a resolution condemning "desecration of holy places" in Jerusalem, expropriation of Arab lands, the establishment of settlements, and other measures designed to change the status of Jerusalem and other occupied territories.

Meanwhile, in Hebron, on the Israeli-occupied West Bank, Israeli troops returned Tuesday and resumed security patrols after a new outbreak of disorders.

El Alamein Hero, Monty Dead at 88

ISINGTON, England (AP) — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, Britain's top field commander in the Second World War and considered by many the greatest British military leader since the Duke of Wellington, died early today after many months of failing health.

At 88, Montgomery was one of the last surviving commanders of the war against Nazi Germany and not many of the others escaped his biting criticism. He died at his home in this Hampshire County hamlet 50 miles southwest of London.

The defence ministry said because Montgomery was a Knights of Garter, his funeral will be held in St. George's Chapel, in Windsor Castle, with full military honors. The date was not immediately announced.

The cause of death also was not announced. But Montgomery had been confined to his bed for some time, and his son David said last weekend: "He is an old man, and he's very tired."

A peppery, austere soldier who carried a Bible on his campaigns and neither drank, smoked nor used profanity, Montgomery turned the tide of the Nazi advance with his victory in 1942 over Field Marshal Erwin Rommel at El Alamein, in the Egyptian desert. He followed this with a 2,000-mile sweep to Tunis which in three months drove the Germans and Italians from North Africa.

Wearing a jaunty black beret, "Monty" had a flair for publicity and filled the British need for a hero at a time of severe war pressure at home.

Explaining later his success in Africa, he wrote: "The soldiery gave of their best. The 8th Army developed a crusading spirit and the soldiers began to think it was invincible. My only fear was that I might fail these magnificent men."

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander, had his disagreements with Montgomery but still praised him as "one of the greatest soldiers of the war, a figure who will live always not only in British but in world history."

In memoirs published in 1958, Montgomery criticized Eisenhower's leadership in the closing phases of the war and in the post-war period.

After Africa, Montgomery fought in the U.S.-led campaigns of Sicily and Italy and criticized the conduct of both.

The 1st Canadian Division was part of Monty's 8th Army in the Sicily campaign and in Italy, where it was joined by the Canadian 5th Division. On the western front, the 1st Canadian Army formed part of his 21st Army Group.

For the Normandy landing in 1944, Montgomery commanded all British and U.S. ground forces. Six months later, Eisenhower chose him to command the U.S. 1st and 9th armies, the British 2nd Army and the Canadian 1st Division with orders to push back the German bulge against the U.S. 1st Army in the Ardennes Forest of Belgium.

Field Marshal Karl von Rundstedt's offensive was beaten back four days later.

Montgomery accepted on behalf of the Allies the first Instrument of Surrender from the Nazi command in which all German forces in northwest Germany, the Netherlands and Denmark gave up. This was on May 5, 1945, two days before the final surrender to all the Allies at Reims, France.

Knighted during the war, Montgomery was made a viscount in the first New Year's honors list after the end of the war. He took the title Viscount Montgomery of Alamein in honor of first great victory.

In post-war service, he was chief of the Imperial General Staff from 1946 to 1948 and then spent seven years as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's deputy commander in Europe. He retired from active duty in 1968 — after 50 years of service, the longest continuous duty for a British officer since the war office was set up in 1855.

In retirement, he continued to make headlines. After the collapse of the British-French invasion of the Suez in 1956, he accused Eisenhower, then president of the United States, of "sabotaging" his former allies. He drew Italian protests by writing in his memoirs that Italy's change of sides in the Second World War was "the biggest double-cross in history."

He visited China in 1960 and 1961 and advised the West to establish friendly relations with Peking. He visited South Africa and was accused of being an apologist for apartheid.

"I refuse to become a cabbage," he said as he neared 77, and in his history of warfare, published when he was 80, turned his critical pen to Julius Caesar and Napoleon.

In his last years, he lived quietly in his tiny Hampshire village.

Born Bernard Law Montgomery in London on Nov. 17, 1887, he was the son of Rt. Rev. H. H. Montgomery, a bishop of the Anglican church. His father wanted him to become a clergyman, but he insisted on becoming a soldier.

In the First World War he was wounded twice, mentioned in dispatches six times for gallantry and won the Distinguished Service Order and the French Croix de Guerre.

A few months before his 40th birthday in 1927, Montgomery married Betty Carver, a widow with two sons. David was born in 1928.

Mrs. Montgomery did not live to see her husband's greatest triumphs. In the autumn of 1937 she died of an infection that developed from an insect bite.

Banks May Drop Mortgage Line

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal government's new tight money policies may force the banks right out of the mortgage business, R. J. Kayser, chairman of the British Columbia Branch of the Canadian Bankers' Association, said today.

"This is not something we want to do but we may be forced into it," he said in an interview.

"We have only so much money to loan. Under present conditions we may have to back out of the mortgage market completely."

Kayser said the Bank of Canada has taken action to restrict the amount of money in circulation as part of its fight against inflation.

He said that, as a Canadian, he supports the bank's action but it is putting pressure on the Canadian banking system.

"There is a bidding war on for short-term money, no question about it. There is a shortage of funds and as money gets tight we will have to re-examine our priorities."

Most of the bank's funds are directed to commercial and industrial loans in large amounts.

Interest rates have soared to near-record levels for short-term funds. They could move slightly higher because of the scramble for funds.

Some banks are offering depositors 9.75 per cent for one-year deposits, a figure that is forcing trust companies to raise their rates to remain competitive.

Kayser said all short-term rates would be under pressure for the next few months but the banking system was hopeful that mortgage rates would hold at the present level of 12 per cent.

He said there appears to be public resistance to rates higher than 12 per cent and this might keep the rate from moving upwards.

While all interest rates are under pressure, most of the effects should be felt among short-term loans and deposits, Kayser said. He did not expect any dramatic change in the current rates and consumers could expect to see some easing in interest rates in the last half of this year.

In the meantime, there was no doubt there is a bidding war for funds.

In Victoria, Alan Aldous, manager of Royal Trust, said he would be surprised if the banks pulled out of the mortgage field completely but the trust companies would have a sufficient supply of money to handle the demand if the banks stopped issuing mortgage loans.

"In the mortgage market our philosophy is to always be there. As far as we are concerned there is no shortage of funds for the mortgage market.

"There are dangers, however, if the interest rate goes beyond 12 per cent."

Aldous said that every fraction of a point that mortgage interest rates rise means that a number of people no longer qualify for housing loans.

Mortgage payments are geared to a person's income and if monthly payments rise, many people suddenly find they no longer qualify.

Therefore, an increase above 12 per cent represents a physical barrier as well as a psychological barrier to mortgage loans.

"Increases in the mortgage rates become self-defeating. Fewer people can afford mortgages and therefore they can not buy a house. This has widespread effects throughout the economy."

business

Texasgulf

Texasgulf Inc. reports 1975 earnings dropped to $103,224,000 or $3.37 a share from $147,300,000 or $4.83 a year in 1974.

Sales dropped to $444,645,000 from $568,526,000 and, working capital slipped to $186,508,000 from $192,035,000.

Board chairman Charles Fogarty said in the annual report that production operations were good throughout 1975 with most facilities running at nearly full capacity, including sulpher, oil, gas, potash and ore production at the company's mine at Kidd Creek, Ont.

The Kidd Creek zinc plant operated at an average of 75 per cent of capacity.

Fogarty said the excess of production over sales resulted in an increase of product inventory value to a total of $139,460,000, nearly double that of 1974. Earnings were down in 1975 for metals, phosphates and potash and up for sulpher, oil and gas.

He added that sales should improve in 1976 "if the slow but apparently steady recovery worldwide in consunfing industries continues."

Seaboard

Seaboard Life Insurance Co. reports total revenue for 1975 was up 29 per cent to $9.3 million from $7.2 million in 1974.

Seaboard's net earnings were $556,994 or $1.04 a share in 1975, compared with $156,588 or 29 cents a share in 1974.

Total assets amounted to $14.8 million at Dec. 31, 1975, up from $11.1 million the year before.

Shareholders were told in the annual report that the estimated value of insurance on the company's books increased during the year by more than $700,000.

Cornat

Cornat Industries Limited reports revenues of $118,213,000 for 1975, compared with restated earnings in 1974 of $111,324,000.

In an interim year end report, the company said net earnings for the year totalled $6,030,000 compared with $7,274,000 for 1974 after allowing for preferred share dividends.

Earnings per average common share amounted to $1.17 compared with $1.49 for the same period in 1974, the report said.

The report said a change in recognizing profits in ship construction from a completed contract basis to a percentage of completion basis increased net earnings for the current year by $631,704.

The company's 1975 annual report will be forwarded to shareholders in the first week of April.

CZ

Lower profits in 1975 led to a sharp decline in return on equity for Crown Zellerbach Limited, the forests products company said in its annual report.

Return on equity dropped to 7.8 per cent from 12.2 per cent in 1974.

Earlier the company reported a 34-per-cent decline in net profit to $13.3 million.

The company attributed the showing to a faltering world economy and poor markets.

These conditions were aggravated by a labor dispute in British Columbia, the report said.

New labor agreements will add substantially to the industry's cost structure, the company said, adding: "They can only be offset by increased productivity if the industry's ability to compete in world markets is to remain unimpaired."

Turner

Turner Valley Holdings Ltd. of Calgary reports net earnings of $65,131 for the six-month period ended Dec. 31, 1975, compared with $23,004 for the corresponding period in 1974.

The company's holdings include Baker and Kirby Ltd., a wholesale dry goods subsidiary, T and T Auto Ltd., Calgary Honda Auto Ltd. and A-1 Rentals.

Thomson

Thomson Newspapers Ltd. reports net income for the year ended Dec. 31 of $35,154,596 or 69.7 cents a share compared with $29,707,466 or 58.6 cents a share for 1974.

Net sales were $199,257,996 compared with $175,396,106 in 1974.

The company spent about $8,500,000 last year on expansion, including new plants and equipment.

Villacentres

Villacentres Ltd., a Calgary-based company operating nursing homes and hotels in Canada, reports net earnigs of $1,558,903 or 62 cents per share for 1975, up from net earnings of $1,075,719 or 43 cents per share for 1974.

Grouse

Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd. reports a net loss of $78,607 or three cents a share for the five-month period ending Oct. 31, 1975. Revenue was $990,330.

The company changed its fiscal year-end in 1975 from May 31 and no comparable five-month audited figures were available. It says the latest five-month period covers Grouse Mountain's summer operation only with revenue limited to skyride, dining and gift shop sales but not including skiing income.

For the year ended May 31, 1975, net earnings were $151,270 or five cents a share and revenues were $4,166,952.

Dupont Shelves Polyethylene Plant Plans

RED DEER (CP) — Du Pont Canada Ltd. has announced it is shelving plans to build a $150-million polyethylene plant near here.

D. F. Brown of Calgary, Du Pont's western manager, said the company will not renew options held on more than 1,300 acres of land. One option expired last Friday and the other will expire in early April.

The company had announced last fall that it was delaying construction because of market conditions. The plant would have used feedstock from an Alberta gas ethylene plant in the area of manufacture high-density polyethylene, which is used for plastic products.

"It's a matter of the lack of an export market for the surplus product until the Canadian market catches up," Brown said.

"The market requirement for such a plant still is estimated to be a number of years in the future."

He said it would not make economic sense to hold the land in case there is a "distant need" for the plant.

Bob Dowling, Alberta's business development minister, said the decision merely reaffirms the company's earlier plans and "causes us no concern."

"Even if the petrochemical industry did not move ahead definitely it would not be a major detriment to the economy of Alberta.

"A petrochemcial industry is not the be-all and end-all. It's just a major attempt to deversify Alberta's economic base."

Opposition leader Bob Clark said the announcement "indicates a lack of confidence in government."

need skilled labour?

why not grow your own?

Even in the face of high rates of unemployment, many jobs are going unfilled for want of qualified labour.
Some of these jobs could be filled by trainees. To encourage this, Canada Manpower can assist employers to develop training programs and will share in wages and training costs. These programs are designed to take part of the cost pressure off employers who are prepared to train new workers, including apprentices.
There are also training programs to encourage employers who will retrain and upgrade existing staff to prepare them for promotion and to achieve higher production levels.

Ex-Octopus Wrestler Now Content to Look

SEATTLE (AP) — Bill High, 1963 world champion octopus wrestler, says he thinks the state has stretched its tentacles too far in a law prohibiting harassment of the ugly eight-armed creatures.

The 42-year-old federal marine biologist says the fisheries department regulation prevents the average scuba diver from observing or posing for photographs with a favorite octopus.

The only way to get an octopus in the open is to ferret it out in some fashion from hiding — sometimes with irritating chemicals — usually in a way prohibited by law.

"I used to be a real wrestler back in the old days," said High. "But now, I like to just go down and look at them and photograph them."

That, he said, is what the "average Joe Blow or Jane Blow scuba diver wants too. They're interested in how the creature lives."

The new fisheries regulation to a $1,000 fine and one year makes it a gross misdemeanor, punishable by un in jail, to "molest" or "harass" an octopus.

State fisheries director Donald Moos said there "are known areas of Puget Sound where the octopus population has been reduced due to the activity of divers."

He said there is evidence that when the octa-armed mollusks are treated poorly by scuba divers, they "often die afterwards."

But High, a biologist with the national marine fisheries service, said divers these days "have changed their approach from being a predator to being an observer."

He has studied octopus and other sea life for 19 years.

High said the largest octopus in the world appear in northwest waters, with a centre of abundance in Puget Sound and off the coast of British Columbia.

He personally has documented one octopus weighing 90 pounds, with an arm span of 17 feet, and has a record of a 125-pound creature with a probable arm span of 18 to 23 feet.

"A Canadian diver — Jock McLean — claims to have captured an octopus weighing 600 pounds, with an arm spread of 32 feet, in 1959," said High.

Asked if he believed the Canadian's story, High said: "If I didn't, I'd have to call him a liar, and I'm not ready to call him a liar."

High said very little commercial octopus harvesting goes on in the United States, although it is a major food source in Japan. Since 1965, between 24,000 and 41,000 pounds of octopus were caught annually in Washington waters.

High said he has documented one case in which a pair of diving acquaintances were attacked by some octopi.

"But as soon as they (the octopi) realized what they had gotten hold of, they were no longer interested," said High.

"It was a case of mistaken identity. They thought the men were something to eat and very quickly realized they weren't."

High said he never has heard of an instance where a diver was attacked without provocation.

"In every case of attack, the diver was the aggressor," he said. "The biggest danger is an unsuspecting diver getting hold of one and thinking about having some fun with it. They are tremendously strong under water. And they can use eight arms when you only have two."

High said the creatures will wrap their arms around a human if frightened, "in an attempt to escape, and almost without exception, when you let go, they will too."

INDIAN LAND, RIGHTS 'MOST PRESSING'

The British Columbia Human Rights Commission has urged the provincial government to make the Indian land claims problem and native rights in general its most pressing priority.

In the commission's first report, tabled in the legislature Tuesday night, the commissioners said their efforts had been seriously hampered by lack of staff.

The commission urged the government to press ahead with attempts to find a just settlement for Indian land claims and not limit their efforts and solutions to single tribes "or adopt a piecemeal approach."

It also urged that in searchinb for solutions the government "take into account the broader, deper issues which affect the future and very survival of Indians in British Columbia."

The commission was mildly critical of governments, past and present, for failing to make "progress regarding equal employment opportunities in the public service."

The government was urged to quickly endorse a policy eliminating discrimination on the basis of sex and provide an example the private sector might follow.

The commission also wants the government to tighten regulations governing landlords "to prevent the denial of rental accommodation without reasonable cause."

The Social Credit government has eliminated the advisory committee checking on discrimination in schools. The commission says it would like to see a similar commission instituted to advise teachers and students on the ills of sex and race discrimination.

The report says the commission has accomplished much, but has also been "severely handicaped in its efforts to fulfill its functions by the lack of staff."

It says the commission could not implement many ideas and proposals because of the staff deficiency. It recommends the hiring of two full-time staff members with the equal abilities of human rights officers.

B.C. Attempting To Block PWA

The B.C. government has moved to try to prevent Pacific Western Airlines from moving its head office facilities from Vancouver to Alberta.

An application to the Canadian Transport Commission requests the agency restrain PWA from moving its head office and maintenance facilities and staff to Edmonton and Calgary.

The move announced to the legislature Tuesday by Transport Minister Jack Davis won the immediate approval of all three opposition parties.

If PWA does relocate it would mean a loss of almost 400 jobs in B.C.

Davis explained that B.C.'s position is that PWA's plans to move its facilities to Alberta would be uneconomic as well as being against B.C.'s best interests in terms of jobs.

In a more general sense, B.C. will oppose the takeover of PWA by the Alberta government to ensure the province does not use the airline purely as its own economic tool.

In a letter to CTC chairman E. J. Benson, Davis said a judicial ruling recentlly allowed that the commission may review the 1975 takeover of PWA by the Alberta government since the province should be treated as an ordinary citizen.

"We urge you to undertake such a review at the earliest possible opportunity," wrote Davis.

"Pending completion of this review, and in the interests of all of Western Canada, including Alberta, we request you instruct PWA to leave its head office in Vancouver and to continue to operate its principal maintenance base at the Vancouver International Airport."

If the airline is unwilling to reconsider transfer of personnel and facilities or does not convince the commission of its commitment to "balanced regional development," said Davis, B.C. would have no alternative but to oppose Alberta's takeover of PWA.

Davis quoted Alberta Transport Minister Hugh Horner in the Alberta Hansard as saying the province acquired the airline "so that we could look after the people of Alberta in a very real sense, look after the transportation of goods and strengthen our position in northern development."

The province should not be able to use the airline for its own development, said Davis, calling such actions "anti-West."

Leaders of all three opposition parties rose in the house after Davis' announcement and said they were also concerned about the effects on B.C. of PWA's plans and supported the government's move.

Women's Issue Test Flunked By Cabinet

B.C.'s cabinet ministers didn't fare well this week when their views on women came under the scrutiny of some experts.

The women's Rally for Action at the legislature included lobbying with each MLA and the women kept a huge score board recording and rating the remarks of B.C.'s elected politicians.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm appears to have come out the worst. Without comment, the women recorded his remarks as:

"If they (women) want to weld, fine, but I don't think you should discourage them from cooking. Women make the best cooks and housekeepers and I think they should be encouraged in that role."

Vander Zalm apparently said he didn't believe there was sex discrimination in schools, adding: "My son took cooking and I thought he was crazy."

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips didn't appear much better in the women's eyes. They reported he said:

"I'm a women's libber, but change has to take place slowly . . . you've got a good cause, but don't ruin it by being too demanding."

Asked about funding of women's centres, the women said Phillips replied that they shouldn't get funds: "People should look after themselves."

Philips was apparenty not aware of the office of the coordinator of the status of women closed by the Social Credit government.

"I didn't know the office existed until the women start screaming about it."

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy was described as "evasive and defensive" by the women who said she told them she hadn't seen any discrimination in the public service.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis was rated as "slightly sympathatic . . . but ignorant of women's issues."

Education Minister Pat McGeer was quoted as saying sexism in schools was "not really a serious problem."

The women were obviously unhappy with Health Minister Bob McClelland's remarks and they noted he was unaware of the difference between women's centres and transition houses. They said he was unprepared to consider licensing of mid-wives.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe was also dubbed evasive and the women said he didn't seem to take them seriously.

Environment Minister Jim Neilsen was reported being opposed to funding of status of women offices, apparently because everyone is equal and the women therefore don't need any special offices.

Consumer Services Minister Raif Mair apparently told the women he saw himself as "open-minded" but the women rated him rather as "non-commital."

Forestry Appointment

Vancouver forester Robert Wood has been given a six-month appointment with the provincial government as technical consultant on forestry matters.

The appointment, which carries the status of a deputy minister's job, was announced today by Forests Minister Tom Waterland.

He begins as a consultant on April 1.

GUNPOINT RAPE CHARGES SOON?

A 23-year-old Victoria area man has been questioned about a gunpoint rape in Sidney last week and a charge may be laid soon, Sidney RCMP said today.

A police spokesman said a 22-year-old woman was driving out the Patricia Bay Highway to Sidney late March 16 when she stopped at McKenzie to pick up a hitch-hiker. The man asked her to drive him to the Cole Bay area west of Sidney.

The car stopped where a main road meets the beach and the man pointed a gun at the woman. She tried to run but was caught after a chase of about 100 feet, dragged to the beach and raped.

The man let the woman go. She ran back to her car and drove to a friend's home nearby to call police. She was later checked at hospital and released.

Police said they had questioned a man who was arrested three days later in the Sidney area and was held in custody on another matter.

They added that investigators had determined the weapon used in the incident was a starting pistol.

Phoenix Festival Culminates the Year at UVic

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The Phoenix Festival, an annual event for theatre and music students culminating the year's activities, is under way at the University of Victoria. It occupies three weekends.

The title is derived from the make-do, converted hut-theatre that has served the university's theatrical needs since UVic's establishment on the Gordon Head campus.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday there will be a program of two short plays. Spiders, by Australian playwright Ron Hamilton, broadly described as a "black comedy", is directed by Corinne James as a graduating exercise. Theatre students Gysbertus Timmermans, Ken Murdoch and Linda Lawson are in the cast.

Jean Cocteau's The Human Voice, a tour de force for one actress, is the second piece on the program.

It is being directed by Barbara Shaw, who is working toward her master of fine arts degree at UVic. Rochelle Dubetz is playing the demanding dramatic role that has attracted some of the world's best actresses.

The festival opened with two performances of two short comic operas by the music department in collaboration with the theatre.

Students Jane MacKenzie, Catherine Lewis, Michael Eckford and Zdenek Tomas made up the casts. They were remarkable for the natural beauty of their vocal equipment and the skill and technical ease with which they handled their roles.

Wolf-Ferrari's early 20th century opera, Suzanne's Secret, was particularly well set, costumed and directed by a team consisting of Wendy Dawson, Dawn McCaugherty and director Peter Winn.

Competently acted by singers Lewis and Tomas, and by David Sawchuck as a mute servant, and well accompanied (if a little strongly at times) by a UVic chamber orchestra conducted by George Corwin, this was high entertainment as well as delightful art.

Arrangement of the orchestra, off stage but visible behind draped arches was a most effective compromise with the space-squeeze.

The 18th century intermezzo, Drusilla e Strabone, while quite beautifully sung, showed less ease and style in the acting.

Because the actors were brought off-stage quite often to play at a point mid-way in the auditorium, audience seated in the lower half lost a good deal of the effect.

The opera was charmingly accompanied by musical director Gordana Lazarevich at the harpsichord with string players Michael Whitn, Colin Miles and Gary Russell. Stage director was Dale Read with set design by Wendy Dawson.

Concluding event comes April 1-4, and will consist of Tennessee Williams' recent and little known play, Small Craft Warnings. Director is student Joanne Luke Krempasky, who is doing graduate work at UVic. The play is her master's thesis.

More Research Funding Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Government funding for scientific research is at a dangerously low level and should be returned to the rate of four years ago, the chairman of the Science Council of Canada said Tuesday.

Josef Kates said that research funding as a percentage of gross national product (GNP) has been falling since 1972, when it was about one per cent.

He said that even four years ago the council was calling for an increase to 2½ per cent, but with the anti-inflation program this now is unrealistic.

"But it would be very, very dangerous to let it fall," he said.

Kates said the council will outline its position soon before the senate science committee chaired by Sen. Maurice Lamontagne of Quebec.

He said when severe cutbacks occur, "fundamentally you are losing research teams."

YM-YWCA OUT TO RAISE $1,350,000

The YM-YWCA will soon move into full gear to raise $1,350,000 for its expansion program, retiring president Shirley Baker told the annual meeting of the association at the groups annual meeting.

Citizens are being recruited to raise funds to meet the critical need for space, equipment and other resources, she said.

"We must acheive our goal to enable the Y to continue its services on a sound economic base," she said.

She observed that a group of 78 people, mostly all connected with the Y, have already raised among themselves 10 per cent of the required amount.

The association elected Henning Norgaard as its new president.

Other officers elected were Mary Simmons, vice-president; Alan Patterson, treasurer; Gwen Lundy, Bob Wallace, Cam Spratt and Olive Hatter, members-at-large.

More than 100 people attended the meeting.

The new president, Norgaard, presented Mrs. Baker with a plaque in appreciation of her two year's service as president.

Student's Sweet Reason Softens McGeer Jab

max low

One wet morning recently, a rather damp young man stood on the side of the road near Shawnigan Lake and waved his thumb toward Victoria.

I stopped my car. And he was grateful as he shook off the raindrops and clambered inside.

He was running a little late for classes at the University of Victoria.

Now, to one who commutes daily but has a reasonably reliable conveyance, that seems one hell of a hit-or-miss way of getting to one's desk.

But the young man didn't seem too concerned.

"Most days I have a regular ride," he said. "When I don't, I hitch."

Like many students, most of whom live a lot closer to the university though, he's a victim of the massive rate increases imposed by the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia. Taking advantage of a low rent offer, he moved to a cabin by the lake a month or so before the new rates were announced. But, because he couldn't meet the high premium for a driver under 25, he has been forced to take his car off the road.

That was it. I started to boil. It is always the have-nots, the poor and those struggling to get an education who suffer from such massive rate increases and from cutbacks in government spending on other programs.

A quick check at UVic showed that there, too, (Just like the two Lower Mainland universities) the number of students taking cars has dropped considerably since the new rates came in. Many parking tickets have not been re-issued; a lot of spaces stand empty.

I even found out that about 30 out-of-town students were caught with their insurance policies down. When they weren't able to get their cars home in time and then couldn't meet the new rates, their vehicles were left stranded on campus. Authorities asked the police to let them remain there without ticketing them until the end of the semester.

Ah, I thought. There's a ready-made chance for a hostile column. Another good opportunity to stick some more in McGeer's Ear (though I fear that either there isn't any more room or both ears have been sealed closed for some time).

Then I met Alistair Palmer and I cooled off.

Alistair is the 22-year-old president of the UVic Alma Mater Society and he doesn't hold the radical views often attributed to students. In fact, he thinks far too many students are radicals and expect too much.

"We don't even pay taxes so why should we expect everything when we don't pay into the piggy bank?" he asks.

On ICBC, Palmer says there was some resentment over the rates at first.

"But it (the increase) wasn't aimed at students," he adds. "We are just caught in it — and that's too bad."

Palmer doesn't drive a car.

"Although I've got a prime parking spot out there if I want it," he laughs.

And he would like to see more and more students join him as non-drivers.

Many students are already riding their bicycles or forming car pools and Palmer, together with Dean Trevor Matthews, dean of administration, has been meeting B.C. Hydro officials to try to get an improved bus service for students by September.

UVic has already got the okay to build a terminal, complete with seats and a shelter, and a loop for the buses to turn around, behind the Student Union Building. It now has to get the funding approved.

Also aimed at are an extended bus route to and from the university taking in South Oak Bay (where a survey shows many students live and where there is no route at present); and the implementation of a bus-pass system.

The idea, although not yet approved by the transit people, is that UVic would issue the passes (probably for one semester), collect the money from the students and then give it to Hydro. Palmer says it could serve as a pilot project for Victoria, and if it works, might be extended to other groups or individuals.

This bid for better buses has been on the go at UVic for two or three years but Palmer feels it has been given impetus because of today's economic conditions.

"It's going to be a very grim summer with higher ICBC rates, gas probably rising to $1 a gallon, and a cutback in students' summer work programs," he warns. "The crunch will come in September when students will realize their car is an expense they just can't afford."

That though doesn't bother Palmer. As he says:

"We want to discourage as many cars as possible because we don't want to blacktop the whole campus."

But he wants to be ready in September with something else to offer.

"I feel the government and its agencies have got to show some good faith," he says. "I think the students are ready to take the bus but it's got to be made attractive for them."

"ICBC was an issue," Palmer admits. "But people are accepting it now.

"Let's get down to the alternatives ... that's what I say."

City Budget: All Bad News

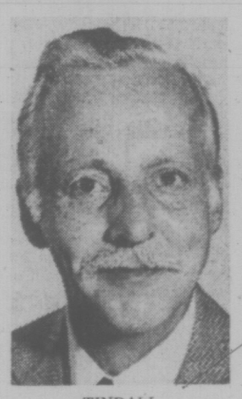
By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Despite several weeks of rigorous budget-cutting by city council, and a few more still ahead, Victoria's taxpayers face nothing but bad news in the form of a 1976 mill rate increase of at least seven mills, or around 15 per cent.

That was the indication today as the city's elected representatives entered the final round of their fight against row upon row of expenditure estimates.

With a number of unknown factors still clouding the picture — notably the provisions of the provincial budget to be presented Friday — no one is prepared to make any guesses as to what the actual mill rate increase will be.

But finance committee chairman Ald. Bill Tindall said today, following council's latest budget-trimming session Tuesday: "I am hoping that we are going to be able to stay within a maximum of a seven-mill increase, and even that is horrendous when you think of it in terms of dollars and cents."



TINDALL
. . . "horrendous"

Last year's mill rate was 43.65 so if the aldermen's reckoning is correct the 1976 rate will be in the region of 50 mills.

About the only consolation would be that it's less than the 55-mill level projected after the provisional $38.4 million budget was first presented last January.

Tindall said unless the provincial budget contains some relief for municipalities it's doubtful if council can come close to even the seven-mill increase, however.

"The alternative would be to say that we are going to have no more than, say, a six-mill increase over last year, and then go back and agonize over the whole thing again until we have cut back to that level," he said.

In other words, council might have to set an arbitrary increase which it felt taxpayers could live with, and then cut the services and expenditures to fit.

Tindall said all committee chairmen on council have been diligent in striving for the maximum possible economies within the departments for which they are responsible.

But one of the major difficulties confronting council is the fact that the budget reflects costs over which it has little or no control: The requirements of the Greater Victoria school board, Capital Regional District, B.C. Assessment Authority and other agencies.

City departmental estimates scrutinized by council to date total about $25.7 million, and from this sum the weekly caucus sessions have succeeded in cutting about $1.3 million — or a little more than five mills.

Still awaiting consideration over the next two weeks are the individual budgets for parks and recreation, totalling another $5.2 million.

Once the preliminary pruning process is completed and provincial budget details are known, the city comptroller's staff will present revised budget data including an estimate of the required mill rate.

And then, if the financial picture is still as gloomy as present trends indicate, the cutting and snipping will probably start all over again.

Vice-Regal Welcome

Forty-six new Canadians from 19 countries were presented certificates by Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen when he made a special visit to Victoria citizenship court Tuesday. Getting handshake from vice-regal visitor is Bernadette Mertens, who hails from Sweden, while Swiss candidate Margaretha Nordine, Judge Norman L. Oreck and family and friends look on. Citizenship ceremonies are held monthly in city and are followed by tea parties put on by the Canadian Women's Citizenship Council.

Ask The Times

Q. What pension did W. A. C. Bennett receive from the provincial government for his years of service? S.G.L.

A. That is confidential information, according to the provincial superannuation branch. However, the Times works it out to about $20,000 per year, based upon the pension formula, which is public information. The formula awards Bennett three per cent of his typical salary as premier for every year in the post. His typical salary, based upon another formula, was about $28,000. He was premier 20 years, so he would earn 60 per cent of $28,000 or $16,800. In addition, he would be entitled to three per cent of his typical salary as MLA for each year up to a maximum of 24 years. His typical MLA indemnity was about $5,000 per year and his pension from that source would be 72 per cent (three times 24) of $5,000 or $3,600. Together that comes to $20,400, which should be very close to the actual figure.

No Classes Next Week

All Victoria area public schools close for the spring break when classes end this Friday.

Schools re-open on the morning of Monday, April 5.

Good Friday (April 16) and Easter Monday (April 19) are also school holidays.

Q. I have heard that there is a firm in Ontario which specializes in the collection and sale of discontinued lines of good chinaware. My Spode pattern has been discontinued and I would like to know the address of this concern, if it exists. M.D.J.

A. There is such a firm but an even closer one is in Edmonton. Write Mrs. Joyce Gourdine, The China Cupboard, 11432 42nd Avenue, Edmonton.

TWO STUDENTS KILLED AT LANGFORD

Residents Protest Death Alley

Langford Lake residents are considering another appeal to the provincial highways department against hazardous conditions along part of Goldstream Avenue where two students were killed Tuesday in a collision with a loaded grain truck.

Colwood RCMP said the driver of the car Ronald Cruickshank, 16, of 965 Weaver, was killed in the crash in the 1100-block at 4 p.m. Passenger Mary Sullivan, 15, of 2780 Spencer, died at Victoria General Hospital at 4:55 p.m.

Truck driver Derk Vriezen, 21, of Duncan, employed by Buckerfield's Feeds, received minor injuries, was treated at Victoria General and released.

The victims were students at Belmont-Fisher Secondary School.

John McIlree, 1161 Goldstream, chairman of Langford Lake Improvement District Association, said previous efforts to have the highways department restrict speed along the former Island Highway bordering the lakeshore had been ignored.

"Speed is a real serious factor along there," McIlree said, although he did not attribute Tuesday's fatalities to speed.

The accident did point to the need for more traffic control in a confined residential area with no sidewalks, numerous uncontrolled accesses and limited parking that encourages some residents to leave vehicles projecting onto the pavement.

Police said the accident occurred at the intersection of Goldstream and an access road at the south end of Langford Lake.

Sgt. Jim Williams, head of Colwood traffic division, said Cruickshank must have seen the oncoming southbound truck as he pulled out of the access road, but the car was struck broadside and spun.

The truck apparently continued across Goldstream, but the impact sheared its metal grain bin from its mounts and the chassis continued through a ditch on the east side without overturning.

A long aluminum grain auger was dislodged from the top of the bin during the impact and as the car swerved out of control the auger penetrated the rear window and continued through the car's interior to emerge through the passenger side of the windshield.

"We sit in our houses and hear the tires scream and wait for the bang," McIlree said, referring to the common occurrence of cars and trucks rounding two curves and a hill near the south end of the lake.

The deaths Tuesday bring to three the road fatalities on the last curve before Leigh Road within 18 months. Two other cars have gone over the bank into private yards, one of them McIlree's, which drops about 20 feet from the road.

The resident said drivers ignore the posted 35 m.p.h. speed limit.

"It's just plain hell along here," said Benjamin Tennyson, 1217 Goldstream.

Cars, campers, semi-trailer transports and gravel trucks alike barrel along the avenue with impunity, Tennyson said. Vibration from the traffic has weakened a steel reinforced retaining wall at his property and complaints so far had proven useless.

"I've stood there (at the roadside) flabbergasted. It's unbelieveable. You have to see it. If there was a radar set up, there wouldn't be a person who wouldn't be taken," Tennyson declared.

"People won't take a walk any more," added neighbor John McLean, 1225 Goldstream. "You take your life in your hands."

BARRIERS TO BE LIFTED FOR JAIL INTERVIEWS

Victoria police board today agreed to alter proposed changes to the interviewing procedures at the city jail by disallowing the installation of bars on a window separating lawyers form prisoners in the interview room.

The action came after a three-man delegation from the Victoria Bar Association appeared before the board and argued that having bars separating lawyer from client would be a contravention of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Chief Jack Gregory had proposed the bars as a means of tightening security, which he said was essential in view of recent incidents in provincial jails.

David Wilson, spokesman for the lawyers, said "that sort of situation (the bars) is absolutely unacceptable."

"An accused has a right to see his lawyer face to face and instruct him confidentially . . . and that means the same room and in such a way he doesn't feel any pressure or intimidation."

The proposed changes suggested by police involved taking a couple of large interview rooms divided down the centre by a wall with an opening in the middle for an interview desk. The accused would sit in one room, the lawyer in the other, with a 32-inch by 22-inch window separating them.

Gregory said the changes were being made because of security problems and congestion in jail cells, where interviews have been held in the past.

"It got to the stage where you couldn't tell the lawyers from the prisoners," the chief said.

Board member Jeane Watchuk said allowing lawyers face-to-face interviews with their clients was "pretty basic, affecting the whole criminal justice system."

She understood the concerns of the police to protect people and provide security but felt it was also incumbent upon them to protect age-old common law rights.

Wilson said he had spoken to the attorney-general's department which had advised him that "the accused person has the right to meet his own lawyer without impingements."

"You mean an open jail?" Gregory queried.

"No, I'm not suggesting that," Wilson replied.

The board agreed to use of a plexiglass window between the rooms when they were being used for meetings between prisoners and family members.

UNDER THE DOME

UVic's Astral World Soon to Expand

A permanent tenant resides under the dome at University of Victoria's Elliott Building for the first time in a decade.

Weighing in around three tons, the new fixture is an astral telescope with 20-inch reflector, which arrived on campus late last Friday after being on order more than a year.

The instrument is the optimum size which can be accommodated by the dome, a part of the original construction of the science building in 1964-65, but which has not been put to its best use with smaller telescopes provided for astronomy courses in the physics department.

Associate professor Dr. Colin Scarfe said the $43,600 telescope will enrich the bachelor, master and doctorate programs in astronomy and be put to a variety of uses by undergraduate and graduate students in astronomy, and research fellows or faculty, totalling 120-130 persons a year.

One of few research quality telescopes manufactured in Canada, the 20-inch model was made by Lorenz Scientific Co., of Toronto.

The largest telescope previously in use at UVic was a 12-inch reflecting type, with only about one-third the light-gathering power of the new instrument.

Scarfe said the 20-inch reflector would allow the observation of more distant stars because of its greater collecting area, besides affording the operator more control in following astral objects.

It is made with precision gears driven by an electric motor and governed by electronic controls.

Its movement is not synchronized with the sky dome opening as is often the case in larger observatories such as the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain.

Major component of the new telescope is its base casting, which accounts for most of the total weight.

A new observing floor was required under the dome, which carpenters finished Tuesday, and all parts of the telescope were expected to be fitted by next week.

Scarfe said some auxiliary equipment will be needed to allow the instrument to be used properly. This will include an astral camera, a photometer or spectrograph, some of which may be assembled by the physics department.

When assembled, the telescope will stand about 10 feet high fully elevated, with a tube some 6½ feet long.

The Solution: Keep Talking

Faced with deciding on the relative merits of a heritage house and a heritage tree, Victoria city council opted Tuesday to make no decision at all but merely to try talking itself out of the dilemma.

The house in question, at 913 Burdett, is valued by heritage enthusiasts as a prime example of the building skills of pioneer Sam McClure.

It's owned by the Sisters of St. Ann, and council was told Tuesday they want it moved because they have no use for it and they're afraid it will become a heavy tax burden.

A Victoria West resident has an option to buy the home and move it to that location, but the problem is that a fine old boulevard tree stands right in the way.

Either the tree would have to come down or, if it was preserved, the home would have to stay where it was until the demolition crews set to work.

"I guess it comes down to which is worth more — a heritage house or a heritage tree," commented Ald. John Hayes.

"Someone has to sit in the role of Solomon and make a judgment," agreed planning director Geoff Greenhalgh.

But rather than do that, Mayor Mike Young suggested city officials contact the Sisters to see if there is any way the house can be retained in its present location without posing a financial problem.

Walton Sparks Canucks

By The Canadian Press

New York Islanders' coach Al Arbour wasn't saying much about Vancouver Canucks Tuesday night.

And he didn't want to talk about the Islanders' 7-2 National Hockey League loss to the Canucks.

So general manager Bill Torrey summed up the situation.

"We bring out the best in them and they bring out the sleepiest in us," Torrey said.

Arbour was in Philadelphia last weekk, getting a good look at the Canucks, trying to figure out a way to beat them. He felt the scouting was a good idea, but he didn't figure on the addition of Mike Walton to the Vancouver lineup between Don Lever and Rick Blight.

The line clicked for three goals in the first period and the hometown Canucks were never behind.

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers and Minnesota North Stars played to a 3-3 tie in Bloomington, Minn., and at Landover, Md., Washington Capitals and Kansas City Scouts tied 5-5.

Torrey was furious about two disallowed goals in the first period.

"They said the net was off its moorings on the first goal, but all I knew is that it (the puck) hit both posts and went in. On the second goal, they said Clark Gillies kicked it in. I don't know how you can shoot it and kick it at the same time. That would be quite a feat."

Walton fired his third and fourth goals of the season since joining the Canucks from the now-defunct Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association. Lever, Garry Monahan and Gerry O'Flahery had the others.

Dennis Potvin and Billy MacMillan countered for the Islanders, outshot 29-25 in the game.

Bill Hogaboam's second goal of the game with 2:27 remaining gave Minnesota the tie.

Earlier in the game, Reggie Leach shot his 56th and 57th goals of the season for the Flyers, who had taken a 3-2 lead at 9:36 of the final period on a long shot from the blue line by Don Saleski. Larry Goodenough picked up assists on all three Philadelphia goals.

Minnesota was forced to come back three times to tie the score, the first time at 1-1 on a goal by Doug Hicks in the first period with two Flyer serving penalties.

In the battle of division cellar-dwellers who will be off playing each other in a four-game tour of Japan when the Stanley Cup playoffs are underway, Jack Lynch's goal on a 50-foot slapshot enabled the Capitals to at least tie the Scouts.

The Caps, who earlier this season tied the NHL record for 25 straight winless games, fell behind 4-0 before rallying with three goals at the start of the third period.

Lynch's goal followed markers by Bob Sirois, Blair Stewart, Tony White and Garnett Bailey.

Chuck Arnason scored twice for Kansas City while Robin Burns, Dennis Patterson and Craig Patrick had the others.

Tonight, New York Rangers play in Buffalo, the Islanders visit Los Angeles, Chicago plays at home to Atlanta, Toronto goes to Montreal, the Caps are in Detroit, Boston visits Pittsburgh and the Scouts are at home to the North Stars.

Nationals, Past and Present, Could Hold Key to Hoop Crown

National and ex-national players will be the key figures to watch when the Canadian men's basketball championships take place this weekend at the McKinnon gymnasium at the University of Victoria.

And there will be a flock of them here for the four-team, round-robin tournament that will begin with two games Friday night, at 7 and 9.

Of the four teams competing — Halifax Budget-Rent-A-Car, representing the Atlantic Conference; Windsor Thompson Sports Centre of the Central Conference, Winnipeg St. Andrews Super Saints of the Prairie Conference and Victoria's own Scorpions of the Mountain Conference — Winnipeg appears to have a lock on most of the national players, before and now.

The Super Saints, defending champions, are led by present national team member Bob Town and also have in their lineup ex-national team members Ted Stoesz, who played in the 1971 Pan-American Games, Angus Burr and Ross Wedlake.

Another veteran with the Saints is Hymie Fox, generally acknowledged as the team floor leader.

Town hit for 30 points in the Prairie Conference final game against Saskatoon Huskies as the Saints won convincingly, 111-65. The Saints shot 50 per cent from the floor in the first half and 64 per cent in the second half. Wedlake and Fox each scored 16 points in the win.

Two of the better-known national players for Windsor are Mike Frisby and Phil Goggins while Budget-Rent-A-Car can also call on a pair, John Cassidy and Mickey Fox.

Brian Heaney, a coach of the women't national team and Acadia University, is also with the Atlantic champions.

For Victoria Scorpions, Derek Sankey, who was picked up from Vancouver A's following completion of the B.C. tournament, is the only national player.

Sankey was the most-valuable player in the Dogwood Basketball League this season and also in the Mountain Conference playoff against Raymond Union Jacks.

Scorpions defeated Vancouver A's two games to one in the B.C. final and eliminated Raymond in straight games in the Mountain Conference challenge series. Scorpions needed overtime to get by Raymond, 95-93, in the opener, but won the second game easily, 100-84.

It will be the first appearance in the national men's final for a Victoria team since the Dominoes won the Canadian championship in 1946.

The series format calls for a round-robin tournament with two games each day. Should there be a tie at the end of the final game in wins and losses, points for and against will decide the winner.

On Friday night, Windsor will meet Winnipeg in the tournament opener at 7 p.m. with Victoria Scorpions clashing with Halifax in the feature game at 9 p.m.

Saturday, Winnipeg will play Halifax at 7 p.m., with Windsor going against the Scorpions at 9 p.m.; and on Sunday Windsor will meet Halifax at 10 a.m. and Winnipeg will play the Scorpions at 1 p.m..

Murdoch Takes Aim At WCHL Goal Mark

MEDICINE HAT — Don Murdoch broke his own team record and stepped a little closer to the Western Canada Hockey League scoring mark by scoring three goals while guiding Medicine Hat Tigers to a 6-2 decision ovr Victoria Cougars before 3,540 fans here Tuesday night.

Murdoch's three goals raised his season's total to 84, two over his team record set as a rookie last year and six less than the league record of 90 set by Ron Chipperfield of Brandon Wheat Kings during the 1973-74 season.

Medicine Hat has four regular-season games remaining.

The loss leaves Cougars with only one game in hand over Brandon Wheat Kings, who they lead by one point in the battle for fifth place.

Murdoch scored two unanswered goals in the first period before Gregg Anderson and Lorry Gloeckner connected during the first half of the second period to tie things up for Victoria.

Gary Benson fired a goal at 10:01 of the second that put Tigers ahead to stay.

Rookie Ron Areshenkoff blasted in two goals and Murchoch added his other as Medicine Hat dominated the final frame.

Cougars played without Archie Henderson and Don Johnson, who were sitting out one-game suspensions for match penalties drawn during Saturday's bame against Edmonton Oil Kings, and Gregg Tebutt, still under indefinite suspension.

Medicine Hat fired 30 shots at starting netminder Dan Rogers and Murray Bannerman, who played most of the third period. Ken Holland faced 27 shots on the Tiger net.

Victoria has three games remaining in the regular schedule. They play in Lethbridge tonight and Friday before returning home for another encounter with the Tigers on Saturday.

In the only other game Tuesday, Kelly Ferner and Dave Hatheway scored two goals each while leading Kamloops Chiefs to a 4-1 decision over visiting Oil Kings.

Rosi Adds to Laurels With Giant Slalom Win

HUNTER MOUNTAIN, N.Y. (AP) — Rosi Mittermaier, making perhaps her last official appearance as an amateur skier, won the women's giant slalom Tuesday at the Nation's World Series of Skiing.

The 25-year-old West German, wearing the pants she tore on a flag at Mont Ste. Anne, Que., last week, snaked down the course in one minutes 19.58 seconds, edging Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein, who clocked 1:19.75.

Miss Mittermaier was 1976 World Cup Women's champion, and double gold medal winner at the winter Olympic Games in Innsbruck, Austria, last month.

Following Miss Wenzel was Fabienne Serrate of France in 1:20.33, Irene Epple of West Germany in 1:21.21 and Lise-Marie Morerod of Switzerland, the World Cup giant slalom champion, in 1:21.92.

The victory by Miss Mittermaier, coupled with the fourth-place finish of Miss Epple, set up a duel in this team competition between the West Germans and the Swiss.

In the men's giant slalom, Heini Hemmi of Switzerland finished first in 2:29.69 for two runs and team-mate Ernst Good was fourth in 2:31.28. Their finishes and the seventh-place finish of Peter Luescher gave Switzerland 15 points in this competition.

The first- and fourth-place finishes for the West German woman gave their team 13 points.

Points were awarded to the first eight finishers in the men's and women's giant slalom Tuesday. The same format will be followed today in the men's and women's slalom. Points also will be assigned to the top finishers in the head-to-head parallel slalom Thursday, when the series winds up.

Miss Morerod picked up foru pionts, increasing the Swiss team total for the day to 19 points.

Abbi Fisher of the United States clocked 1:22.65 for seventh place, followed by eighth place by American Jamie Kurlander in 1:22.69.

Willie Frommelt of Liechtenstein finished second in the men's giant slalom in 2:30.74, followed by Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark, the World Cup overall champion, in 2:31.15; Good; West Germany's Albert Burger in 2:32.14, and Italian Piero Gros in 2:32.55.

NHL Sets Playoff Network

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Hockey League has established its own television network for coverage of Stanley Cup playoff games, Don Ruck, vice-president of the league, said Monday.

Coverage will begin at the quarter-finial stages of the playoffs wit ha Game of the Week telecast. When the playoffs reach the final round the NHL network will televise all games in prime time.

The NHL network was put together by the league for the recent series involving two teams from the Soviet Union and showed four of the eight games during that tour on a regional hookup. The playoff coverage will be more national in scope, Ruck said.

Mariner Purchase Settled

Vancouver-born millionaire Peter Graham said that agreement "in principle" had been reached for his group of investors to buy San Diego Mariners of the World Hockey Association.

Last week Mariner owner Joe Schwartz of Baltimore forfeited the team by missing a payroll but Tuesday the Mariner players voted to continue the season as a team in order to preserve hockey in San Diego.

Graham, operator of the Sports Arena where the Mariners have played since moving from New Jersey two years ago, said "We hope to finalize it within the next seven days."

Connelly Spices Crusade In Ranks of Uneasy East

By The Canadian Press

A fallen Saint has joined Cleveland's crusade and now is threatening to change the course of history in the East Division of the World Hockey Association.

Wayne Connelly, who lost his halo when Minnesota Fighting Saints folded earlier this year, showed Tuesday night that he's still ready for a scrap or two, scoring all the Crusaders goals on the way to a 3-1 triumph over Quebec Nordiques.

In other games, Toronto Toros defeated Calgary Cowboys 6-5 in overtime and Indianapolis Racers and San Diego Mariners fought to an 8-8 tie.

"We're going to win this division," said Connelly of the uneasy East, where all four clubs are bunched within three points with Cleveland and New England Whalers deadlocked for first place at 69 points.

But Connelly said "we're going to go out there and take it from here" after firing two power-play goals and popping an empty-net shot for good measure as the Crusaders became the first East Division team to take two points from the Nordiques in Quebec City this season.

Connelly, a 38-goal man with Minnesota last year, said his physical conditioning deteriorated with team morale in St. Paul as the franchise died, but he appeared in fine form against Quebec, breaking a scoreless tie with an unassisted power-play goal midway through the second period and pushing the lead to 2-0 at 9:43 of the third in another man-advantage situation.

The Nordiques, who dominated play in the scoreless, penalty-free first period, finally penetrated a sturdy Cleveland defence and pulled within a goal when Curt Brackenbury scored at 16:40.

But when Quebec coach Jean-Guy Gendron yanked netminder Richard Brodeur for an extra attacker with 50 seconds left in regulation time, Connelly lofted a shot from the blue line into the gaping goal for his 27th score of the year and second three-goal performance. The other came with Minnesota.

Peter Marrin scored after 1:32 of overtime at Toronto, knocking in Lou Nistico's rebound, to move the Toros within four points of the fourth and final playoff position in the Canadian Division.

Toronto has 51 points, four behind Edmonton Oilers, who have played two games more.

SAN DIEGO (8) — Kevin Devine (19th), Joe Noris (27th), John French (23rd, 24th), Alex Tidev (16th), Norm Ferguson (33rd, 34th), Kevin Morrison (21st). Attendance: 3937.

Shift to Calgary

REGINA (CP) — The head office of the Western Canada Hockey League will be moved to Calgary from Saskatoon at the end of the current hockey season, it was announced Tuesday.

Del Wilson, chairman of the league's board of governors, said the decision to move was made at a meeting in Saskatoon Monday.

He said the recent decision by Saskatoon city council to close the arena there following violence during a game between Victoria Cougars and Saskatoon Blades probably had some owners concerned, but "this is certainly not the basic reason the office is being moved."

"The majority of the owners felt that Calgary is probably more central and offers easier accessibility for travel in and out," he said in a statement.

Time Limit Set For Messersmith

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ted Turner, owner of Atlanta Braves, said Tuesday he has informed pitcher Andy Messersmith's agent that "our offer to Messersmith will be withdrawn within the next few days if we haven't received a decision from him."

Turner said: "I told his agent I saw in the Atlanta paper where Messersmith wanted to go with a contender. I consider us a contender. And if I don't hear from him soon, our offer will be withdrawn."

Herb Osmond, Messersmith's agent, said the right-hander, who won 19 games with Los Angeles Dodgers last season and now is a free agent, would make a decision by next week.

Turner was first in line when Messersmith, a two-time 20-game winner, was officially declared a free agent last Tuesday.

The Braves contract offer has not been revealed.

25 Horses Die in Fire

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (UPI) — At least 25 thoroughbred horses were destroyed in a wind-swept fire that raced thr ugh two large stables at the Narragansett Park track, officials said Tuesday.

Workers combed piles of charred rubble searching for dead horses trapped in the fire that erupted Monday.

George Jay Meets Fairburn

Defending-champion George Jay and Fairburn will clash in the final of the Greater Victoria elementary school boys' basketball championship after posting semi-final victories Tuesday.

George Jay advanced with a 43-22 romp over Lakehill while Fairburn gained a berth with a 32-26 decision over Sir James Douglas.

The championship game is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Thursday at Colquitz Junior High School.

Talks Continue

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations resumed today in baseball's continuing labor impasse with time no longer a major factor in talks between the owners' player relations committee and the Major League Players' Association.

When commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered spring training camps opened last week, ending a 17-day shutdown, he ensured the orderly start of the regular season and eased the calendar pressure on the two sides.

The next real deadline is October, when 160 unsigned major leaguers will become free agents under terms of the decision by an arbitrator which was upheld by two federal courts.

Viking Ace Pursues Soccer Scoring Lead

Danny Lomas of UVic Vikings, who has scored an incredible 15 goals in the past six matches, will be trying to close the gap further on scoring leader Rudi Kuebler of Cosmopolitan Royals when the two premier division clubs meet tonight at 7:30 in a Vancouver Island Soccer League match at Royal Athletic Park.

Kuebler leads the league with 21 goals and Lomas is runner-up with 18.

Including tonight's game, Royals have two matches remaining in the regular season to Vikings' three.

League spokesman Dave Unwin said this will be the first of a series of regular Wednesday night matches.

Olympic Coach

CALGARY (CP) — Boris Bajin of Toronto has been named head coach of the Canadian women's gymnastics team for this summer's Olympic Games.

Former coach of Yugoslavian women's team, Bajin has directed the Canadian women's gymnastics program since 1973.

SYLVIA'S RECORD FALLS

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet speedskater Galina Stepanskaya broke her own world record in the 3,000-metre event Tuesday with a time of four minutes 31.00 seconds, Tass reported.

Stepanskaya, Olympic gold medallist in the 1,500 metres at Innsbruck, clipped 9.59 seconds off her former record in the long distance race at the Medeo rink at Kazakhstan.

Stepanskaya had raced the 3,000 metres at Medeo in 4:40.59 on March 16.

The Soviet also broke the four-event over-all time record held by Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg with 173.811 points, Tass added. Burka's record for the four events had been 176.486.

Soviet and Norwegian reports say skaters have broken 10 world records in the last week at the high-altitude Medeo rink.

Stepanskaya was competing in the Soviet national championships.

RARE DEFEAT on women's tennis circuit was suffered Tuesday by Chris Evert (above), who had 20-match winning streak snapped when she lost 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 decision to Australian Dianne Fromholtz in $75,000 indoor event at Boston. Also upset Tuesday was Olga Morozova of Soviet Union, who lost to American Mona Guerant.

Pickell Enters Meet

Steven Pickell of Vancouver, who was the over-all individual champion during the national meet at Brantford, Ont., in February, is expected to be among the outstanding entries competing in the B.C. winter short-course swimming championships starting Friday at Crystal Pool.

The meet opens at 5:30 p.m. with long-distance timed finals and continues with heats beginning at 10:30 a.m. Saturday and Sunday as well as 8:30 a.m. Monday. Finals have been scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and 5:30 p.m. Monday.

Among the outstanding local entries will be Rob Grundison, a senior competitor from Victoria Amateur Swim Club, and clubmate Blake Grealy, who is in the 10-and-under age bracket.

Others include seniors Judy Newman and Doug Portelance, Bruce Kelly (11 and 12) and Wendy Boellard (10 and under) from Juan de Fuca Cohos.

Disastrous Day Dazes MacDuff

DULUTH, Minn. (CP) — It was a disastrous day for Canada, shaking up Jack MacDuff's rink which appeared to be in a daze after losing two games in a row at the World Curling Championship Tuesday.

"We couldn't pick up draw weight at all," said the skip who dropped into a four-way tie for fourth place after losing 8-5 to Benjt Cederwall's Swedish foursome in the fourth round.

Mearswhile, while MacDuff was having his troubles, Bruce Roberts of the United States was sailing along with a 4-0 record after a 10-2 win over Kristian Soerum of Norway in the evening and a 10-5 triumph over Adolph Aerni of Switzerland in the third round.

"It seemed heavier (the ice) on the outside," MacDuff said. "There was one rock we threw; it was hogged five times."

"I don't know, we had trouble all night trying to get it into the house. I've never seen ice that I didn't have any idea about before now. It's heavier on the sides, quicker down the middle and sometimes if you are going with the fall, it'll run quicker and if you're taking the big curl, it'll run slower."

The loss by MacDuff's St. John's, Nfld., rink in the evening round followed a 10-5 setback to Andre Tronc of France in afternoon play.

MacDuff, 26, was good on only 23 per cent of his shots in the fourth round as Sweden picked up three on the third end, stole two points on the seventh and one on the eighth.

Canada came up against a red-hot French rink in the third draw but MacDuff's foursome wasn't sharp and the Canadian skip admitted he was "terrible."

"We didn't have a very good game at all," said MacDuff, who won the Canadian men's title earlier this month with a 9-2 record.

MacDuff made it a first for a Canadian team when he lost his second in a row. The last time a Canadian entry lost two games in succession in one day was in 1961 when Hec Gervais of Alberta was the skip.

On that occasion, however, Gervais faced only two other opponents—Scotland and the U.S.—and he eventually won the title in what was called the Scotch Cup.

Entering today's fifth round, Sweden and defending champion Switzerland shared second place, both with 3-1 records. At 2-2 were Canada, Norway, France and William Muirhead of Scotland. Giuseppe dal Molin of Italy and Mickey Kanz of Germany were 1-3, followed by Ole Larsen of Denmark at 0-4.

The situation is not serious for Canada, which hasn't won the title since 1972. The Canadian rink still meets the U.S. and Switzerland in the round-robin portion of the tournament.

Wild River Legislation Deserves Prompt Passage

Some rambling notes along the trail:

I wonder whether the proposed Wild River legislation, which was slowly being pounded into shape under the former provincial government, is doomed to extinction in the pragmatic hands of our present administration? . . . It would be a pity . . . A lot of time and effort has already been spent laying the foundation for this all-important piece of protection for our rivers and streams . . . Nearly eight years have passed since the legislation was first proposed at the B.C. Wildlife Federation convention . . . And, during those years, many of the rivers in this province have slipped further down the path of environmental degradation . . . Others may be lost for all time.

Anyone thinking of heading northward this summer for a different type of vacation or planning a hunting or fishing trip along the little-known byways of northern B.C., Alberta, Yukon, Northwest Territories or Alaska should grab a copy of the 28th edition of The Milepost . . . This guide, which is chock-full of useful and offbeat information, costs only $6.75 and may be acquired through any local bookstore or by writing Hurtig Publishers, 10560 - 105 Street, Edmonton, Alberta, T5H 2W7 . . . The photographs are fantastic and, in addition to mile-by-mile information on every route through the north country, it provides special information of interest to fishermen, bicyclists, wild flower photographers, hikers and rock hounds . . . It also contains a great deal of useful information on the various railway and marine access routes — complete with schedules and costs . . . Most of the general information is geared to Americans entering Canada, but it can't detract from the impressive bulk of data which is useful to everyone.

Yours truly made a little boo-boo last week . . . the elk near Gold River now carrying a new radio collar is in the Ucona, not the Upana, drainage system . . . both rivers, which sound similar over a long-distance line, are tributaries of the Gold.

Charles White of Saltaire Publications dropped by the other day with a new gizmo he plans to market within the next few months — an electric hand-held hook sharpener . . . It should retail in the vicinity of $10 and could be included among the long list of non-essential but nevertheless handy additions to one's tackle box . . . He also passed along a tidbit of information gleaned through viewing the reaction of salmon to lures on an underwater television monitor . . . It seems that dodgers and flashers tend to make a salmon leary of the lure . . . rather than inspecting it at close range, like they've been seen to do on gear without a flasher, they tend to dart in quickly and snatch at the trailing bait or lure — carefully avoiding the swinging metal apparatus ahead of it . . . Maybe that's why they're effective.

John Rose and John Craig dominated prize-presentations during the recent Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association banquet . . . Rose collected the Melrose Cafe Trophy for the largest salmon caught during the year (37:08 pounds), captured a silver chinook button with a diamond in the eye for the same fish and picked up the Poodle Dog Cafe trophy for the highest aggregate of button salmon (four fish weighing a total of 111:12) . . . Craig won the George Burrows trophy for the largest coho (15:04), took a gold coho button with a diamond in the eye for the same fish and captured the aggregate Jim Creed Memorial Trophy, again for the single fish . . . Stephen Rose won the Ian May Trophy for the largest salmon caught by a junior (25:04) and the Capt. A. C. Crutchley Trophy for the largest coho caught by a junior (12:10) . . . Irene Wilkins topped women fishermen and captured the Brock Whitney Cup with a 20:07 catch and Marie Sidaway won the women's Rose's Jewelers Trophy for the largest coho (10:10) . . . Derby winners were Karl Leong (Membership Derby — 10:12), Margaret McKay (Sweetheart Derby—10:02), John Begg (Junior Derby—8:00), Fred Cull (Coho-Spring Derby—6:11 coho), Merv Nelson (Coho-Spring Derby—10:08 chinook) and Wayne Midlane (Executive Derby —8:07).

Rose also collected corresponding trophies for the same fish in the Chinook Club awards presentations, which were held in conjunction with the VSIAA banquet . . . Craig won the coho prize for his same lunker . . . Lil Walton captured the Ladies Trophy with an 18:10-pounder, Roddy Chow won the trophy for the heaviest salmon caught by a new member (16:10), Bob Redgrave received his trophy for winning the Dr. Hugh Clarke Derby (25:12) and Ross Rose collected a trophy for the largest salmon caught during the monthly Sunburn and Frostbite derbies (20:03).

Three Tied for Lead

VERNON — Although suffering his first defeat Tuesday, Bill Osborne of Qualicum was still in the hunt for the B.C. senior men's curling championship today following five rounds of action.

Osborne was defeated 9-6 by Tom McDonnell of Grand Forks. It was McDonnell's fourth win and gave him a share of the lead with Osborne and Lyle Reichert of New Westminster. McDonnell's only defeat came at the hands of defending champion Gordie Moore on Sunday.

Moore, meanwhile, suffered his second loss Tuesday when Osborne came through for a 10-9 extra-end victory. Osborne scored a big four on the ninth end to take a 9-6 lead but Moore came right back with a three on the 10th to force extra play. Moore slid through the rings on a final-rock draw attempt leaving Osborne counting a biter for the victory. Moore later defeated Harry Hackman of Summerland 12-2. His record is 3-2, the same as Hackman's.

Final two rounds of the championship will be played today.

Claremont Fourth

Claremont finished fourth in the Greater Victoria High School Badminton League by tripping Spectrum 18-2 in the final meeting of the season for both clubs.

Claremont won the boys' matches 7-2 and took both the girls' and mixed trussels by default because Spectrum doesn't have a girls' team.

Mt. Douglas "B" plays Parkland in the final game of the season Friday. They are no playoffs.

B.C. Retains Share of Lead

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — The field of leaders narrowed to two going into the seventh round of the Canadian mixed curling championship today as British Columbia and Saskatchewan emerged from Tuesday's play with five wins and one loss.

Manitoba, Ontario and Alberta, who had shared top spot with the two leaders after Monday's play, all dropped to 4-2 records.

Garnet Campbell of Avonlea, Sask., let Bob Dillon of Prince Edward Island take two in the first end but came back to win 4-3 for Saskatchewan's sixth-round win Tuesday night.

"They had us worried all game," said Campbell, who missed his first three shots of the contest but made points in the eighth, ninth and 10th ends.

Brian Rafuse, skipping the Nova Scotia rink from Bridgewater, drew to the button in an extra end to edge Andre Emond of Montreal 7-6.

Tony Eberts of British Columbia clobbered Calgary's Bernie Wylie 9-2 in nine ends and Ted Brown of Kingston handed Hal Tanasichuk's Winnipeg foursome a 9-7 loss, Manitoba's second in three games.

New Brunswick skip Roscoe Wilson had trouble with Metro Penziwol, edging his rink 6-5, and Wayne Hamilton of Newfoundland had an equally difficult time with Heinz Burki of the Territories, winning by 6-5 as well.

In the earlier games Tuesday, Manitoba downed Northern Ontario 11-4, B.C. defeated Newfoundland 5-3, Alberta beat Ontario 9-6, Quebec beat New Brunswick 9-6, Nova Scotia edged P.E.I. 7-6 and Saskatchewan defeated the Territories 5-3.

Alberta Foursome In Fifth Victory

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Hadie Manley of Alberta remained the only undefeated team Tuesday after five rounds of the Canadian senior women's curling championship as she came up with a hard-fought 8-6 win over Helen O'Donnell of Saskatoon, in fifth-round action.

Lois Lawrie of Markham, Ont., was in second place with four wins and one loss going into action today. Lawrie clipped Marion Porter's rink from Charlottetown 13-9 in the fifth round.

Tied for third place with 3-2 records were Ada Calles of Kimberley, B.C., Vi Pike of Grand Falls, Nfld., and Doreen Blair of Fredericton.

Calles needed an extra end to edge Pike's Newfoundland crew 10-9 in Tuesday's final round while Blair's crew dumped Isabel Park of Carman, Man., 8-4.

In other action in the fifth round, Peggy Bradshaw of Hudson, Heights, Que., stole a point in an extra end to drop Isabel Jackson of Halifax, 10-9, and Ontario downed Prince Edward Island, 11-9.

Quebec, Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia all had 2-3 records while Manitoba was next with a 1-4 mark and P.E.I. was still looking for its first victory after five attempts.

In fourth-round action earlier Tuesday, Alberta dropped Quebec, 9-5; Ontario whipped Saskatchewan, 11-5; Newfoundland edged Manitoba, 8-6; B.C. outscored Nova Scotia, 10-5, and New Brunswick whipped the host P.E.I. rink, 12-5.

Mutton Chops Are Out In Yanks' New Look

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Neatness counts, especially with George M. Steinbrenner, principal owner of New York Yankees.

His suspension from baseball lifted by commissioner Bowie Kuhn, Steinbrenner had become a highly visible figure in his American League ball club's spring training camp — both on the field and off.

When they arrived in the clubhouse for the first time, Yankee players found a list of regulations posted on the bulletin board. It called for no long hair, no muttonchops, no beards and no high stirrups on uniform socks. The order was signed by Steinbrenner and then re-endorsed by manager Billy Martin.

And just to prove that he was entirely behind his boss' war on hair, manager Martin shaved off his mustache.

No player was affected more by the hairy rules than outfielder Oscar Gamble, acquired over the winter from Cleveland Indians. Gamble owned the major leagues' most elaborate Afro, but left most of it on the floor of a local barber shop the first night he was in town. The price of the shearing — $30.

Other players who have dates with barbers' scissors are pitchers Jim (Catfish) Hunter and Sparky Lyle and catcher Thurman Munson. Last season, Munson grew a full beard but that is not acceptable under Steinbrenner's strict codes.

"I'm trying to impose a certain sense of order and discipline in the ball club because I think discipline is important to the athlete," explained Steinbrenner.

Apparently the Yankee boss is unconcerned with the success of some hairy ball players. Outfielders Reggie Jackson and Bill North of Oakland A's both wear full beards. Relief pitcher Mike Marshall of Los Angeles Dodgers favors muttonchops.

The Yankees so far have responded to the hair edicts in good nature. Outfielder Lou Piniella, who had his haircut last Friday, was ordered back for another trim.

Steinbrenner's appearances in the clubhouse have been greeted by calls of "Tenshun," and "At Ease," and one player posted a K.P. list for the week in a not-so subtle comment on the military atmosphere.

"They can joke about it, as long as they do it," said Steinbrenner. "If they don't do it, we'll try to find a way to accommodate them somewhere else."

BOWLER OF WEEK

Blazing finish has lifted Vera Gibbons into victory circle of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest for second straight year. Rolling in Breakfast Club League at Mayfair Lanes, Vera finished with 233 game after earlier tallies of 216 and 181 to wind up with series of 630 that gave her women's tenpin award in 23rd week of 13th annual competition.

Wild Scramble in NBA

By The Associated Press

The Pacific Division of the National Basketball Association has a race going after all.

Not a race for first place—Golden State Warriors made a shambles of that a long time ago. But Phoenix Suns, Seattle SuperSonics and Los Angeles Lakers have come up with a wild scramble of their own.

Those three are battling for two playoff spots, and it's a battle that has become heated. The Suns, out of the running for most of the year, took their biggest stride towards post-season play Tuesday night when they beat the SuperSonics 104-97 behind a career-high 39 points by guard Paul Westphal.

Los Angeles, with a 37-37 record, and Seattle, 36-36, are tied for second place. Phoenix, 35-36, is one-half game behind overall but tied with Seattle and one game ahead of Los Angeles in the loss column.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, Buffalo Braves defeated Chicago Bulls 122-109, Detroit Pistons beat New York Knicks 122-116, Kansas City Kings nipped Washington Bullets 106-101, Boston Celtics edged New Orleans Jazz 101-97 in overtime, Golden State beat Atlanta Hawks 118-100, Los Angeles downed Houston Rockets 125-106 and Portland Trailblazers nipped Milwaukee Bucks 100-97 in overtime.

Who Needs Those Rooms? Says Ex-Decathlon Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Toomey sais he doesn't understand all the fuss over the stadium in Montreal not being finished in time for the Olympics.

"Dressing rooms? I don't even know what they're talking about," he said. "You don't need dressing rooms. All an athlete needs is a place to sleep, to work out, to eat, to compete."

And, he added, a little more respect.

Toomey reaped Olympic gold in the decathlon at the 1968 Games in Mexico City. Whoever wins the two-day, 10-discipline event is considered the best all-round athlete in the world.

Yet, Toomey said, when he attended the next Olympics, the 1972 Games in Munich, he would have been just part of the mass of humanity had he not been a member of the president's delegation.

"Munich tried in a token manner to recognize former winners," he said, "but I talked to a lot of guys and they felt they weren't a part of it."

Toomey said the feeling was pervasive even among active athletes. That's why he says too much stress is being placed on the Montreal Olympics' physical plant, particularly the stadium for track and field, and too little on the athletes — past or present.

"I don't even have tickets for Montreal," he said. "I'd like to go, but I don't know whether I'll be able to see the events I want to see. I think there should be a VIP program of some kind, maybe a special section, for former athletes."

Bristol Retains Lead

LONDON (Reuter) — Bristol City, leaders of the English Football League Second Division table, kept its four-point advantage over runner-up Sunderland when the two clubs drew 1-1 at Sunderland Tuesday night.

Sunderland could be counted lucky to have saved a point from the match. The equalizer, headed by Mel Holden, came only five minutes from the end.

Third-placed Bolton Wanderers' challenge suffered a setback when they were beaten 1-0 at home by Blackburn Rovers.

Cox to Coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) Mark Cox has been named player coach of Pittsburgh Triangles, champions of World Team Tennis, team owner Frank Fuhrer has confirmed. Cox, 32, a British native now living in White Rock, B.C., has a three-year playing contract. His coaching pact is for one year. He succeeds Vic Edwards, who was fired after the 1975 season.

Covered Stadium for Moscow

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union plans to build Europe's largest covered stadium with seating for 40,000 spectators as part of preparations for the 1980 Olympics," a member of the organizing committee said Tuesday.

Vladimir Koval, the committee's deputy chairman, said the new stadium would be sited near Prospect Mira, in northern Moscow, and would be "large enough for a standard-sized football pitch.

But during the Olympics it would be used for men's basketball and boxing competitions while Olympic soccer matches would be played at other grounds including Moscow's 100,000-seat Lenin Stadium, where the opening ceremony would also be held.

Spartans Get Panther Help

Parkland Panthers extended a helping hand to Claremont Spartans during Greater Victoria High School Rugby League action on Tuesday.

Panthers moved solidly into third place by tripping Victoria Titans 13-7 at Claremont while the Spartans were able to break a first-place tie with the Titans with a 19-6 decision over the Mountainmen at Mt. Douglas in the only other match.

The top two teams in each division after a 12-match schedule advance to the Howand Russell Cup playoffs.

Stu Montgomery and Ken Poskitt scored tries and Daryl Stubbs booted one penalty goal and a conversion for Parkland, which grabbed a 13-0 lead by half time. Steve Forsythe scored a try and Marty Mader kicked a penalty goal for Titans.

Mt. Douglas led 6-4 at the half on a pair of penalty goals by Bruce Grey. Alan Keene scored a try for the Spartans.

After the break, Guy Prevost scored a pair of tries and a drop goal while Gary Stubbs booted a pair of conversions to pull Spartans from behind.

Arlene Lowers Her Goals

TUSTIN, Calif. (AP) — Arlene Hiss, who had wanted to drive in this year's Indianapolis 500-mile auto race, says she is dropping out of championship racing and into stock car racing for the time being.

Hiss said Tuesday that the decision is based on a lack of money and not on the furor which erupted after her debut race March 14 at Phoenix when some drivers said she was a menace on the track.

She said she is postponing her career in the championship cars because of a lack of sponsor's money for the Copperstate Racing Team.

"I have confidence and courage and all I need is a sponsor with confidence, courage and money," she said.

"Rather than just sit in the pits, I am going to apply for a USAC stock car license. If it's granted, it will allow me to stay active and gain valuable experience at many of the same tracks that champ cars run."

Hiss is the first woman to be granted a USAC champ license. She was granted a provisional certificate for the Phoenix 150-miler and the April 25 200-mile contest at Trenton, N.J. At the time she said she had her sights on the Indy race on May 30.

She qualified for the Phoenix race and finished 22 laps behind winner Bobby Unser, who said she shouldn't have been on the track in the first place.

Other drivers said she nearly caused a number of accidents.

WE NOW HAVE 5 VOLVOS. FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK ALONG THE SAME LINE.

Thoughtful people looking for safety, comfort and reliability in a car often come to the same logical conclusion: our Volvo showroom.

But not all people who think, think they want the same Volvo. So we have five models to choose from this year.

For those who want to drive the finer things in life, we have two luxurious Volvos in the new 260 series. A 4-door sedan. And a 5-door station wagon that any devout Cadillac, Mercedes or Lincoln owner could feel at home in...if only Cadillac, Mercedes and Lincoln built station wagons.

The 260 series comes with Volvo's biggest engine: a new, light alloy, overhead cam, fuel-injected V-6. Plus air conditioning, power steering and your choice of automatic transmission or 4-speed manual with overdrive ...all at no extra cost. In the 264 sedan, you'll find a host of other luxuries that people of means consider necessities. Things like real leather to sit on. Power front windows. Sunroof. Heated driver's seat. And metallic paint. All standard.

For people more concerned with the bottom line than the top of the line, we have the Volvo 240 series. 2- and 4-door sedans and a 5-door wagon with the new overhead cam, 4-cylinder, fuel-injected engine and new transmissions, too. But without a 260's price tag because there are some luxury features you do without.

We know we haven't made it easy for you. While it always took some thought to come in for a Volvo, now it's going to take even more to drive out in one.

'WE'RE GETTING READY . . . TO BE CLOBBERED'

EDMONTON (CP) — The director of the boxing program at the Canadian Native Friendship Centre here has predicted that the Canadian boxing team at the Summer Olympics in Montreal will be thoroughly outclassed.

"Our boys will be hopelessly outclassed in Montreal . . . before our own people," says Gordie Russell.

"The Americans named a manager for their team a year ago," he said. "And they have three teams going around the country fighting. They're getting day-to-day experience, getting ready.

"What are we getting? We're getting ready to be clobbered. It's sad, but true."

Russell, who has developed a number of successful amateur boxers in Western Canada, said the Canadian team will be selected after the Canadian championships May 5-6, giving the boxers only a little more than two months to prepare for the Olympics.

"It's ridiculous to be going about it this way."

Russell said that after the Canadian championships, the team will be given a week off and then go into a two-week training program. Then they have another week off before going back into training, he said, adding that there are no international exhibitions scheduled as tune-ups for the Olympics.

Russell said the Canadian team should have been selected two years ago.

"The boys could have been challenged by other Canadian kids in the interval, by late bloomers, to knock them off the team," said Russell.

" . . . it would have kept them in shape and all in one place, working for a common goal. They could have gone on international tours and gained some experience."

Russell recalled that he suggested to the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association in the early 1970s that it forget about fielding a team for the 1972 Olympics in Munich and concentrate instead on building a strong team for the future.

"They laughed at me. So we sent a young team into the Olympics and got embarrassed as usual. We just weren't ready to compete with the older Europeans and Soviets and Americans.

"We won't be this year either."

Kiwi Olympic Chairman Gets Anonymous Threats

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — The chairman of the New Zealand Olympic Games Association, C. L. S. (Lance) Cross, says he has been receiving anonymous threats and letters because of his country's stand on sporting contacts with South Africa.

Cross also reaffirmed Tuesday that New Zealand would compete in the summer Olympic Games in Montreal in spite of pressure from black African nations to prevent it.

New Zealand follows a policy of pursuing sporting contacts with South Africa and earlier this month the president of the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa, Abraham Ordia, said African nations "and their friends" would boycott the Olympics unless New Zealand changed its policy.

Cross, speaking after he was re-elected president of his country's Olympic and Commonwealth Games Association, said he had received "anonymous threats over the telephone and by letter which are still continuing."

Cross said he had recently advised Ordia that New Zealand intended to compete in Montreal.

"I have told Mr. Ordia we would be very regretful if this meant that African nations could not compete," he said.

Cross said he had wondered about the wisdom of continuing in his post, but had been warmed by the countrywide support for him and for New Zealand's policy on the issue.

Do the Goal Judges Favor Home Teams?

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League plans an investigation into a statement by supervisor of officials Frank Udvari that goal judges' decisions appear to favor the home team, the Star said Tuesday.

The afternoon newspaper says an incident in Sunday's game at Buffalo between the Sabres and Kansas City Scouts sparked the investigation. It sites a play in the second period when, with the Sabres ahead 2-1, a shot by Buffalo's Brian Spencer was ruled a goal by goal judge Mario Morretin.

Scouts argued the shot had bounced off the post and Udvari, in viewing a television replay, agreed.

"It's the sixth time in three weeks that I've seen such a happening and in all cases, the ruling has been in favor of the home team," Udvari, a top NHL referee for 20 years, is quoted as saying. "It's something which I hope is just a coincidence, but in my report to Mr. Campbell (NHL president Clarence Campbell) I merely told him what I observed.

"In three incidents, the goal judge turned on the light on shots which hit the post and the referee ruled no goal. The other three were controversies over whether a puck was across the line or not and the goal judge's ruling was in favor of the home team."

Goal judges are appointed by the NHL on the recommendation of the individual clubs. Campbell says he has turned down candidates because of a lack of experience. Any remuneration goal judges receive come from the club, not the league.

Campbell told the Star this week: "There is sufficient concern from one of the league officials (Udvari) to warrant my looking into the matter. He supported his point with situations." Campbell added, however, the NHL has no intention of using TV replays as an aid to controversial calls.

"It would just confound the issue," he is reported to have said. "There aren't enough cameras to supply all the angles which would satisfy everyone concerned."

Morretin, a goal judge since the Sabres joined the NHL six years ago, was quoted as saying that in his view the puck struck the inside of the post across the goalline.

"I saw it hit the inside of the post and bounce out, but I thought it was over the line. Denis Herron (Scout goalie) gathered it in. I saw daylight between the puck and the line."

'The Shoe': At Peak of His Art

ARCADIA, Calif. — Cast in bronze, Bill Shoemaker and Johnny Longden stare at each other eternally across a patch of grass and flowers in the paddock gardens next to the walking ring at Santa Anita race track.

Shoemaker is expressionless, his upper lip a straight line, his eyes seeming to star into the back of Longden's mind to uncover some nefarious trick. The Shoemaker of the bust is around 30, not a line in his face, a legend captured at his peak.

The real Shoemaker is 44. His hair is turning grey, the character lines are deep around his eyes and mouth. His soft, tiny hands are gnarled, and he has an incipent turkey neck.

Unlike almost any other great athlete in middle age, Shoemaker remains near the peak of his art. His mounts won $3.5 million last year, richest of his 28 years in the irons.

Recently the Shoe passed a milestone, his 7,000th winner. There are only milestones left for Shoemaker; he owns most of the records already — 7,003 winners, 662 stakes victories, 111 hundred-grand races, nearly $59 million won (10 per cent of that going into the pockets of the 4-foot-11, 92 pounder) and a record career winning percentage (24).

Shoemaker passed Longden's 6,032 winners years ago and admitted the 7,000th didn't mean much to him, not even being hugged by Greer Garson.

A bit older too, she owns Royal Derby II, which provided No. 7,000. Shoemaker celebrated by going to a surprise birthday party for his agent, Harry Silbert.

The hubub past, Shoemaker settled back into the life, the golden autumnal life, that probably will lead to 8,000.

To understand the graceful middle age of Bill Shoemaker, one needs to look at Santa Anita. If Socrates were given an eternity to live, he might devote at least a millenian to studying the Racing Form, sitting in Santa Anita's flowering statue - filled gardens. People live at Santa Anita — pensioners, poets, parimutuel addicts and folks who have nothing better to do than see if the smog from L.A. will blow away and reveal the majestic San Gabriel mountains rising above the backstretch.

Shoemaker (they still call him Silent Shoe) feels all this. He will seldom leave Southern California again, he says. Santa Anita, Hollywood Park, Del Mar and Oak Tree are his circuit now, with a few trips here and there for a Derby or a Belmont.

He takes it easy, in the saddle and out. There is no hurry. He works a five-day week, plays golf and tennis in Beverly Hills the other two days. He runs to stay in shape, but he has never been bedeviled with weight.

Since his grandmother saved his life as a 2½ pound premature baby by putting him in a shoe box (Shoe box?) in an oven with the door ajar, Shoemaker has been perfectly formed but naturally diminutive.

He stays to himself, behind partitions, in side rooms. "The first time I met him, it was like meeting a movie star," said jockey Sandy Hawley. "But he's really easy to talk to."

So he is, although he seems allergic to more words than are needed to convey a meaning that he genuinely feels.

"I really am lucky," he said, feeling the texture of a new whip in his hand. "Most of the guys my age are long gone by now — accidents, weight, age, whatever."

He says he still enjoys coming to the track every day. "It's nice, maybe because the weather and the track are always beautiful. The best thing is still taking a horse around and knowing you've used him the best possible way. Each horse, each race is almost entirely different, like a new puzzle."

If Shoemaker, who received a crushed pelvis and a broken femur that sidelined him for 13 months, doesn't dart for a hole on the rail in a claiming race, and if he rides a little less, passing up the early races on the card, no one minds.

"He rides a horse as if it were a swan," said the late Hy Schneider.

"He can go on until he's 80. He makes everybody else look as if they were driving a truck." Shoe has had his swans in the money 46.7 per cent of the time this year.

Everyone has a favorite Shoemaker trait. To Hawley it is his intelligence. "He's heady. He always has something saved. You never figure him out."

According to agent Silbert, it is his patience.

To the late trainer George Reeves it was the way Shoemaker never hit a horse with his whip.

That Big Band Sound Still Draws a Crowd

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Give a listen Benny, Buddy, Woody and Glenn — the Coppertones are playing your songs . . .

Big bands may never again have a big following as in the pre-TV era when full brass rhythms would ring out in concert halls and over the airwaves.

But every once in a while a new band for old swing arrangements comes along and enjoys a surge of popularity before its adherents lose interest or the musicians move on to higher priorities.

The 17-piece Coppertones, newest manifestation of swinging brass since The Big Band blew up a couple years ago, may be around somewhat longer.

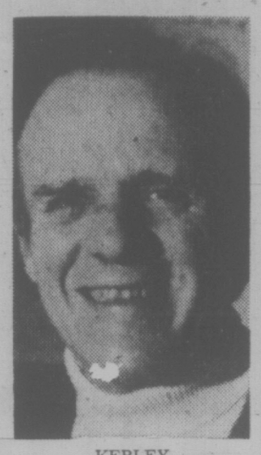
For one thing, all members of the principal sections are established in the community and are mostly 30 or older. In addition they play for themselves, as a hobby, and not for Saturday dances a la Trianon Ballroom.

"I don't think the big band will ever come back, but there is a place for it," said Coppertones leader Don Kerley, who is bandmaster at Dunsmuir Junior Secondary.

The place, initially, was Kerley's basement where a group of older musicians had gathered to do a bit of nostalgic jamming about 18 months ago.

Kerley, who had always dreamed of putting a stage-size band together, had some old swing arrangements lying around — like Feeling Funky, In the Mood and Little Brown Jug.

"Their eyes lit up when they saw some of these old titles," Kerley said. It was enough to plant the seed of the Coppertones, who are gaining the growing reputation of having the Glenn Miller sound.



KERLEY
. . . nostalgia serenade

Why Miller?

"It seems to be the music they like," Kerley explained. And certainly it has an unmistakable, full-throated, swinging beat that will be forever identifiable with the American band leader who was lost on active duty during the Second World War.

Kerley, who has been around a few years, musically speaking, has collected a number of old arrangements through local musical contacts. But many of these people won't part with the titles, some dating into the 30s and 40s.

He was in England recently where he shopped around for a few arrangements, but even in the U.K., where big band music remained in the popular idiom long after it first fell off the charts here, they were hard to come by.

So far, the Coppertones have things like Moonlight Serenade, Chattanooga Choo Choo, Song of India and Getting Sentimental Over You (both Tommy Dorsey numbers); American Patrol, String of Pearls and Tuxedo Junction, the latter, oddly enough, a recent arrangement of the standard jump.

Kerley is keeping an eye out for such others as the Miller version of Tuxedo Junction, Pennsylvania 65000, Kalamazoo, Adios and At Last.

But the list could go on — Sentimental Journey, It Don't Mean a Thing if it Ain't Got That Swing, Perfidia, One O'Clock Jump, Stompin' at the Savoy, Take the A Train — even such avante garde stuff as Kenton's Artistry in Rhythm, which was a kind of parting dichotomy of the Big Band Era.

"We'll never get rich," Kerley says. "If we could play once a month it's about what the boys want to do — not to go out (on stage) every Saturday night."

How does he explain the enthusiasm the band generates when it does play in public?

"It's something different," he said, compared with rock music. "There must be a lot of people out there who do like this music."

At first, the dance band was associated with the police community band, and most still play in it. But the Coppertones are now independent of the older band.

Most are old enough to have heard the original bands whose music they now play. Saxophonist Don Hauser, 30, considers himself one of the younger musicians of the main section. Lead player in his group is 69-year-old Maurice Pothier.

Retired from a lifetime of working on the railway, Pothier has played with a number of bands including George Kraeling's dance band and the Oak Bay senior citizen band.

Hauser said most players were good soloists, but coming from all walks of life and none having been professional musicians, it has been hard to blend them into what he called the Glenn Miller sound.

Among the saxes, "I'm the only one who hasn't played this music before," Hauser said.

A stalwart is lead trumpet Ernie Cairns who has worked hard to bring the brass together.

Lead trombone is Dave Lee, another player familiar with the Miller style.

Five saxes form the main section, including the baritone of John Grindley, who felt so strongly about the band he paid something like $1,000 for a new Selmer purchased on a visit abroad.

There are four trumpets and four trombones, piano, electric bass and drums.

Joan Bulmer, on paino, Rita Vinten and Terry Jones on Trumpet with Gale Nash as vocalist are the female members of the band, and the two youngest players are 17-year-old Dave Masini, drums, and Dave McLean, 15, bass.

Coppertones have about 130 arrangements in their book now, but they feel the basic minimum for variety is 200.

Some music publishers are reissuing old arrangements for swing band, and there are a number of new titles being arranged in the old idiom. But prices are high, Kerley says.

The band will get a boost toward music purchases when it plays for the Victorian Days cotillion ball at the Empress Hotel May 26.

Mortgage Exchange Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp. is unlikely to begin business April 1 as planned, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald says.

The main reason for the delay is that the government has not yet completed talks with mortgage lenders on how the corporation would be used, he said.

The corporation was created by legislation approved by Parliament in December, 1973. It is designed to buy and sell mortgages and make it easier for investors to enter and leave the mortgage market.

SITARIST Ravi Shankar will make his second appearance in Victoria at the University of Victoria gymnasium Saturday, March 27 at 8 p.m. Shankar, a classical master, played at the Monterey Pop Festival, 1967, Bangla Desh Benefit concert, appeared with Yehudi Menuhin at the United Nations, and has taught at University of California. He is accompanied by Tabla (drums) player Allan Rakha.

'Mermaids' from Space Reported

By LEONARD SANTORELLI

LONDON (Reuter) — It sounds like the ultimate in fishermen's tales but a new theory maintains that earth was visited by a race of mermaid-like creatures from outer space 5,000 years ago.

Traces of this super-intelligent civilization are said to have been handed down from generation to generation by a remote African tribe living near Timbuktu, West Africa.

This extraordinary hypothesis is the result of eight years' research by a young American orientalist and astronomer, Robert Semple. His findings are in a scholarly book, The Sirius Mystery.

The amphibious creatures, half-human half-fish, travelled here from a planet near Sirius, the brightest star in the sky and 10 light years from the earth, the author says. Their objective was simply to study primitive civilization.

Central to this belief is the discovery that some early civilizations here possessed knowledge of astrophysics that could not have been picked up without modern telescopes. This is where Timbuktu comes in.

In the Republic of Mali live a tribe called the Dogon and their life revolves around the worship of Sirius, the dog star. The object of their veneration is not Sirius itself but a tiny star orbiting it.

High priests of the tribe have told French anthropologists details of the star's orbit, which turned out to be correct in the smallest detail.

What makes this uncanny is that the companion star is invisible without the most powerful telescopes. Yet the information has been in this primitive tribe for generations, Temple says.

The Dogon people, moreover, believe that the star is immensely heavy. A single cup of its material, they say, "is heavier than all the grains of sand on earth."

Modern astronomy has established that Sirius's companion star, known as Sirius B, is a "white dwarf." This is a star in the early stages of collapse. It is extremely dense and a matchbox of it would weigh about 50 tons.

"How could they know this?" asks Semple.

The answer he comes up with is that they learned it from the extraterrestial visitors. He finds clues to the visit threaded throughout the culture of th Dogon, as well as three neighboring tribes.

Weird fish-like creatures and depictions of the flight path of Sirius B crop up again and again in their traditional wood carvings and paintings, even woven into their cloth.

Semple does not believe that the amphibians visited the tribe in its present location. The Dogon, he says, are the descendants of ancient Mediterranean civilizations such as the Egyptians and Babylonians who emigrated west.

Creatures and gods with fishlike scales and fins are found in frescoes, paintings and coins of those cultures, says Semple, who attended the University of Pennsylvania but now lives in England.

The Dogon have no written records, but their tribal stories refer to creatures that landed in an ark "like a flame that went out when he touched the earth."

The creatures emerged and skimmed across the ground until they found water and began splashing about in it.

Semple speculates that the planet the creatures came from may be mostly covered by water. He feels it is no accident that they chose marshy ground, as might be found in the Nile delta, to visit.

HOTSHOT cadets for the fourth time, Victoria members of 2483 Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry RCACC received trophy last week at Work Point Barracks ceremony. President Cliff Ludtke, of the Victoria branch PPCLI Association, handed over trophy put up by the regiment's three battalions for the best of Canada's five PPCLI cadet corps. Cadet Regimental Sergeant Major Paul Shields accepted the award after unit paraded. (Brian Watt photo)

Multi-Million Art Fraud

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. customs authorities announced Tuesday they have uncovered a $35-million art-fraud conspiracy involving the sale to U.S. and European buyers of fake Mayan artifacts.

Forty-eight of the artifacts, two-foot-high 100-pound stone tablets represented as genuine pieces from Mayan ruins in Guatemala's jungles, were seized by U.S. customs officers and Interpol was warned that some pieces had been sent to Europe, he said.

Tests by chemists and art experts determined the tablets had been carved recently, U.S. Customs Commissioner Vernon Acree said.

He said the conspirators had expected to make about $35 million by selling the tablets to unsuspecting buyers in the United States and Europe.

Truro Wins Battle for Gymnast

OTTAWA (UPI) — The town of Truro, N.S., Tuesday fought Canada's immigration bureaucracy to a standstill and prevented the imminent deportation of Polish defector Roguslaw Dudziak.

Dudziak jumped ship Aug. 15, 1975, but was refused refugee status by immigration officials. He was to have been deported back to Poland Thursday.

Truro fought deportation by making an issue on national radio of the impending ouster of Dudziak, who had become extremely popular due to his voluntary training of the local gymnastics team and free physiotherapy sessions for the aged of the area.

Tory MP Robert Coates brought the issue to the Commons but Immigration Minister Robert Andras said, "I think it is probably past the inquiry stage and beyond my jurisdiction."

Gus MacFarlane, a member of the governing Liberal party, then threw his weight behind the Tory and Truro protests.

Barely minutes after the exchange in the Commons and government lobby, Andras sent a message suspending indefinitely the deportation order.

A spokesman for Andras said he "messaged the department to delay the deportation indefinitely to give Dudziak time to find a country from which he could re-apply for landed immigrant status to Canada."

Andras said he had no power to overrule deportation orders but could postpone them.

Canada's immigration law requires that aliens apply for landed immigrant status from outside the country.

The parents of children in the Truro gymnastics club had asked Andras in a petition Feb. 10 to "give Mr. Duziak a future, a future in a Canada that is as certain as the future of our children."

Unromantic Eviction Brought Court Fine

BRISTOL, England — A bird breeder was punished in court here for evicting an unromantic canary from its cage.

"The bird was cast loose because it had lost its sex urge," declared an indignant official from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

A £5 ($10) fine was levied on breeder Royston Chick, who lost patience with a male bird when it declined to show any interest in females.

Chick told the magistrates: "The canary was no good."

The RSPCA official said: "Luckily we were able to recapture the bird unhurt."

He added without elaboration: "It is now being looked after at a dog's home."

WASHINGTON — White House press secretary Ron Nessen says he has been assured by President Ford that in future he will be fully advised by all White House business.

White House aides failed to tell Nessen that Richard Nixon's China trip report had been sent to Ford last week. White House reporters asked Nessen about the report Monday, and Nessen said it was yet to be delivered. Nessen then learned that it had been delivered, and he said he "went up and talked to the president" about it.

LONDON — Roddy Llewellyn, close friend of Princess Margaret, has broken his silence for the first time since her separation last week from her husband Lord Snowdon — but only to say he would not comment on the matter.

But Llewellyn, 28, said he regretted any embarrassment caused to Queen Elizabeth and the Royal Family and asked reporters to leave him alone.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A priest who was suspended last January because he refused to live in a rectory he considered too luxurious was reinstated Tuesday and assigned to a smaller, inner-city parish.

Father James Callan, 28, was suspended after informing the bishop of Rochester Roman Catholic Diocese that he would not reside in St. Ambrose rectory, claiming it resembled a castle and was above the means of the parishioners he was serving.

"I thought it was a scandal to be living above the people," he explained.

LOS ANGELES — Lorne Greene and Michael Landon, father and son in the "Bonanza" series, have gone their separate ways on the television screen but were back in the saddle together Tuesday to face a common foe — the State of California.

Greene and Landon brought suit against the state for failing to follow through on a promise to buy 2,000 feet of ocean front property they own. The state government decided in September, 1974 that the land should be a public park and appropriated $2 million to buy it, the suit said, but no offer has been made to them.

Meanwhile, Greene and Landon are forbidden to sell to any buyer but the state and must continue paying upkeep, insurance and taxes on the property.

Wooden Car Beats Rust

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP) — Richard Roung has no rust worries with his car — it's wooden.

The industrial management technologist said that since 1961, he has been sporadically constructing the wooden car, which has cost him about $800 in materials during the last four years.

Built on a shortened 1953 Ford chassis with a Rambler six-cylinder engine, the car is a box-like design with a front bumper made of a four-by-four-inch oak beam.

"I was always interested in cars and when I went out to build one of wood, all I got was laughter from my brothers," said Roung, the father of two girls.

He said he started the work in a shed on his father's farm, but after a few years his interest waned and the car remained in a half-completed stage for the next eight years.

Roung returned to working on it four years ago and now the car is on the verge of completion.

IRATE RACCOON SET ON POLICE

VERNON, Conn. (AP) — Randy the Raccoon may not have to appear in court on April 16. A prosecutor says a mug shot of the animal may be sufficient evidence.

The racoon's owners, Stephen Ference, 22, and Carolyn Shea, 38, have been charged with possession of marijuana and controlled drugs with intent to sell, police said Monday.

Ference was also charged with resisting arrest, disobeying police officers and attempted assault on police officers, and that is where Randy comes in.

Officers said Ference wrestled with them during a drug raid Friday and then "pulled out something that looked like a raccoon hat." It was Randy, said Detective Leo Arnone, who described the large raccoon as "snarling and flashing his teeth."

Arnone said Ference "started yelling to the raccoon, 'Get him Randy, get him!' " but the officer escaped with only a scratched hand.

Skall Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Skall, winner of the 1948 Academy Award in cinematography for the motion picture Joan of Arc, died Monday after a long illness.

Skall was nominated nine times for the award, as a result of work on biblical epics Quo Vadis in 1951 and Silver Chalice in 1954.

'ROAD' TO ATLANTIS BARED OFF BIMINI

MIAMI (UPI) — A group of underwater explorers says a submerged rock formation off Bimini in the Bahamas is man-made and "is probably the key that validates the myth of Atlantis."

The International Explorers Society says it is prepared to prove the "Bimini Road" dates back more than 6,000 years.

"As far as we are concerned, Atlantis is a myth, but our job in the International Explorers Society is to explore the various relationships," said Jim Woodman, the group's director.

Woodman said chief researcher Dr. David Zink of the Bahamas Antiquities Institute, who has conducted two years of study on the formation, "doesn't believe it is Atlantis, but it is probably the key that validates the myth of Atlantis."

Zink, French underwater photography expert Dimitri Rebikoff and author Peter Tompkins, who is preparing a television special on the discoveries, will hold a news conference on the subject April 2 in Bimini, Woodman said.

"Dr. Zink is going to demonstrate eight points that validate this site (located under 16 feet of water several hundred yards off the west coast of North Bimini) as a man-made megalithic structure," Woodman said.

The "Bimini Road" was discovered about 10 years ago by Dr. J. Manson Valentine, a Florida marine scientist.

Woodman said while the underwater structure "has been popularly called a road, many feel it can be all or part of an underwater harbor similar to those which have been found in Syria and in the Mediterranean."

Zink, on leave from Lamar University, Beaumont, Tex., is an English professor and historian who formerly was on the faculty at the Air Force Academy. Rebikoff, president of the Submarine Club of France, is head of the Rebikoff Institute of Marine Technology which built many of the cameras used by oceanographer Jacques Cousteau.

Tompkins is the author of "Secret Life of Plants."

EEC Leads to Cleaner Beaches

Manchester Guardian

BRUSSELS — European beaches and rivers should be cleaner this summer as the result of a European Economic Community anti-pollution directive that will ensure authorized bathing areas in the EEC are safer to swim.

It lays down inspection conditions of such areas and requires local authorities to ensure that pollution levels do not exceed agreed limits. Special attention will be paid to bathing areas. Sampling will be carried out before the bathing season starts and throughout the season.

The EEC has made allowances in the directive to take account of differing climates and regions as health hazards vary greatly according to the temperature of the air and water.

Pollution dangers can also vary according to the time spent in the water so that areas where the coldness of the water discourages people from swimming for a long time will have less stringent quality requirements.

The new bathing water directive will make sure that in authorized bathing places community citizens can be confident they can take to the water without fear of infection or illness.

The commission is concerned that water pollution, whether of sea or rivers, frequently has international implications. For example, untreated sewage pumped into the sea at Marseilles is often swept along the coast by currents and pollutes beaches on the Italian Riviera.

Similarly, waste carried downstream by the Rhine from Germany, France and Switzerland pollutes the seas off Belgium and Holland. EEC officials believe the directive will reduce the dangers of such exported pollution.

Grand Slam: Oyster Casino

By MARY MOORE

When I was in Florida last month my friends, the Lucas', invited us for bridge and a midnight supper of Oysters Casino. Ed was the chef. Kay had made homemade bread.

It was a big night for two grand slams had been bid and made while Ed performed his magic in the kitchen.

Back home I was surprised to find Oysters at $7.20 per quart and they made a luxurious meal for six.

Note: You must have "shells" for this. Ed had 36 small ones which he had collected on the beach or bought or borrowed. I had 18, each of which held four oysters without crowding.

ED'S OYSTERS CASINO

1 qt. raw oysters
About ½ lb. side bacon
Parmesan cheese

Sauce

⅔ cup best quality catsup
2 tsp. Lea and Perrins Worcestershire sauce
8 drops Tabasco
½ cup very finely chopped green onion (including tops)
1½ cups very finely chopped celery
2 tbsp. lemon juice

Make the sauce in advance by chopping the onion and celery fine and combining with catsup, Lea and Perrins, Tabasco and lemon juice.

Drain the oysters well. Reserve the oyster liquor and include in a cream soup for a future meal.

Divide the well drained oysters into all of the shells you have but do not crowd them. Put 1 measuring tablespoon sauce over each shell. Carefully and neatly sprinkle Parmesan around perimeter of shell. Top each with one-third slice bacon. (¼ slice is large enough for some small shells.) Arrange prepared shells on two broiler pans. Insert under preheated broiler 6" from heat, and broil until bacon sputters. Turn off heat and wait 2 minutes and turn it on again until bacon is cooked. You must not leave the oven — watch it all the time. When one broiler panful is done, switch pans and broil second panful, keeping first panful hot below.

To serve, protect your good dinner plates with folded paper napkins and serve three shells to each guest.

Kay had made fresh bread and after midnight five of us ate the whole loaf.

QUICK SERVING IDEAS FOR INSTANT DESSERT

Our changing lifestyle has far reaching effects upon our home life, our work, even our eating habits. Today's consumer demands foods that are quick to prepare, economical and yet good tasting.

One of the foods which meets the bill is canned fruit. This so called "instant dessert" is most commonly available in 14 and 19-ounce cans, but peaches and pears are also packed in 28-ounce cans.

A 14-ounce can contains about three servings and a 19-ounce can about four servings. The supermarket should have all of these canned fruits on display: Bartlett and Dessert pears, Freestone peaches, sweet and red sour cherries, plums, fruit cocktail and fruit salad. Look for the grade name — Canada Fancy and Canada Choice on the label.

Now for some quick serving ideas. You'll be amazed at the possibilities!

—Serve sliced canned peaches on breakfast cereal.

—Serve an assortment of diced canned fruit such as peaches, pears, cherries and applies as an appetizer.

—Accompany a main dish with a serving of peaches or pears, on crisp greens. Add a sprinkle of salad dressing or a dab of mayonnaise.

—Follow up a lavish main course with a light fruit dessert such as a fruit cup, a fluffy peach mousse or a pear-cherry compote.

—Pack a portion of fruit cocktail or salad for a refreshing change at school or work lunches.

—Add instant flavor to plain yogurt by mixing in canned peaches, pears or cherries.

—Arrange drained peaches or cherries decoratively on top of a cream pie.

—Scoop up your favorite flavored ice cream and top with pear halves and chocolate syrup for an old-fashioned sundae.

—Satisfy hearty appetites with a peach or cherry upside-down-cake.

—Dress-up waffles or pancakes with a cherry sauce. Simply thicken the syrup from the cherries with cornstarch; add the cherries and it's ready-to-serve, hot or cold.

—Thicken any remaining syrup with cornstarch, sweeten to taste and pour over pudding or white cake.

FRUIT BAVARIAN

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 14-ounce can fruit, drained
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup cold water
⅔ cup skim milk powder
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Soak gelatin in ¼ cup cold water then dissolve over hot water. Puree fruit and add gelatin. Chill until partially set. Combine lemon juce, ½ cup cold water and skim milk powder. Beat until stiff peaks form. Gradually heat in sugar and vanilla. Fold in gelatin mixture and chill until firm. Six servings.

SPICY FRUIT SAUCE

1 14-ounce can fruit cocktail
1 teaspoon whole cloves
1 3-inch cinnamon stick
1 cup syrup from fruit plus water
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons lemon juice.

Drain fruit, reserving syrup. Tie cloves and cinnamon in cheesecloth and add to syrup. Bring to boil and simmer 5 minutes. Remove spaces. Combine remaining ingredients and blend into the hot mixture. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Add fruit. Service hot. Makes about 2 cups.

RULES CHANGE ON LABELLING

New government regulations covering the packaging and labelling of food products come into effect in March 1976.

Packaging and Labelling Act offers consumers protection against fraud and deception in packaging and labelling.

Under the regulations of this act, the following information is required on the label:

1. Net quantity: This must be declared in both Canadian and metric units of measurements or by numerical count; in some cases metric measurements alone are adequate.

2. Product identity: this may be indicated by the common or generic name of the product or a description in terms of the function of the product in both English and French.

3. Name and address of the manufacturer or distributor. One benefit of the new system will be a reduction in the variety and size of packages. This, in itself, will be a boon to food shoppers. In addition, any label illustrations must accurately describe the contents. If a picture of a natural product (such as lemon) is shown to denote flavor of a product, and artificial flavor is added, then the label must so state. The Act also controls, to a certain extent, the amount of empty space permitted at the top of packages (slack fill).

In general, the new act requires that all labels be concise, easy to locate, and simple to understand so as to simplify comparison shopping for consumers.

Butterflies Safe

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. (AP) — In this northern California town it's against the law to harm butterflies. During the winter this coastal community is host to millions of monarch butterflies which migrate annually. The arrival of the monarchs attracts as much attention as that of the swallows which arrive at San Juan Capistrano on a certain day each year.

Woman Driver

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Eileen Clingan, a 41-year-old mother of four, has become an official employee of Windsor's transit system after finishing two weeks of intensive road training. Mrs. Clingan has been classified as a spare bus driver and is scheduled for daily runs. A company spokesman said she will retain spare status until there is a regular opening.

SURPLUS MILK FOR POOR

OTTAWA (CP) — MP Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. Georges-St. Barbe) called on the government to use the 400-million-pound skim milk surplus as a nutrition supplement for poor school children.

Marshall said in the Commons there are a disturbing number of under-nourished children in the country and the government should use the milk to help them rather than offering it to Eastern European countries at a loss-price of 14 cents a pound.

But Bob Kaplan, parliamentary secretary for health, said the surplus milk is not the property of the government but belongs to milk producers.

Marshall said a recent National Welfare Council report showed about 1.5 million children were under-nourished because they came from poor families.

'Greenhouse' Types Now on the Market

The first of our own Canadian-grown vegetables are now on the market. These are the unripened tomatoes and cucumbers, grown under glass and are referred to as "greenhouse" because they're ripened in a greenhouse under ideal controlled temperatures. Both vegetables are graded and are usually sold as Canada No. 1 and Canada No. 2.

The tomatoes are left on the vine until the first tinge of color begins to appear. They are therefore more full flavored and have a better color than the imported tomatoes which are picked while they are still completely green.

Greenhouse tomatoes are either the pink or the red variety. The pink tomatoes are round in shape and a bit firmer than the red ones. They're actually about the same color inside, but since the skin is transparent and not pigmented, it is the red flesh color showing through that gives them the pink appearance.

If not at peak of maturity, allow hot-house tomatoes to ripen out of direct sunlight, at room temperature. Then wash and refrigerate in a plastic bag or a closed container. They are successfully stored for a period of one week.

Greenhouse cucumbers are easy to recognize by their uniform color and the absence of a wax coating. Imported fresh cucumbers are coated with wax to help them retain their freshness longer during transportation.

Brushing of our greenhouse cucumbers will give the skin a natural lustre and not a waxy shine. When buying them, choose those that are firm, well shaped, smooth and bright in color. Avoid those with water-soaked spots, or indication of decay.

Unripe cucumbers should be kept at room temperature until they reach maturity. They are then washed and refrigerated in a closed container with a paper towel. Because of their freshness when purchased, these cucumbers have a storage life of up to 10 days in the refrigerator.

For a tasty spring salad, why not combine slices of crisp cucumber with slices of tomatoes as suggested by Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada in the two recipes "Curried Cucumber and Tomatoes" and "Herbed Cucumber and Tomatoes".

CURRIED CUCUMBER AND TOMATOES

3 medium tomatoes, sliced
1 cucumber, peeled and sliced
2 teaspoons curry powder
3 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash salt
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing

Arrange vegetables in serving dish. Combine curry powder and water. Stir and cook 2 minutes. Beat curry, lemon juice and salt into mayonnaise or salad dressing. Pour over vegetables. Chill 1 hour. 6 servings.

HERBED CUCUMBER AND TOMATOES

3 medium tomatoes, sliced
1 cucumber, peeled and sliced
½ cup vinegar
2-3 cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon crushed dry tarragon
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 teaspoons crushed dried chives
Dash pepper

Arrange vegetables in serving dish. Blend remaining ingredients, pour over vegetables. Chill one hour. Six servings.

FRUIT CRISP

2 14-ounce cans or 1 28-ounce can fruit
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup syrup from fruit
⅓ cup flour
1 cup crushed ready-to-eat cereal flakes
⅓ cup brown sugar
⅓ cup butter
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 cup syrup from fruit

Drain fruit, reserving syrup. Combine 1 tablespoon cornstarch with ¼ cup syrup from fruit and stir into fruit. Place in baking dish. Combine flour, cereal flakes and brown sugar. Cut in Butter until mixture resembles coarse bread crumbs. Sprinkle over fruit and bake at 375 deg. F. until topping is lightly browned (about 30 to 35 minutes). Combine 1 tablespoon cornstarch with 1 cup syrup from fruit. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Serve with crisp. 6 servings.

Choice Is Happiness

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to TORN was perfect. If those parents really love their tall, handsome, athletic son, the best way to show it is to allow him to be himself, even if his choice of a life's companion is another man, and not the woman of their dreams.

I speak out of agonizing years of personal experience. I made my personal decisions on the basis of what would please my parents, my friends and society in general. I have tried to live a straight life in a straight world and have been relatively successful. But each day is an inner struggle. I have confromed to a way of life that is "proper," but it's unnatural for me. My life has been one long succession of unfulfilled yearnings.

I would advise any young person who is struggling with homosexual feelings to be true to himself. Thank God for the openness society is developing. Had I known 25 years ago that there could possibly be an alternative, I would have taken a different course.

Now, in my 40s, I still wear a mask and am more miserable than ever. Surely those parents wouldn't want that kind of misery for their son.

Abby, please continue to tell parents that the opinions of their friends, and relatives are not as important as their children's right to be themselves. — UNHAPPY CONFORMIST

DEAR UNHAPPY: I could not have said it better than you did.

DEAR ABBY: My 23-year-old daughter is planning to be married.

Five years ago she had a baby out of wedlock, and she kept the child and raised her.

My daughter now wants a traditional wedding with a white dress and veil. She also wants her daughter to be the flower girl!

What is your opinion of such a wedding under the circumstances? — CONVENTIONAL MOM

DEAR MOM: I hope I won't shock you, but I say, let your daughter have the kind of wedding she wants. This is her first wedding, and it probably has been her heart's desire for many years.

One swallow doesn't make summer, and one mistake shouldn't cast a shadow over a person for a lifetime.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby, but I hope you will print this in the interest of safety for all women.

Today, I was assaulted in a parking lot elevator by a man who appeared to be about 30. I believe his intentions were to rape me, but I fought him off and kept screaming loudly. I'm sure my screams are what scared him off.

I went immediately to the police station and reported the incident.

Abby, please tell women that if threatened with rape or assault, they should fight and scream with all their might unless they believe their lives are threatened.

Afterward, they should go directly to the police. No matter how shook up and embarrassed they are, if they don't report the incident at once, the attacker is free to attack other women.

My husband was marvelous. He was proud of me for fighting the man off and then going directly to the police.

Let's get these creeps off the streets and into hospitals or, if necessary, prisons where they can be retrained. —ATTACKED IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR ATTACKED: Thanks for your helpful first-hand advice. Women, are you listening?

Skim Milk Powder Nutritious, Cheap

HILDA BEASTALL

Much has been written about nutrition in skim milk but still I come across people who scorn the word although talking a lot about low-calorie diets and, in the same breath, the high cost of food.

They seem to prefer cutting out milk and all milk products entirely rather than first eliminating the fat and its calories, leaving the remaining milk nutrients as important items in a healthy diet.

The powdered form of skim milk is today's best food buy costing less than half the price of liquid skim milk. It is not only for drinking, but to add by spoonful or cupful to an almost endless number of recipes that range from homemade soups, through meatless or meat-scanty casseroles or saucepan mixes, pancakes, fruit puddings, breads, cakes and even to nutritious icing to occasionally finish off fancy homemade bread or cookies.

Powdered skim milk has all the nutrients of whole milk with the exception of the fat-soluble vitamins A and D. These are replaced in most brands of powdered skim on the Canadian market.

It is up to the consumer to note whether this is stated on the package.

As with most food items, there is more saving in buying larger quantities of powdered milk than in the one-pound packages. Of great importance is the storing; keep the package tightly closed after each using, store in a dark place which is cool, not at room temperature. The floor level shelf of kitchen cupboards is cooler than high shelves. A bag which can be folded down, excluding all air, is better for storing than a cardboard box which is increasingly filled with air with each removal of the powdered milk.

When made up with water into liquid milk, the liquid needs the same care in storing as bought fresh milk — cool, dark and clean.

Non-instant skim milk powder (produced by a screening process which forces the powder into a hot air chamber which removes more moisture than is extracted from ordinary instant powder) is not listed as having vitamin A and D replaced, but vitamin A is easily obtained in daily foods. Many vegetables are highly rated for vitamin A, including carrots, winter squash, beet greens and kale; some fruits have a useful A rating, highest being apricots, but prunes and peaches are good. Tomato juice and canned fruit are especially a good source.

As a safeguard in obtaining vitamin D, use half quantities of non-instant with half of instant powdered skim. It is for this reason, the lack of vitamin D replacement, I cannot recommend the better flavored non-instant skim milk powder as a complete substitute for the instant which is labelled "Vitamins A and D added."

In favor of non-instant is its more delicate but richer flavor, and because of its lower moisture content half a cup (volume) of dry powder is equal in mineral and other vitamin values to one cup of the instant variety. This is according to the only comparative listing I have come across. Non-instant takes longer to mix, but using warm water and a wire whisk the job takes three minutes.

When considering liquid milk intake for its total nutrition, instant skim powder labelled as containing added vitamin A and D should definitely be used unless directed otherwise by a medical adviser. One last item, the cost of non-instant is higher, but you do have the choice between the two kinds for different purposes.

Now follows a Spring Green Soup made from high nutrition ingredients at low cost, including skim milk powder and green vegetables from garden or allotment. You may have to substitute bought green vegetables.

Spring Green Soup

¼ cup dried split green peas
2 whole garlic cloves
2 cups hot water or vegetable stock
½ cup finely chopped kale or swiss chard
¼ cup chopped chickweed tops
¼ tsp salt
¼ cup non-instant skim milk powder OR ½ cup instant skim powder
Paprika

Cook split peas and garlic in boiling water or stock until tender. Add kale and chickweed to cook for 5 to 7 minutes. Add salt. Check amount for 2 cups; if insufficient, add hot water or stock.

Add milk powder; whisk until smooth. Reheat but do not boil. Sprinkle with paprika. Serves 2.

To make a spoonful or two of cooked or raw meat or fish into a high quality and good-to-eat supper dish by using a few additions from the store cupboard is no great problem. This Meat-Plus Casserole takes only minutes to prepare and cook and costs a few cents beyond what was originally paid for the small quantity of meat (or fish).

Meat-Plus Casserole

½ cup cooked or raw meat
1 cup wholewheat bread crumbs
¼ cup wheat germ
¼ cup skim milk powder
2 Tbsp brewer's yeast (torula)
1 cup vegetable stock (or water)
1 Tbsp chopped parsley (or kale)
A little salt
Chopped chives.

Grind or chop (finely) the meat as needed. Mix all ingredients except chives. Pile lightly into slightly greased small casserole. Sprinkle with chives. Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for 30 minutes. Serves 2.

Arrange to bake Potato Scones mixed with skim milk powder in same oven to make use of heat.

Almost any bread, cake and cookies are beneficially enriched by adding a quarter cup of skim milk powder to a two-cup flour recipe, so work out your own ideas.

Now for that nutritious icing mentioned earlier in today's column, if you think this is impossible, read on. This idea came unexpectedly one day while mixing some non-instant skim powder with a fork. Licking off the sticky lumps from the tines when finished, I wondered how it would work to mix just enough icing sugar to give a sweet finish to plain cookies and unsweetened coffee breads.

The non-instant powder did not work well — too stodgy and not spreading, but regular instant did the job.

Now my wondering is whether the protein, vitamins and minerals in the milk more than offset the poor quality and harmful effects of the icing sugar?

Thinking of the iron and calcium, protein and B vitamins of the milk powder, I now think the idea is worth passing on for occasional use by thoughtful homemakers not on a sugar-free diet.

Skim Milk Powder Icing

4 Tbsp instant skim milk powder
2 tsp icing sugar (less if possible)
1 tsp cold water (approx.)

Mix to stiff spreading consistency, adding water by drops to avoid too lose a mixture. Surplus keeps well in covered glass jar in refrigerator. Bring to room temperature again to spread.

Paella: Tasty Gourmet Dish That Needn't Be Costly

By TINY BENNETT

By TINY BENNETT

Many great and classical dishes are, in fact, usually the common dishes of a particular country's food.

For example, I know of cooks who get into a great tizzy when they prepare pot au feu, the great classical soup and meat dish of France. Yet the average French homemaker prepares it once a week.

The same is true about the famed Spanish meal that we call paella, a rich, one-pot mixture of fish, shellfish, shrimps, lobster, chicken, vegetables and rice. But in Spain where the word paella describes the flat steel platter in which the meal is cooked, it is as common to all levels of society as were bacon and beans in the early Klondike days. You see, fuel is both limited and expensive in Spain and it makes sense to save it by cooking a complete meal in the one dish.

(From now on, I'll use "paella" in the North American sense, to describe the food, and use "platter" to describe the utensil.)

There are as many recipes for paella as stars in the sky, because Spanish cooks use what is available in their own region. Along the coast, paella will include as many types of seafood as are available. In inland regions where seafood is scarce and expensive, a paella will include all kinds of local vegetables and, usually, chicken.

However the one thing common to all regions, coastal and inland, is the use of rice. A paella consists of a one-pot dish of rice, vegetables and whatever is cheap and available.

In gourmet restaurants in North America, a paella is usually served as an expensive and very decorative meal, using lobster, spiny lobster tails, crawfish, oysters, clams, shrimps, hunks of fresh fish, chicken, vegetables and saffron-tinted rice. A paella for four done in this style can set you back $40 or more.

On the other hand, I prepare this delicious and very attractive dish at an average cost for six of under $3. Now that's just for the main dish, so you can add a bought, crusty loaf turned into garlic bread at 80 cents, a salad for six $1.50 and a good bottle of Canadian white wine $3 — a total meal for six at $8.30.

The above is calculated at market prices for ingredients in my own area at the time of writing, using all commercially supplied and bought ingredients. I've cooked massive paellas out on a fishing trip, where, using my catch, a dish for six would cost $1.15. And roughly the same cost is possible, if the cook has access to angler-caught sea, or fresh-water fish.

Paella platters, made in Spain, of fine steel, with two handles, are available from gourmet specialty stores at quite low cost. I bought a set 10 years ago when the largest size cost under $3. However, any large, deep skillet will suffice and an electric skillet is just superb for this dish.

Readers who are confirmed campers, and/or fisherfolk, should buy a genuine Spanish paella platter, for use at home and to replace a skillet on outdoors trips.

Here, then, is my 50 cents-a-head paella, using chicken wings and east coast bluefish.

(Naturally, you should follow the Spanish system of using what is best, cheapest and available locally.)

TINY'S PAELLA

Trim the tips from a dozen chicken wings and poach wings and tips in a quart of water in which you have added: one chicken cube, one teaspoon salt, one onion stick with two whole chives, one carrot, pared and sliced thin, one stalk of celery sliced, (and from the waste, outer stalks) and six whole peppercorns.

After 15 minutes, remove wings and leave pot to simmer into stock.

Into a paella platter, a big deep iron skillet or an electric skillet, pour two tablespoons olive oil, or your choice of vegetable oil, and when it gets hot, add the cooled chicken wings and brown evenly all over. Add one pound of fish, cut into one-inch cubes, and one cup short-grained rice.

Stir carefully to mix, tending the heat, so nothing burns and the uncooked rice doesn't spit out all over the kitchen.

Add one medium-sized onion, sliced ultra-thin, two smashed up cloves of garlic, (optional) one green sweet pepper, sliced thin, as are two stalks of celery from the inner part; including the green or yellowish leaves.

Stir thoroughly all the time, and if the platter or skillet shows a little dryish, which it will, carefully pour in a little more oil and at the meeting of the hot oil with the food in the platter, stir, so all are evenly coated.

Now take two cups of your home-made chicken stock, strained into a spare pot, put on your highest heat, dash in one teaspoon tumeric powder, and when it turns a beautiful yellow, pour some into the platter and stir it all in.

A paella is never covered, is cooked at fairly high heat, and it does tend to dry up, so stir it up from the bottom, adding a little more stock, as needed, to finish with a fairly dry dish. It is done, when the rice is soft, yet with just a touch of a crispy bite to it.

Difference Slight

VANCOUVER (CP) — There are only slight differences between a baked potato and one that has been boiled without the skin, says the British Columbia health department.

INDOOR GARDENS

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

I have a Donkey Tail — please, no offhand remarks about physical attributes — that I received for Christmas. I hate to admit ignorance, but I don't know what it is or how to care for it properly. The "gifter" informed me that the "tails" could grow to a magnificent six-foot length. Can you give me some tips on how to care for this plant? And what do you name a donkey with a six-foot tail? — K.A.

Dear K.A.:

The only "donkeys" with six-foot tails we've ever seen have been at the race track, and we couldn't pass along their names in this family newspaper. However, if it's possible to be serious in light of the tone of your letter, the Donkey Tail is a beautiful member of the Sedum family of succulents and is grown most successfully outdoors. It does well in a covered patio or porch, and will even stand a bit of direct sunlight. As far as growing one inside, it can be done if the plant is placed in good, filtered sunlight and kept as cool as possible.

But honestly, if you have an outside area, keep your new plant there, just like you would a regular donkey.

LITTLE PROTEIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cooked oatmeal provides about five grams of protein, says the British Columbia health department. The newer flaked and shredded breakfast cereals, including the so-called special high-protein cereals, have between two and 5.6 grams of protein a serving. The department says two grams of protein does little to legitimatize advertising claims for high protein value.

On Again–Off Again Dye Ban Like Play

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Dr. JEAN MAYER

After years of debate, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has acted to ban the controversial food dye Red 2. The events leading to this commendable decision can best be described as following an all-too-familiar ritual. The script goes something like this:

Cast of characters: Red 2, our most common artificial food color, in dozens of different foods; various FDA officials; our food processing industry; certain scientists; various consumer groups; miscellaneous researchers; a supporting cast of thousands of rats and mice.

Act I, scene 1: Time, 1964. It is suggested that Red 2 may be harmful to humans. Immediate testing is urged by the Food and Agriculture Organization and the World Health Organization's Expert Committee on Food Additives. Consumer activists, whether or not they understand toxicology, ask the FDA for a professional ban on the dye.

Scene 2: The manufacturers of Red 2 (responsible for $20 million in annual sales), the food industry (with $20 billion worth of products containing Red 2 and certain scientists, who invariably seem to favor the industry viewpoint whether or not they understand the toxicology involved, "pooh-pooh" the idea.

Scene 3: The FDA announces that there is no evidence that Red 2 is harmful (on the basis of rather slipshod tests done in the 1950s) but that, or course, they are "reviewing the problem of safety all the time."

Intermission: A few years pass, while more alarmed nations test the additive. The Russians state that Red 2 produces cancer in adult rats and fetal death, birth defects and genetic damage in the offspring of pregnant rats. This news is greeted with reassuring communiques from our food industry declaring that there is no cause for alarm. All is well with our food supply. Consumer groups (augmented by the prestigious National Foundation, formerly the March of Dimes) renew their protests against the additive.

Act II, scene 1: The FDA begins its own retesting of Red 2 for birth defects (results can be obtained from rat tests in a few months) and for cancer (which takes more than two years to complete).

Scene 2: The birth-defects tests show that many chickens and rats given Red 2 produce dead fetuses or malformed and stunted offspring, causing the FDA to move to restrict severely the used of the additive. Industry howls. Bowing to the storm, the FDA compromises, restricting only the amount of Red 2 that may be added, but not where the dye is used or how often.

Act III: Long-term tests proceed as industry spokesmen, consumer groups and scientists debate and wrangle. Richard Ronk, head of the Food Additives section of the FDA, is quoted as complaining: "We just don't have the proof to say that Red 2 is harmful to health. One of my scientists is saying that the dye is carcinogenic but not fetotoxic (that is, it produces cancer but does not harm the fetus); another says it's fetotoxic but not carcinogenic. It's hard to make any kind of permanent determination."

Act V, scene 1: Just three weeks before the ban is announced, FDA commissioner AlexandecM. Schmidt maintains over national television that studies show no carcinogenic, mutagenic or treatogenic effects. This assertion is based on the first analyses of the FDA's long-term cancer studies. The diets of the control rats and those being fed high doses of Red 2 have gotten mixed up for part of the study, and the initial results seemed to show no increase in cancer on diets high in Red 2. But further statistical evaluations make it clear that the differences in the incidence of various cancers between the high and low-dose animals would have been even greater if the diets had been fed as intended. Red 2 appears to promote or speed up the occurrence of a number of malignancies.

Scene 2: The FDA "finally" bans Red 2 on Jan. 19, 1976. And predictably, some industry spoksmen are still poh-poohing the evidence.

Epilogue: On Jan. 27, a federal judge, at the request of a group of manufacturers, issued a 10-day restraining order against the ban. On Feb. 6, the order is lifted. Feb. 9, the District Court of Appeals issues a new restraining order. On Feb. 11 the order is lifted and a hearing set for April 15. So the ban is on, and some companies speak of appealing to the Supreme Court.

The play is ending, not with a bang but a whimper. But the story is far from over. As it is announced that Red 2 will be replaced by Red 40, a dye given permanent certification by the FDA in 1971, questions have now been raised about its safety. A number of people have asked me whether we now should worry about all the Reds in between.

Fortunately, there are only three others on the list of approved colors. Red 4 is permitted only in maraschino cherries, Citrus Red 2 is allowed only to color blotchy orange skins and Red 3 is not technically suitable as a replacement for Red 2.

The Commissioner had assured us that these colors have been adequately tested and are safe. But I would feel easier if Dr. Schmidt had not said, when asked on the television program why Red 2 could not be banned in favor of Red 40, "We know much more about Red 2 than we do about Red 40."

Of course, the real question is: Is this tiresome and repetitive script necessary at all? Food colors are certainly not essential to the quality, let alone the safety, of our foods. I heartily approve a statement Commissioner Schmidt made after Red 2 was banned: "Clearly, the burden of proof belongs, not with the government or the consumer, but with those who claim that Red 2 has a safe and useful purpose in the food supply and in our drugs and cosmetics." Could we not substitute the words "food colors" for "Red 2" and make that the permanent motto of the FDA?

4 From B.C. To Talk On Peace

VANCOUVER (CP) — four British Columbia men will be among 10 Canadian delegates who will attend a meeting this month in Britain which they hope will lead to a United Nations conference on disarmament.

The B.C. delegates are Rev. Bob Burrows of the United Church; C. P. (Paddy) Neale, the secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver and District Labor Council; Ben Metcalfe, a freelance journalist; and Dr. James Foulks, a University of B.C. pharmacology professor.

Metcalfe said Monday that the sponsor of the local delegation is the Ad Hoc Committee for World Disarmament Conference, which is associated with the Peace Bureau of Stockholm and other peace groups.

The delegates leave Wednesday for the conference at York, England, which they hope will lead to a resolution before the United Nations proposing a full UN conference on disarmament.

The York conference will be attended by non-governmental groups from all the countries represented permanently on the UN security council as well as other nations.

Ocean Harvest Off Potential

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Man's current harvest of 69.5 millions tons of fish a year is far short of the biological potential from the world's fresh and ocean waters, a Canadian scientist says.

"With very little change, an additional 50 million tons could be taken," said Prof. Norman J. Wilimovsky of the University of British Columbia.

"If mankind is intelligent enough to co-operate and use the best available management techniques, 200 million metric tons of annual harvest could be attained," he told the North American wildlife conference here.

"... Major increases can only be had from the world oceans by obtaining the requisite data for management on a timely basis, reducing of waste from harvest, expanding our management abilities and developing the necessary human resources," he said. "The most important need is to carry on planning on a unified basis rather than on the existing piecemeal approach to resources use."

Wilimovsky said some ways man could get more protein from the sea include:

— Changing eating habits to use more kinds of fish for food. For example, he said, the Pacific ratfish, which commonly is thrown overboard in North America, forms the basis for a solid fish and chips industry in New Zealand and Australia. Squid or krill could become more common dishes.

— Eliminating waste. "With the exception of Southeast Asia, we shovel most of our fish overboard."

— Developing aquaculture: "In the future, you should be able to control or keep fish in ranches or pens at sea," he said, pointing to advances made in Norway.

— Controlling use of national fish resources among citizens by each country once a 200-mile limit goes into effect.

— A willingness to experiment, plus a great need for more data on which management decisions can be based.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Quite often, when one arrives at a game contract in which a delicate touch is required to bring it home safely, declarer is more worried about one of the defenders obtaining the lead than he is of the other. Today's deal embodies a specific application of this theme, namely, "keeping the dangerous hand out of the lead." The deal arose in a rubber-bridge game.

♣ A Q 10 7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ◇.

South's final call of three notrump was a bit pushy, and the game contract was a precarious one. But South's handling of the contract was top-notch, and he brought it home safely.

On West's opening diamond lead East put up the queen, which was permitted to win the trick. East returned the three of diamonds, South played the ten, and West won with the jack. The king of diamonds came next, East discarding the spade deuce as South won the trick with his ace.

Having but six sure winners, declarer appreciated that the club suit had to be attacked. And while doing so, all efforts had to be directed towards keeping West, with the two established diamonds, out of the lead. At trick four dummy was entered via the spade queen, after which a club was led, South finessing his queen. When Her Ladyship won the trick, South breathed a sigh of relief.

Had declarer now cashed his ace of clubs, East could have made a fine play by "unblocking", with the king. Declarer would now have found it impossible to create any additional club tricks unless he first permitted West to obtain the lead via the jack of clubs. And if he did that, West would cash his two remaining diamonds.

So South did not cash his ace of clubs. Instead he entered dummy via the spade ace to lead the board's remaining club. When East followed suit with the nine-spot, South played his ace. A third club lead was then taken by East's king — and South's fourth and fifth clubs became cashable winners.

Had East played the king of clubs on the second club lead off dummy, South would have allowed the king to have captured the trick. And, once again, he would have led the four club tricks he needed to fulfill the contract.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, March 25

ARIES (March 21-April 19): See clearly where money matters enter picture. You could be expecting too much for price. Be realistic. What appears to be a bargain could be a headache. Know it and do some personal investigating. Some of your desires could be temporarily out of reach. Don't be sold a bill of goods.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be practical. Keep goals in sight. Be aware of priorities. Organize — accept responsibility. Realtionship intensifies. Don't play games with emotions. Stakes might be higher than you suspect. Cancer, Capricorn persons may be involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish what you start. Rid yourself of another's burden. Spread influence. Insist on better distribution, display. Open lines of communication. Deal with Aries, Libra persons. One who is a "specialist" will provide aid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Involvement is featured. What might seem a harmless flirtation leads to "complications." Be aware of it and act accordingly. Highlight creativity, willingness to take a chance on yourself. Leo, Aquarius could be featured.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Legal ties, liens, escrow arrangements could affect cash flow. Key is to consolidate, to get data together and to begin campaign aimed at protecting your best interests. Aquarian could be very much in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accept social invitation. Change routine. Spread emotional wings. Refuse to be painted into corner. Deal with bright, exciting Gemini. What appeared hum-drum could actually be open door to adventure. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Ask questions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Aspects point to expenditures for personal pleasure. Have fun but you do have to face yourself in morning. You are relieved of bothersome details. Give full play to creative abilities. You are asked for "endorsement."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be ready for change of scenery, written material which requires personal attention. Gemini, Virgo could be involved. Someone wants information concerning you — of personal nature. Member of opposite sex is likely to be involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Relatives may argue and try to draw you into dispute. Remain neutral while attempting to restore harmony. Domestic changes indicated, especially where home surroundings are concerned. Taurus, Libra and Aquarius persons figure prominently. You gain access to secret you never asked to know.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be realistic about possessions, property, proper and valid appraisals. You gain enlightenment — what you do with your knowledge will be what counts. Pisces, Virgo persons are likely to be in picture. Refuse to be shortchanged.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle high — despite obstacles your efforts could pay dividends. You find that past experience blends with current events — to your advantage. Older individual pulls strings for your benefit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish rather than initiate projects — study Gemini message. Accent on communication, publishing, philosophy and journeys. Clandestine conference could be on agenda. You learn that a secret fear is based on — nothing. You'll be relieved, happier.

If March 25 is your birthday: You are introspective, a pioneer, a champion of unpopular causes. You are creative, sensitive, temperamental, an individual to your fingertips, subject to moods and a romantic at heart. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You may change residence this year — significant months of 1976 are February, September and November. Family situation will adjust to reality.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

It's a tough game today, with 2668. Two 6's, one 2, and one 8. Using all four each time but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots (no extra digits). For example, 82-6-6 is a solution for 70.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 106. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested. (Thanks to R. S. Johnson, Montreal, for some help.)

Yesterday's answer: BASS was 1355 (odd).

SC Wins ICBC Vote

The Social Credit government easily survived its first non-confidence motion Tuesday based on its handling of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia.

The motion, moved Friday by house Opposition Leader Bill King, was defeated by a vote of 32 to 18, with members of all three opposition parties voting in favor.

The non-confidence motion criticized the government for its failure to "relieve the motoring public from oppressive auto insurance rates."

The motion also attacked the government for failure to offer fair treatment for B.C.'s northern and interior drivers and failure to end discrimination against drivers under 25.

Earlier Tuesday, Bob Skelly (NDP — Alberni) said there is more financial data available on ICBC than on any other business in the province.

He was refuting government charges that the former New Democratic Party government attempted to hide the true costs of the government Autoplan program.

He said Norman Bortnick, general manager of ICBC, indicated when the corporation was established in 1974 that it would likely be six years before ICBC would begin showing a profit.

Losses during the start-up period for a company are not unusual, he added.

Describing the Social Credit government as "totally negative, cynical, vindictive," Skelly said large increases in Autoplan premiums this year indicate the government has launched a "traitorist attack on the citizens of this province."

"The Socreds have interfered politically with the rate structure of this corporation," he said, "as they said they wouldn't."

Skelly said the government will destroy ICBC and lay the tracks for private insurers in B.C.

Barbara Wallace (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) accused the government of juggling the accounts of ICBC in an attempt to discredit the NDP and Bob Strachan, former minister of transport and communications.

She said it is immoral for the government to increase premiums two and three times and it is shocking the government would reduce the minimum compulsory liability insurance to $50,000.

She said the people most likely to buy the minimum liability coverage are those least likely to afford the costs of an accident involving injuries.

"I'm suggesting that it's immoral for a government to put people in that kind of position," Mrs. Wallace said. "I'm shocked by the callous approach this government has taken to ICBC."

Fighting Debut By Bawlf

Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf's maiden speech to the legislature Tuesday was a lengthy, election-style attack on the NDP's financial record.

The capital city's new Social Credit MLA was loudly cheered by his colleagues throughout the speech as he described the losses of ICBC as a classic example of government mismanagement.

Speaking from a prepared text during debate of an opposition non-confidence motion over the Socred's handling of the insurance corporation, Bawlf said the deficit caused by the NDP is the largest loss incurred by any public or private corporation in B.C.'s history.

Now the NDP is in opposition it has come up with all kinds of ideas for better financing of ICBC, said Bawlf, but he said he has "never heard such rag-tag, bob-tailed, hare-brained ideas in (his) life."

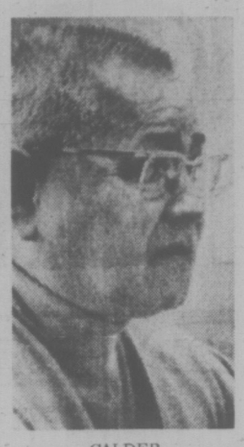
The young MLA and former city alderman said he would not support subsidies for ICBC when money is desperately needed in so many other areas.

Referring to issues of particular importance to Victoria, Bawlf said 30 per cent of the eligible voters in his constituency are senior citizens suffering severely from the effects of inflation.

The NDP didn't adequately adjust mincome payments to the increases in the cost-of-living or add any extended or intermediate health care beds in the capital region.

The lack of intermediate care beds is so great, he said, that both city hospitals have had to give up 80 acute care beds for intermediate care patients.

He also cited the lack of housing for young people and said with these kinds of priorities his government could not support subsidies for ICBC.



CALDER

'No Tokyo Flunky,' Says Calder

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Former premier Dave Barrett promised Frank Calder a job in Japan if he would leave politics, an angry Calder told the legislature Tuesday in his first speech as a Social Credit MLA.

Calder said he didn't want to be a "flunky in Toyko."

In a loud, rambling attack on his former NDP colleagues, the "Little Chief" from Atlin saved his toughest remarks for Barrett who he called a "screwball" and a "carpetbagger."

His references were often vague but he explained to reporters later, outside the house, that shortly before Barrett called the December election he tried to "push him into left field," along with other elder members of the NDP cabinet.

The incident occurred two days after the former premier stripped Leo Nimsick of his mines portfolio and Robert Strachan reluctantly accepted the post of agent-general in London, said Calder.

Barrett told the Atlin MLA if he stepped aside and an election was called, within a month after the NDP were re-elected he would give him a job in Japan, said Calder.

A trade office would be opened and because Calder's wife can speak Japanese, both would be offerred jobs, said Calder, but the former premier indicated Calder would not head the new office.

Calder said he didn't want to be "a token only . . . a flunky in Tokyo," and he told Barrett he was staying in politics.

A few days after the NDP called the election, Calder announced after 22 years as an NDP MLA that he was joing the Soereds.

Asked why he sounded so vindictive towards his former colleagues, Calder said it was because he believed his fellow MLAs "knew what the premier was going to do to me . . . but they never tipped me off."

Calder said Barrett's desire to dump him had nothing to do with an incident with Victoria police in 1973 which caused the former premier to remove Calder from the cabinet. The reason, he said, was the NDP's opposition to Indian land claims.

NDP members sat quietly in the house and refused to comment later about Calder's attacks.

The 61-year-old Atlin MLA and Nishga Indian Chief said if he ever wrote a book about his experiences it would make "Judy LaMarsh's book look like a peanut."

His new Socred colleagues loudly applauded when he said there was no communication between the former NDP cabinet and its backbench.

He said he was never told about the financial "mess" in ICBC and added that he had been elected because his "good friend," former public works minister Bill Hartley, had promised $25 car insurance.

Calder attacked various members of the NDP caucus on occasion but would then retract and call them his comrades.

He criticized them for their unparliamentary "12-year-old remarks" and added "I've been here for a long time and I have heard this crap all the time."

When NDP Hose Leader Bill King appeared to be hiding his laughter at Calder's inflammatory, often disjointed harangue, Calder started to attack him and then said "but you're a good friend of mine . . . but I don't think you have a chance."

He later said he has the greatest respect for the NDP, saying it has brought to the legislature some of B.C.'s greatest politicians, and it gave him the opportunity to be in the house.

BORROWING BILL SET AT $400M

Legislation giving the government authority to borrow up to $400 million to cover anticipated deficits this year was introduced in the house Tuesday.

The bill was promised by Premier Bennett in his state of the province address last month when he said the province will be $541 million in debt at the end of the 1975-76 fiscal year.

B.C. can reduce the debt by $143 million with surplus cash revenue but Bennett said the government will have to borrow $400 million to cover the remainder of the debt.

It will be the first time since 1958 "tax dollars will have to go to pay for the cost of borrowed money," said Bennett.

The opposition has been fiercely critical of the move, arguing that the deficit is phoney since $181 million is the projected ICBC loss which the government has no obligation to cover.

Both the ICBC deficit and the entire provincial deficit do not require borrowed funds, according to the opposition, because they can be carried.

The bill, given first reading, allows the province to borrow up to $400 million "to make good the anticipated deficit."

The government has indicated it will borrow the funds as it needs them and will try to borrow much of them from internal funds.

The legislation allows the money to be borrowed by temporary loans by way of bank overdrafts or a line of credit a bank, trust company, credit union or from any other corporation of government or by issue and sale of provincial securities.

Cutback Confirmed

Mines Minister Tom Waterland confirmed Tuesday a cutback in production at Granduc Mines with the loss of employment for 80 men.

But he placed blame for reduction squarely on the shoulders of the NDP and promised legislation to amend the royalty system established by the former government.

The mine, in the northern town of Stewart, plans to reduce its copper production from 4,500 to 3,400 tons a day and close one camp with 80 employees.

NDP members in the house hooted when Waterland made the statement chanting "under Social Credit."

But the minister drew applause from his own members when he said the mine had been suffering, especially in the last three years. Under the NDP's royalty system, he said the mine lost $410,000 in the first six months of 1975 but was still forced to pay $450,000 in royalties.

"So it's no wonder they have to reduce production," he said.

When pressed by Liberal leader Gordon Gibson about assistance for mines, Waterland said long-promised legislation to end the royalties will be brought down in an orderly fashion.

He also said he had discussed employment relief for the miners with Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Canada Wants Orion, Despite Lockheed Taint

OTTAWA (CP) — International scandals and questionable future financing notwithstanding, the Canadian government still wants the Lockheed Orion patrol plane.

"We are convinced that the Lockheed LRPA (long range patrol aircraft) is the best equipment choice," Defence Minister James Richardson said in a statement Tuesday night.

He said the government is in the final stages of concluding safeguards that will protect the government from any failure of Lockheed.

The statement came after the government rejected opposition suggestions that it give up plans to replace the Argus patrol plane with 18 Orions at a cost of slightly more than $1 billion.

Those suggestions, from the Progressive Conservative defence critic and two New Democrats, touched on maladministration at home and Lockheed bribes abroad.

The statement also came after Conservatives questioned the connection between two former top-ranked deputy ministers and Lockheed and one of those men's rejection of any hint of conflict of interest or wrongdoing.

And it came as a Commons committee was informed Lockheed had told Canadian representatives verbally last year that it could finance the purchase of their aircraft at a time when the company had an agreement with the U.S. government and 24 banks that it would not borrow any more.

"I can't believe what I'm hearing," said Allan McKinnon (PC—Victoria), his party's defence critic.

Meanwhile, after agreeing with Japanese officials to share information about Lockheed Aircraft Corp. payoffs, U.S. officials say they hope to negotiate agreements with several other countries to trade information in the Lockheed investigation.

Assistant Attorney-General Richard Thornburgh reported that development Tuesday night as he signed an agreement obligating U.S. and Japannese law enforcement agencies to share information gathered in their separate investigations of Lockheed payoffs in Japan.

Bras d'Or Given Reprieve

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department intends to preserve the hydrofoil vessel Bras d'Or for another five years, Defence Minister James Richardson says.

In a statement distributed to the Commons defence committee Tuesday, Mr. Richardson said the experimental vessel is kept in preservation at an annual cost of $30,000.

The vesssel was developed by the department to study fixed hydrofoils. It was part of an over-all program under which the United States studied foils that retract into the hull and the British studied Hovercraft. The three countires shared what they learned.

ECONOMIC AXE FELLS 'MPS' RENOVATIONS

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal spending restraints have deprived cabinet ministers of the right to renovate and refurnish their offices — a practice which has cost at least $890,000 during the eight years of the Trudeau administration.

Civil servants who watch over ministerial spending in several government departments say members of Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet no longer select the shaggy wall hangings, marble tables, leather chesterfields and four-pound ash trays that go with an important job.

Robert Coates (PC — Cumberland-Colchester North) read in the Commons a list of cabinet and high officials and the amounts each has spent in refurbishing.

One of the higher amounts he cited was $13,973 for new furniture and $14,501 for office renovations by the assistant deputy minister of industry, trade and commerce.

Written replies tabled in the Commons for 25 of 30 departments show that from 1968 until the restraints were imposed last December cabinet ministers spent at least $890,977 on renovations and furniture for the two offices they each have, one on Parliament Hill and one at their departmental headquarters.

The figure probably is even higher because five departments failed to provide information while others reported furniture spending only since 1973 or later.

Gen. Quang Still Here

QUANG

OTTAWA — The problem of what to do with General Dang Van Quang will be settled "very soon," Immigration Minister Robert Andras told the Commons yesterday.

The minister indicated that time was closing for him to decide whether to send General Quang, ordered deported from Canada last July, back to South Vietnam.

Although the door was not yet completely closed to having the United States accept General Quang as a sponsored immigrant, Andras told reporters "in my opinion that process is dragging on too long."

The U.S. has refused to take Quang as a refugee but there was yet "no clear answer" on the issue of immigrant status.

Quang was ordered deported from Canada because of allegations that he was involved in drug trafficking in South Vietnam prior to last year's commnuist takeover of that country.

Reactor Sale A 'Tinderbox'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs called on the government Tuesday for a moratorium on sales of nuclear reactors abroad to halt the danger of nuclear-weapons proliferation.

But External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen replied that a unilateral end to sales would not solve the problem. Canada has a duty as a wealthy nation to share its technology with developing contries, he said.

The comments came during Commons debate on a Progressive Conservative motion condemning Canadian nuclear policy, particularly a decision to negotiate a resumption of nuclear aid to India. All the opposition parties favored the motion but the majority Liberals defeated it 125 to 98.

Allan Lawrence (PC-Northumberland-Durham) described the sale of a Candu reactor to South Korea as the most dangerous deal ever made by Ottawa. The sale of a reactor to Argentina was termed "a tinderbox ready to ignite."

Former Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said Canada has to be particularly careful in its sales of nuclear reactors, because of its bitter experience with India.

India exploded a nuclear bomb in May, 1974, with material from a Canadain-supplied reactor, despite assurances this would not be done. The Indians said the device was for peaceful, not military, purposes.

As a result, Canada stopped nuclear aid to India and stopped work on another Candu power plant under construction there. Resumption of this assistance now is being negotiated.

T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) reiterated his party's demand for a moratorium until supplier nations work out an effective agreement to ensure they are used for peaceful purposes.

Extra Milk Not 'Scraps' —Whelan

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada cannot distribute milk powder surpluses in underdeveloped countries "like some scraps," Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Tuesday.

Whelan was replyingg in the Commons to Andrien Lambert (SC-Bellechasse). He suggested Canada's inability to get rid of a huge surplus of skim milk powder on the world market had more to do with the lack of purchasing power in underdeveloped nations than in world surpluses.

These countries "have the sovereign right to say what they want for their people who happen to be in need," he said. "You just don't throw it at them and hope they accept it like some scraps we are distributing."

Another Social Credit MP, Eudore Allard (Rimouski), suggested that the Canaian International Development Agency distribute the surplus skim milk powder.

A new dairy policy for the next year, which will set out production quotas as well as the support price, will be announced by April.

Puget Whales To Go Free

SEATTLE (AP) — The two sides that have been battling over the destiny of two killer whales captured in Puget Sound reached a stipulated agreement Tuesday, a Sea World Inc. official said.

The agreement, negotiated under the guidance of United States District Judge Morell Sharp, provides for the release of the whales into University of Washington custody for no more than 60 days for research purposes.

When the university researchers have completed their studies, the whales must be released, the agreement stipulates.

Sea World, which captured the whales March 7 in southern Puget Sound's Budd Inlet, has agreed not to hunt whales any more within the State of Washington.

State Attorney-General Slade Gorton, who initiated court action against Sea World seeking the whales' release, said he is happy with the agreement.

The state contended that the whales were caught under conditions that violated a federal permit allowing Sea World Inc. of San Diego to capture four of the animals for display.

Sea World's party captured six whales, but three escaped and one was released. Of the two left, one was earmarked for University of Washington research, the other for Sea World shows.

Sea World had said it would continue trying to capture more whales.

U.S. Proposes 50% Cut In Duties

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States Tuesday proposed a broad tariff-cutting formula designed to slash over-all duty levels among industrialized countries by more than 50 per cent.

The proposal came at the opening of the latest round of talks in the year-old series of multilateral trade negotiations being held in Geneva. The talks are known as the Tokyo Round, because it was there in 1973 that the talks were agreed to.

The talks had been stalemated through much of last year, in large part because the worldwide recession made trade concessions politically difficult.

In a terse paper issued in Washington, the Office of Special Trade Negotiator called the U.S. proposal a "major initiative." But tariffs in the industrialized world are already relatively low — the range is between 5 and 15 per cent — and the major stumbling blocks to freer world trade are what economists call "non-tariff barriers" such as quotas.

However, there are wide disparities among tariffs, with some being well outside the 5 to 15 per cent range and the average level of 8 per cent which prevails among the world's biggest industrial countries.

The U.S. proposal speaks to reducing some of those outlandishly high tariffs by combining a general across-the-board cut — say 50 per cent — with a special trim on high tariffs, called "harmonization."

The United States would not say exactly how big its overall reduction would be beyond stating that it was more ambitious than the one achieved in the last round of multi-lateral trade talks.

New Pipe Scheme Uses Alcan Highway

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A new pipeline scheme for Alaskan natural gas, following the Alcan Highway to Fort Nelson, B.C., surfaced here today Wednesday.

The idea came under close scrutiny at a joint session of two U.S. Senate committees, Commerce and Interior.

The staff of the commerce committee had already prepared a draft paper discussing it, and sought elaboration today from companies which might be involved, including the Alberta Gas Trunk Line Company and Westcoast Transmission Company.

The scheme "could have some definite advantages," Alberta Gas Trunk President S. Robert Blair told the committee session in prepared testimony.

But it would junk the Arctic Gas proposal for a Mackenzie Valley pipeline system and it raises new questions about the timing of decisions both in Canada and in the U.S. about the route for pipelines to carry gas from Alaska and the Mackenzie Delta to consumers in both countries.

Study Links Pill Ban to RC Decline

WASHINGTON (WP) — A new study of American Catholics blames the sharp decline in religious practices during the past decade on a credibility gap produced by Pope Paul's 1967 ban on artificial birth control.

The study by the National Opinion Research Centre at the University of Chicago contradicts a widely accepted assumption that the Catholic Church's problems stem from the reforms of the Second Vatican Council.

"If It had not been for the council, the deterioration of religious behavior within American Catholicism would have been much worse," asserted the Rev. Andrew M. Greeley, a priest-sociologist who was the principal investigator for the study.

The study released Tuesday, found that more than four-fifths of 48 million Catholics in the U.S. approve the switch from Latin to English in the Liturgy, and that about two-thirds approve of guitar masses, secular clothing for nuns and progressive methods of religious education — all changes brought about by Vatican II, which was held from 1962 to 1965.

"The Vatican Council was one of the most successful religious phenomena in human history," Father Greeley said in a personal "afterword" appended to the report.

"I have no doubt that historians of the future will judge Humanae Vitae (the anti-birth control encyclical) to be one of the worst mistakes in the historyof Catholic Christianity — and this particularly because it seems to have nipped in the bud the splendid prospects for growth and development set in motion by the Second Vatican Council," he added.

FISHING BOAT SALE POSTPONED

TACOMA (AP) — Auction of 57 fishing boats purchased from financially - strapped fishermen by the state was postponed Tuesday until April 24, the department of fisheries said.

A spokesman said the Harbor Marine sale of gillnet boats was delayed because of various court actions related to it and a dispute over who will be auctioneer.

Federal money was used to buy the boats from the fishermen. State buyback regulations prohibit use of the boats for commercial fishing in Washington waters.

But treaty Indians and the federal government last week asked U.S. District Judge George Boldt to rule on whether they could buy the boats for commercial use.

In addition, a state senator has asked the attorney general to issue an opinion on whether Oregon fishermen can buy the boats and use them for commercial operations in the Columbia River.

Also in dispute is the auctioneer. The state has tentatively chosen Maynard's Auctioneers of Vancouver to handle the sale, but the state auctioneering association has protested that.

A fisheries spokesman said because of the protest, the state will not complete its contract with Maynard's.

The department, he said, is considering conducting the auction itself.

CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMMISSION

Hearings

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS

TRANSCONTINENTAL PASSENGER TRAIN SERVICES (Montreal / Toronto-Vancouver)

In a policy statement on rail passenger services issued Jan. 29, 1976, the Minister of Transport announced a major program to develop an improved basic network of rail services in Canada. As an integral part of this program, the Railway Transport Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission will hold hearings to determine interests and concerns of the public relating to the two existing transcontinental passenger train services (Montreal/Toronto-Vancouver).

The Railway Transport Committee invites submissions from all interested parties on questions relevant to the above, and without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Committee is particularly interested in hearing evidence and submissions in the following main areas:

a) transcontinental routing;
b) frequency of service;
c) coordination with connecting rail, bus and air services (including train departure/arrival times, scheduled stops, and inter-modal ticketing);
d) meal service (including type of meals offered, dining facilities provided and related pricing policy);
e) sleeping-car service (including type of facilities offered and related pricing policy);
f) fare structures;
g) train capacities (including peak and off-peak travel periods);
h) cruise or excursion trains (special trains, scheduled primarily for recreational travel, offering full range of on-board services, priced at a compensatory level);
i) anticipated future demand for train travel;
j) energy usage.

A list of considerations for the restructuring of transcontinental rail passenger service and information on revenue and cost may be obtained at the office of the Secretary of the Railway Transport Committee (address below).

The schedule is as follows, with a starting time of 10 a.m. in each case:

COMMENCING	LOCATION	HEARING ROOM ADDRESS
Apr. 6/76	Ottawa	Commission Court Room, Centennial Tower Building, 400 Laurier Avenue West, OTTAWA, Ontario.
June 14/76	Vancouver	Canadian Citizenship Court, 2nd Floor, McMillan Bloedel Building, 1075 West Georgia Street, VANCOUVER, British Columbia.
June 28/76 (Summary session)	Ottawa	Commission Court Room, Centennial Tower Building, 400 Laurier Avenue West, OTTAWA, Ontario.

Other hearings will be held at Toronto, Sudbury, Montreal, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary.

All persons wishing to be heard will be given an opportunity to make either written or oral presentations at the hearings. Persons who are unable to attend the hearings may submit their views in writing to the Railway Transport Committee by mailing the same to:

The Secretary,
Railway Transport Committee,
Canadian Transport Commission,
275 Slater Street,
Ottawa, Ontario.
K1A 0N9
Telex No.: 053-4254
Tel. No.: (613) 996-4468

with a copy, in the case of the Canadian National Railways services, to:

Mr. H.J.G. Pye, Q.C.,
Canadian National Railways,
MONTREAL, P.Q.,

and in the case of Canadian Pacific Limited services, to:

Mr. G.P. Miller, Q.C.,
Canadian Pacific Limited,
Montreal, P.Q.

After the hearings, the Committee will issue a Summary of Findings to enable all interested parties, and the Canadian public, to examine the collective concerns expressed. A few weeks after, the Committee proposes to prepare and circulate widely a Preferred Plan which will set out, with some particularity, a re-designed transcontinental passenger train service. At that point, any person wishing to comment upon the Preferred Plan may do so by submitting his or her views in writing to the Secretary of the Committee. The Committee intends to examine these submissions carefully and to make whatever modifications to the Preferred Plan as appear to be appropriate. It is the intention of the Committee that a Final Plan will be prepared and issued before the end of the current calendar year.

J. d'Avignon
Secretary
Railway Transport Committee.

Loch Ness Debate Rages

Dr. Robert Rines of Boston rose in an anteroom of 900-year-old Westminster Hall, one of the most historic buildings in Britain, and spoke words as strange as any ever uttered in its ancient precincts.

He had evidence, he said, pointing to the existence of a family of giant prehistoric reptiles in the waters of Loch Ness in Scotland.

It was these great beasts — 47 to 62 feet long — sighted intermittently since the Sixth Century who undoubtedly had given rise to the legend, now revealed as probable truth, of the Loch Ness monster.

And to enthusiastic applause from some of the audience of scientists, technicians and members of Parliament and doleful head-shaking from others, he proceeded to show what he considers underwater photographs of the monster taken by his expeditions in 1972 and April of last year.

When Rines had concluded his "presentation" as he called it and his experts had given brief explanations of their methods, the meeting was opened to questions at which it was expected skeptical scientists would launch a vigorous counterattack.

Specialists of the British Museum of Natural History did challenge the interpretation of one of the key photographs — they said it was the caudal fin of a fish and not the six-foot diamond-shaped flipper of a huge reptile — but they stood nearly alone.

Not because everyone else had been convinced ("I am enormously skeptical," said zoologist Dr. John Attridge of the University of London), but as a tribute of sorts to the quality of experts Rines assembled through his Academy of Applied Science. Mistaken, they might be, said one scientist, but they deserved to have their research treated with respect.

"We need time to consider this evidnece," said Dr. Humphry Greenwood of the Natural History museum. "It must be published in all its details. I don't think a zoologist could come to a conclusion yet.. It was beautifully presented but unscientific."

Rines showed three main photographs — one of what appeared to be a horned head with reddish mottled skin, another showing the alleged flipper and a third described as possibly a front view of a large reptile with the suggestion of a head, a long neck and a bulbous body with flippers.

Prof. Harold Edgerton of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, inventor of the strobe light, helped set up the photographic equipment and talked about the technique to the meeting.

The natural History people challenged the flipper picture and another of their group, Dr. Gordon Shields, suggested the monster "head" could be the decomposing head of a Scottish steer.

There were also complaints that Rines and his staunch British supporter, naturalist Sir Peter Scott, had overstepped scientific bounds by naming the beast nessiteras rhombopteryx (diamond-flippered wonder of Loch Ness) before there was physical proof — a live or dead specimen — of its existence.

Scott said it was done to enable the monster to be listed as an endangered species.

Since the meeting, scientists of several disciplines have been discussing the Rines evidence.

The magazine New Scientist said most people would agree with a British Museum zoologist who argued:

"There is no evidence that it is a living object — or that it is the same object in all the photographs."

The magazine's own criticism was uncharacteristically muted. It said the precautions against outsiders trying to confuse the cameras apparently had not been foolproof and "it would make sense if the Rines team took stronger precautions against fraud in future work." It headlined its article: "The Pictures Show Something but is it Nessie?"

But it conceded that "technologically Rines team is more high-powered than many of his critics have given him credit for" and that "several U.S. academics have staked their reputations on the photographs."

New Scientist said it submitted the sonar record, allegedly showing Nessie's spoor to an expert who said it indicated there was "a biggish target — measured in meters" involved.

"It was definitely not a school of fish or eels," the expert said.

Nevertheless many scientists say they will not believe there is a prehistoric reptile landlocked by the melting ice age, in Loch Ness till someone brings in a carcass dead or alive.

POLICE DEMAND SHOTGUNS

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgary detective said Tuesday night the Calgary Police Association is planning to demand that shotguns be mounted on all police cars in the city.

"We won't accept anything less," said Detective Nick Graham, an association member who was seriously injured in a shootout Dec. 20, 1974, in Southeast Calgary.

He said the association has included the demand in its 1976 contract proposals and will present a special bid for shotgun protection today at a meeting of the Calgary Police Commission.

$1M Profit In Eggs

SASKATOON (CP) — The general manager of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) has charged the federal government with allowing a small group of private traders to reap windfall profits of at least $1 million a year.

Max Roytenberg of Ottawa made the comment Tuesday in an address to the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Commercial Egg Marketing Board.

He attacked the government's decision to double the number of American egg imports to three million dozen a year without consulting domestic producers.

"The industry trade and commerce department offers a small group of individuals the right to bring this product in," he said. "In the process they achieve large windfall gains which they do not earn."

He said import licences are a licence to "profiteer" and called for egg imports to be handled through CEMA.

Not Fair—Liberal

REGINA (CP) — Liberal Leader Dave Steuart angrily accused the speaker of the legislature Tuesday of "not playing fair."

Ignoring Speaker John Brockelbank's calls for order and the fact that officials had switched off his microphone, Steuart warned the speaker that question-period rules would not work unless they are fairly enforced.

Overdose Confirmed

CALGARY (CP) — The results of an autopsy performed on the body of John Frederick Gamble, one of two gunmen involved in a robbery and hostage incident here March 12-14, show he died from an overdose of methadone.

Chief Coroner J. D. Butt said Tuesday death was caused by asphyxiation due to the depression of the breathing mechanism caused by the methadone, a drug used in the treatment of heroin addicts.

Offices Occupied

REGINA (CP) — The offices of the deputy minister of the Saskatchewan social services department were occupied for two hours Tuesday by about 40 persons who said they represented at least a half dozen native organizations.

Spokesmen for the demonstrators said the occupation was called to protest the department's policies concerning the adoption of native children and their placement in foster homes.

The demonstration was reported to have been peaceful and no protestors were arrested.

Jaasma Faces Trial

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Jaasma, former president of Cosmopolitan Life Assurance Co., was committed Tuesday to stand trial on two of 13 charges related to fraud.

Jaasma and James Alfred Lampard of Red Deer were committed on one charge each of fraud, and of endorsing a document with intent to defraud.

Four other charges against the two, of uttering a forged document and forgery, were withdrawn during a preliminary hearing which began Monday.

More than $600,000 is alleged to have been stolen or defrauded from individuals, the Seaboard Life Assurance Co. and Cosmopolitan during a period from June, 1970, to February, 1971.

Rising Prices Boost Thefts

TORONTO (CP) — Rising prices have pushed an increasing number of Canadians to steal food and clothing, a survey conducted by Retail Securities Agencies shows.

Robin Tuff, the firm's senior vice-president, said in an interview that people who steal basic necessities have become prevalent in shoplifting cases.

The firm surveyed 300 stores in Canada. The characteristics of the 3,700 shoplifters who had been arrested were fed into a computer.

Mr. Tuff said pensioners made up only half of one per cent of all those caught shoplifting, but 13 per cent of them were caught stealing food.

These figures show that pensioners are honest but poverty is driving them to steal, said Mr. Tuff.

The survey also showed that nine per cent of the people caught stealing were unemployed. About 19 per cent of these were caught stealing food.

Mr. Tuff said the survey showed that the country's welfare system might not be working and food stores are filling the gap.

The survey also showed that students, who made up 48 per cent of those caught, stole smaller amounts of items than adults. Women stole more expensive items and people 20 to 40 years old stole the most in dollar terms.

Dr. Aaron Levine, a Montreal psychiatrist, said in an interview that inflation is partly to blame.

"People think of stealing as their way to get back at higher prices," he said.

"For other people it's the need to take a risk. For them it's a compulsive act."

However, a downtown Toronto department store detective said that when some people come into the store "they know exactly what they are doing."

He said other people are caught with an accomplice and some even have a list of what they are going to steal.

"There are three main reasons why people steal," he said. "It's the accessibility of goods, poor service and financial need.

"We get all kinds of people stealing here who should know better—nuns, doctors and policemen."

The detective said the only way to stop people from stealing is to catch them.

"That's probably the only bright spot in the whole picture," he said. "We get almost no repeaters."

Seat Belt Lesson Learned

TORONTO (CP) — Andrew Clark, an administrator at Lyndhurst Hospital, which treats many persons paralysed in car accidents, says he believes seat belts help save lives and prevent serious injuries.

Mr. Clark, who suffered a broken neck when his airplane crashed in the Second World War, said Lyndhurst is one of the few hospitals in the world for the treatment of spinal cord injuries. It was started in 1945 to care for paralysed war veterans.

In 1950, when most of the veterans had left the hospital, it was taken over by the Canadian Paraplegic Association.

About 60 per cent of the hospital's patients now are young persons paralysed in automobile accidents, Mr. Clark said.

He said a recent study of car accidents in which Lyndhurst patients were involved convinced him that those wearing seat belts had a better chance of survival and of escaping with less-serious injuries.

Ron Loranger, 24, of Falconbridge, Ont., who lost control of his arms and legs 10 months ago in a car accident, said the seat belt he was wearing might have saved his life.

A passenger in the car was not wearing his seat belt and was thrown through the windshield and killed, Mr. Loranger said.

Clara Chevrier, 25, of Oshawa, Ont., was not wearing her seat belt when she was pinned in a car following an accident. She lost the use of both legs but said she does not know whether wearing a seat belt would have made a difference.

Several other passengers not wearing seat belts were thrown from the car and received less serious injuries,

Metric Measures Criticized

FONTHILL, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Metric Association says the federal government has made poor choices in its selection of metric units to measure wind speed and atmospheric pressure.

The federal environment department plans to introduce kilometres an hour for wind speed and kilopascals for atmospheric pressure on April 1.

But the metric association, a private non-profit organization, says there are several advantages in selecting metres per second for wind speed and killibars for atmospheric pressure.

The association, which says it has more than 600 members across Canada, has sumbitted briefs outlining its view to Prime Minister Trudeau and leaders of the Progressive Conservative party and the NDP.

It says kiometres an hour is too small a unit for wind speeds.

It says the second is the fundamental unit of time in the international system of units. The hour is not metric and is not used in the international system of units.

As well, metres per second is the main unit for wind speed used by the World Meteorological Association.

For measuring atmospheric pressure, it says the millibar is the universal metric unit used by the World Meteorological Organization and by international aviation authorities.

The association also says millibar is a much more pleasing word than kilopascal.

Library Hopes Dashed

Hopes for more provincial government funds for the Greater Victoria Library Board were dashed Tuesday by the provincial Library Development Commission.

The commission told the library board that its request for a grant covering 20 per cent of the library's annual operating budget was rejected.

The best the library can hope for now is a continuation of last year's 5.6 per cent grant.

The commission told the library board it was disturbed by news stories which said that the grant was to reduce the cost of library services to Greater Victoria property owners.

The idea of grants from the commission, the letter said, was to increase and upgrade library services.

The letter also pointed out that higher grants were dependent on regionalization of library services.

The Greater Victoria library system is owned and operated by the four core municipalities — Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay.

There's also a Vancouver Island Regional Library which is operated by the province and has a total of 28 outlets all over Vancouver Island, including Greater Victoria's outlying districts.

Members of the Greater Victoria Library Board made it clear they had no intention of allowing the library to be swallowed by the Vancouver Island library system.

Library director Donald Miller warned that such a move would be detrimental to the Victoria library.

"In effect, we would be subsidizing library service on the rest of Vancouver Island," he said.

The library board decided to request a meeting with the commission in the hope of obtaining at least some grant.

The board also decided to ask the four owner-municipalities to reach an interim cost-sharing agreement, based on the old agreement which expired Dec. 31, 1975.

A new agreement is to be worked out sometime this year.

SEARCH ABANDONED

The search for a man missing after the 29-foot herring boat Cassiar 64 struck Hannah rock off the northern tip of Vancouver Island Monday night has been abandoned.

The rescue co-ordination centre said the body of a second man was found strapped to an overturned skiff near the wrecked vessel.

No names were released and no identification has been made of the body of the man. RCMP are in charge of the matter, said the rescue centre.

Winds gusting to 70 knots Tuesday hampered search efforts as craft in the area were forced to seek sheltered waters.

The Cassiar 64 is the fifth herring boat to sink or run aground in the herring season which began Feb. 29.

The Cassiar death was the third this season.

16,000 Guard Games Security

MONTREAL (CP) — A 16,-000-man police and military Olympic security force has been put together to avert a repeat of a massacre at the Olympic Games in Munich in which Israeli athletes were killed by terrorists.

Guy Toupin, assistant-director of the Montreal Urban community police force and co-ordinator of the chief committee on public safety for the Olympics, told a news conference Tuesday the security force "will be able to handle anything from a disaster to a catastrophe."

Despite the size of the force, none of the police or military officers attending the committee's first news conference could offer any guarantees against a recurrence of the Munich terrorist raid which left 17 dead, including 11 Israeli athletes.

"There is always a risk," Maj.-Gen. Roland A. Reid, chief co-ordinator of the military support team, said. "The only way to be 100-per-cent sure nothing happens is to tell everybody to stay home."

The Canadian armed forces will have 16,000 men and women involved in the Olympic effort, Maj.-Gen. Reid said. Of those, 5,650 will be peace officers directly involved with security duties.

The role of military officers on security detail will be as a supporting unit for the police forces, he said.

The RCMP will have 1,500 men and women handling a wide range of duties including the protection of dignitaries and athletes and their entourage, as well as closer surveillance of airports and border crossings, RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon said.

The commissioner said several dignitaries will be visiting Montreal for the Games, although their exact number has not yet been determined.

While Mr. Toupin said the public should be prepared for strict security measures at the various Games sites, Maj.-Gen. Reid said they would not be "concentration camps."

"Soldiers will not be running around the site in full battle gear . . . But they will be armed," he said.

Should terrorism occur despite the elaborate security plans, officers have to anticipate every situation and be prepared to cope with it "with the minimum loss of life or property damage," Donald Cobb, an RCMP superintendent and head of the Olympic intelligence subcommittee, said

He said that any potential target "is less likely to be a Canadian than a visitor."

Mr. Cobb said the intelligence services of some other countries have co-operated in the gathering of information on various terrorist groups "but we're not going to say who is or isn't co-operating with us."

Intelligence officers have built a system of communication with Canadian groups who, for political or ethnic reasons, might want to manifest opposition to certain Olympic visitors, he said.

The communications were to ensure the groups "demonstrate within the restraints of the law."

Depot Closure Idea 'Appalling'

Closing the regional recycling depot on Borden Street would add up to $40,000 to garbage collection costs in Saanich, Ald. Joe Bourque predicted Tuesday.

The region's budget, he said, includes $63,900 for recycling compared to anticipated revenues of $22,500.

"Where's the saving?" he asked, adding he is appalled by regional board director Earl Pallister's comments that recycling should be phased out of the board's budget this year.

Bouque said the requested $20,000 increase for the project was prompted mainly because Saanich council has boosted the rent on the Borden depot.

Depot workers, most of them volunteers and children, he added, must work in "the most deplorable conditions."

Conquer Cancer Campaign Sets Target of $160,000

The annual "Conquer Cancer Campaign" begins April 1 in the Capital district with a target of $160,000, Wilfred Burton, head of the Vancouver Island branch, said Tuesday.

Last year the district campaign raised $148,000. Objective of the provincial campaign this year is $1,050,000.

Burton said a mailing to 70,000 homes will go out the first week of next month, together with a pamphlet explaining where the money goes.

Seventy per cent of all funds is devoted to cancer research, 20 per cent goes to public education programs and assistance to patients and 10 per cent of administration and fund raising.

Only in Sidney and North Saanich will the district campaign be conducted door-to-door by volunteers.

Burton said research must continue because each year about 70,000 Canadians are told they have cancer of one form or another. While better diagnosis and treatment have increased survival rates from one in four to more than 50 per cent, more than 30,000 a year are still dying from the disease.

Busboy Tells Court How He Was Knifed

An incident involving a drunk in a hotel elevator led to a dispute over room payment and ended in a stabbing, county court was told Tuesday.

Frank Ross Ogilvie, who used to work as a busboy at the Wilson Motor Inn, 850 Blanshard, told a jury and Judge E. J. C. Steward he and fellow employee Ted Lemmen pulled a drunken man from the elevator between 1:30 and 2 a.m. June 19, 1975.

The drunk, who struggled and kicked, was escorted to the street but was then picked up and taken upstairs by Glen Scott Kelly, 20, of Maple Ridge, Ogilvie testified.

Kelly is accused of wounding with intent causing bodily harm to Ogilvie by stabbing him with a knife.

Ogilvie said he, Lemmen and Hayden Jones, manager of the Wig and Dickie nightspot in the hotel, followed the two men upstairs. When they knocked on the hotel room door, a third man answered.

He said the three were supposed to pay their bill and leave the hotel.

He said he saw the third man who answerel the hotel room door and the man who was drunk in the elevator and "they weren't going to pay the bill." Eventually all six ended up in the underground parking lot.

He said Kelly jumped in his van and started it up.

Ogilvie said he also jumped in the van and grabbed the keys from the ignition and was grabbed by Kelly.

There was pushing and shoving and then I felt a sharp blow to my stomach," he said.

He got out of the van, started walking away and the next thing he remembered was waking up in the hospital.

He said he couldn't move either leg and was numb across the stomach. He stayed in hospital two and a half weeks.

Ogilvie said his health was excellent at the time but now he can't walk proberly, can't run and has pain "every so often."

He said he didn't see a weapon in or outside the van.

Defence counsel Bob Johnston questioned him closely on the reason he got into the van.

Ogilvie said the group hadn't paid the hotel bill, he didn't think Kelly could drive properly and he wanted them to stay until police arrived.

Questioned about his preliminary hearing evidence, he said the reason was both because he was "sick and tired" of the situation and because he thought Kelly was incapable of driving. He said he didn't think he mentioned a third reason, the hotel bill, at the prelimiary.

Johnston suggested when he entered the van he wasn't worried about the three reasons but just wanted to get the van keys.

"I wanted the keys for those reasons," Ogilvie replied.

Lemmen said there was a struggle in the parking lot involving him with the elevator drunk and Ogilvie with the third person.

A little later, he saw Ogilvie and Kelly wrestling in the front seat of the van.

He said he also got into the van for 20, possibly 30 seconds, and pulled Kelly off Ogilvie. He didn't see a knife.

Outside the van, he said words were exchanged between Ogilvie and Kelly and it was at this time he saw a knife.

In court, he was shown a knife and said "that's the same knife I saw that night" in the hand of Kelly.

Both Lemmen and Jones said they saw Ogilvie slump against a door in the parking lot.

The trial continued today. The Crown's case is being presented by Ted Pollard, assisted by Scott Marshall.

Before the Judge

A 26-year-old Saanich man who pleaded guilty March 9 to a charge of possession of marijuana March 8 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking was given permission Tuesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler to change the plea to not guilty.

Ostler's ruling in the case of John Christopher Howard, 3463 Seymour, came after he disclosed an affidavit contained criticism of a Saanich police officer who was not named.

On March 9, Howard and two other persons were charged but the case against the other two was withdrawn after Howard pleaded guilty. Prosecutor Malcolm Macaulay then gave Ostler the facts of the case and Howard was remanded in custody to Tuesday for sentence.

Tuesday, defence lawyer Peter Freeman filed four affidavits supporting the request for a change of plea. Macaulay said the Crown would not oppose the request.

"The only issue is the voluntary nature of the plea," said the prosecutor. "The Crown is in part influenced by what the Crown would consider to be improper considerations."

Ostler then described one affidavit as "disturbing and somewhat startling." He said it contained "some astonishing statements" about actions of a civilian "and also an assertion of improper conduct" by a Saanich policeman in connection with negotiations which might amount to plea-bargaining.

The judge said that "I would have expected the crown to call the officer" to give his side but it had not.

After entering a plea of not guilty, Ostler remanded the case for one week amid indications the Crown might start again with a charge against the three persons originally involved.

He released Howard on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,000 and granted Freeman's request for an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details.

Similar no-publication orders were issued by Ostler after bail hearings for three persons charged with narcotics matters.

Blair Gordon Birch, 27, of 889 Cloverdale, and Jack Leon Case, 34, of 914 Inverness, were charged jointly with trafficking in marijuana March 11 in Saanich. Birch and Steve James Glover, 23, of 1495 Fort, were charged jointly with trafficking in marijuana Monday in Saanich.

Case was charged separately with trafficking in marijuana Monday in Saanich and possession of marijuana at the same time for the purpose of trafficking. Finally, Birch and Glover were charged separately with possession of marijuana Monday in Saanich.

Ostler ordered surety bail of $2,000 for Birch while Case was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,000 and Glover was released on his own recognizance in $1,000. All charges were remanded one week for further hearing.

The third and fourth adult convictions for possession of a narcotic brought a sentence for Gordon Robert Caton, 20, of 1007 Collinson, of one month in jail followed by one year of probation.

Caton pleaded guilty March 1 to separate charges of possession of small amounts of marijuana at 2:50 a.m. Feb. 25 in the 900 block Fort and at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 26 in the 1200-block Glasgow.

Ostler noted Caton had been fined $75 twice before for possession of a narcotic, Aug. 8, 1973, in Victoria, and March 27, 1975, in Calgary. Macaulay said a pre-sentence report indicated "regular soft drug usage" by Caton for five years.

William Robert Robinson, 54, of 724 Yates, was committed by Ostler to a higher court for trial following a preliminary hearing of a Victoria charge of rape of a 54-year-old woman Feb. 18. Publication of hearing details was prohibited by an order issued by Ostler at the request of defence lawyer George Jones.

Drink-and-drive fines Tuesday:

Michael Kenneth Flynn, 20, of 2446 Bowker, $375 for impaired driving March 14 in Victoria, and William Alexander Stewart, 20, of 4151 Douglas, $325 for driving Nov. 23, 1975, in Victoria, with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent. Both pleaded guilty and were instructed to take the impaired-driver course.

Earl Ross Shepherd, 25, of 843 Craigflower, was fined $350 for impaired driving Wednesday in Victoria and must take the impaired-driver course, while Gurdial Singh Sandhu, 22, of 2310 Quadra, was fined $100 for driving Wednesday in Victoria with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent. Both pleaded guilty.

X-Rated Thefts Plague Street

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lovelace Avenue in Los Angeles has had a problem ever since the X-rated movie Deep Throat became a hit.

The street signs are being stolen so often that the street has become a difficult place to find. Merchants on the avenue complain that customers can't find their shops.

And on Monday, city council turned down a four-signature petition that the street be renamed Lykes Avenue.

Marianas Status Altered by Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House announced Tuesday President Ford will sign a bill making the Northern Marianas Islands in the Pacific a U.S. commonwealth.

The 14,000 residents of the island group near Guan will be extended U.S. citizenship when the U.S. government completes status negotiations with the rest of Mironesia, now a United Nations Pacific Trust territory. That's expected to be about 1981.

CAR HIDDEN ON ICBC

A 27-year-old Victoria man pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday to defrauding the Insurance Corporation of B.C. of $1,286.72 and a mischief charge.

Bruce William Mayell, 912 Linden, was remanded to March 31 for sentence.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Mayell told Victoria police in mid-March, 1975, his car had been stolen and then submitted a claim to ICBC four days later. Police subsequently found the car had been "hidden" by Mayell "to get the ICBC payout."

Birkett said Mayell had already agreed with ICBC to repay the amount at $40 a month starting in April.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

ESCAPERS BACK IN B.C.

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Three juvenile girls who escaped from the Haney detention home on March 11 and were captured near San Francisco three days later, were returned to the home Tuesday.

RCMP said the three had been charged with car theft, along with two youths who escaped and were captured with them, by United States authorities, but that the charges were dropped in favor of deportation.

The two youths also were being deported back to British Columbia

Police Hands Tied on Streetwalkers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police have stopped making arrests on charges of soliciting on Vancouver streets since a court ruling last November narrowed the definition of the crime.

And the head of the city's vice squad says streetwalking will in effect cease to be an offence if the ruling is upheld on appeal.

Police "would be out of the business of arresting streetwalkers" if County Court Judge M. I. Catliff's ruling is upheld, S. Sgt. Glen McDonad said in an interview.

"You can't arrest for something there is no offence for," he added.

A provincial court conviction against Karen Lariza was overturned on the grounds that the crown did not prove she pestered a city detective while negotiating with him.

Prostitution is not an offence, the judge noted, and a soliciting conviction should only be entered if the allged prostitute's conduct is of an "importuning nature."

Miss Lariza simply engaged the detective in a friendly conversation about the services she was willing to supply and the price, the judge ruled, and was not "pressing or persistent."

The decision was appealed by the Crown and the verdict is expected soon.

If it is upheld, S.Sgt. McDonald said, "it will, in effect, make prostitution legal in public places."

The ruling does not affect soliciting in private places, such as a bawdy house, or crimes such as living off the avails of prostitution, procuring or transporting a person for prostitution.

Arrests in those areas are continuing, but S.Sgt. McDonald said they represent "only a drop in the bucket."

Since November, there have been only a total of half-dozen charges involving pimps and bawdy houses, compared to the average of five or six arrests a night for soliciting, prior to the ruling.

Charges against alleged bawdy houses are difficult to lay, said S.Sgt. McDonald, because of the great deal of time involved in gathering information.

And convicting pimps on charges of living off the avails of prostitution is extremely difficult because "the girls are absolutely terrified for their lives of giving evidence against them," he said.

S. Sgt. McDonnald said he fears that if the legal stigma is removed from streetwalking, girls will soon find it glamorous.

"It would take away the taint from prostitution."

He said he is especially worried about how younger girls will view prostitution, "girls who have not made up their own minds about sex. It may just be looked at as an easy way to make a buck," he said.

Body-Rub Bylaw Passes

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bylaw to regulate body-rub parlors, body-painting studios and nude-model studios was approved by city council Tuesday despite protests from two aldermen that it isn't tough enough.

Aldermen Helen Boyce and Warnett Kennedy voted against the bylaw because they wanted the operations banned outright.

An outright prohibition, however, requires a unanimous vote of council and two aldermen — Fritz Bowers and Art Cowie — have said they won't vote for such a bylaw.

The bylaw requires employees of body-rub parlors to be clothed, bans suggestive advertising, regulates business hours, bars persons under 19 years of age from the premises and requires registration of all employees with the police.

Kennedy said the operations are "disgusting," and wondered what impression of Vancouver they would give to visitors to the United Nations Habitat conference in late May.

Mayor Art Phillips said the regulating bylaw will put a number of the operations out of business. It was approved on a 9-2 vote of council.

FRUIT MEN 'IN TROUBLE'

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Charles Bernhardt, president of the British Columbia Tree Fruit Growers' Association, said Tuesday that the province's tree fruit industry is facing a serious situation because of low prices being received for the 1975 apple crop.

Bernhardt said growers could expect only a 2½-cent return on a pound of apples — the lowest return in 20 years. And, he said, there is nothing the industry can do about it.

"As an industry, we don't even get the protection some others do," he said. "Our costs are rising, above those paid in the industry's major competitor, Washington State."

Turkey Producers Ready To Fight Panco Expansion

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia turkey producers unanimously decided Tuesday to fight a move by the government-owned Panco Poultry Ltd. to regain about $3 million worth of turkey quota it lost last year.

Panco, which was bought in February of 1975 by the New Democratic Party government for $10 million, has appealed to the B.C. Marketing Board to rescind a decision by the B.C. Turkey Board that gave Panco a quota of 40,000 heavy turkeys a year.

Panco previously had 27 per cent of the turkey production, amounting to 273,000 heavy and 238,000 light birds worth $3.5 million in annual revenue.

The marketing board set the hearing for April 5.

Bill Ritchie, chairman of the broiler board, told growers at the third annual meeting Tuesday the latest move by Panco is a contradiction of a Social Credit election promise to support the concept of family-owned farms.

He also accused the government of aggravating the situation by not having a full-time minister of agriculture.

Ritchie also said the move by Panco to regain the quota will create hefty legal expenses for the taxpayer in a time of restraint.

He said that if Panco, which kills about 50 per cent of the chickens in B.C. and about 70 per cent of all turkeys, insists [illegible] ent of the turkey production at the farm level, the province's other processing firms could demand equal treatment.

"That would leave the rest of us with about 10 per cent of the production," Ritchie said.

Uncle Ben's Brewery Open As Union Dispute Settled

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Uncle Ben's Brewery here is back in business and brewing starts again today.

A spokesman for the British Columbia Liquor Administration branch in Vancouver said Tuesday the firm's products will be placed in liquor stores as soon as they become available again.

The spokesman said a shortage of Uncle Ben's wine and beer was caused by production problems owner Ben Ginter had due to a dispute with unions representing his employees.

The B.C. Federation of Labor had place a "hot" edict on all of Ginter's products. No union member was willing to handle them and production stopped completely for several months.

The edict was lifted when a receiver appointed on behalf of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce settled the union dispute.

The Vancouver firm of Dunwoody and Co. was appointed because the bank called a note of about $3.9 million which Ginter was unable to meet. His holdings are still in receivership.

The liquor branch spokesman said 45,000 dozen bottles of beer stored in the Prince George brewery will be tested to see if they can still be sold, since liquor stores usually do not sell beer older than three months.

The 300,000 gallons of beer stored in vats at the brewery were found to be in "perfect" condition but contain a high percentage of alcohol. This beer will be blended with the new brew.

Ginter said from Vancouver that all his old employees would be back at their jobs again if they have not found other employment. There were about 36 employees at the brewery.

Ginter has been trying to sell the brewery.

Hydro Balancing Coal Vs. Water

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Bonner, chairman of British Columbia Hydro, said Tuesday that Hydro is faced with deciding if it should soon develop expensive water-generated power as a better long-term alternative than exploiting coal deposits which would be cheaper right now.

The problem, said Bonner in an interview, is related to the forecast high growth in demand for electrical power and the prospect of continuing high inflation.

He said Hydro now is having new studies done of development of Hat Creek coal deposits in the southern Interior, something he hopes will help make the critical decision.

Bonner also commented on other problems the Crown-owned power corporation faces.

He said he expects that by the end of 1976 Hydro will have to cut by attrition about 700 to 800 persons from its current 12,000 employees in order to cut costs.

Bonner also said Hydro will increase its fees for electrical connections and will start to charge for services such as checking house plans, which used to be done free.

He also said that Hydro will have to start looking at other water power sites examined over the years.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Juniper Landa, a 1,000-acre housing development on benchland in the city is back on the rails after going bankrupt two years ago.

John Mason, a partner in Dunwoody and Co. of Vancouer, who was named trustee in the bankruptcy, said today contractors will start Monday to finish a water system and within several weeks building contractors will complete the 25 existing homes.

"I hope to encourage local builders to purchase lots during the next two weeks," he said.

About 118 lots will be available shortly.

MAYOR'S PAY UP 86%

ENDERBY (CP) — After Ald. Peter Gale voiced strong opposition, city council agreed Monday night to raise the mayor and aldermen's indemnities 86 per cent and 78 per cent respectively.

Ald. Gale said he believed the increases should remain within federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Mayor Bill Attlesey said that in comparison to other municipalities in the area, salaries of Enderby officials were low.

Concil voted to raise Mayor Attlesey's salary to $2,600 from $1,400 and aldermanic salaries to $1,600 from $900.

Council indemnities were raised 50 per cent in 1975.

Meanwhile, council agreed to raise city workers' wages between seven and 11 per cent this year.

Basic labor rate will be $5.76 an hour, an increase from $5.05 an hour.

Enderby is 23 miles north of Vernon.

Fairy Tale Atmosphere for Salt Spring Weavers

FULFORD HARBOR (CP) — A large piece of rush matting covers the ground outside the wool shed, and eight spinners sit, as if in a fairy tale, making yarn from mounds of raw wool around them.

From the rafters and out on a fence hang skeins of wool, hand-spun and already dyed to fruity shades from the herbs, barks and berries the spinners gather.

Liliane Johnson takes eight students for two weeks of classes, an immersion into wools, spinning, dying and weaving. Her farm is on 14 acres of land near this small harbor on Saltspring Island.

"The class is limited to eight and I have eight spinners and eight Salish looms," said Mrs. Johnson. She was born in Belgium and moved to B.C. after seven years of working as a costume designer at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

"I also have guest instructors who come in for one day each."

Tubs in front of the shed are filled with snowberries, Oregon grapes, yarrow and Queen Anne's lace. Two hot plates hold simmering pots that emit strange smells to blend with the aroma of lanolin and other sheep smells in the raw fleece.

"We mostly use wool from New Zealand. It's totally different from the local wool. It has a long, silky fibre, due to different diet and climate."

It is also cleaner, due to different methods of handling sheep. B.C. sheep breeders cater to meat, not wool.

Mrs. Johnson finds that almost everything in nature yields color and almost never the color of the face it offers to the world. Every dye bath is a surprise.

The fungus and mushroom family gives dyes of a whole spectrum of color. Lichen produces many greens and browns. A yellow color lurks in the secret cells of a surprisingly large number of herbs and flowers, including Queen Anne's lace. Wild berries, such as salal, blueberries and blackberries, are also good sources of color.

A metallic salt, called a mordant, allows the wool to accept the dye color, instead of resisting it. The Indians used urine as a mordant and Mrs. Johnson has tried that as well.

For city dwellers who lack access to roadside weeds and fields, local supermarkets are the answer. Beets give a beige color and red cabbage dyes wool pale blue to lavender. Frozen berrries also work but fresh fruit gives a better color.

"Art is my first love, particularly textiles," says Mrs. Johnson, who lives on the farm with her husband John and two daughters, Suzanne and Catherine.

"I went to art school in Belgium.

HARD-SOIL CROPS

LONDON (CP) — The British science journal Nature reports that a team of researchers has devised a chemical treatment improving yields from crops planted in hard, compacted soil.

The team, working at Wye College in southeast England under the direction of Prof. L. B. Wain, treated compacted soil with a chemical called DHIB—3, 5-diiodo-4-hydroxybenyl acid.

Experiments with pea seedlings showed that when DHIB was applied in low concentration, root penetration was improved in compacted soil. Roots and shoots grew heavier and shoots were slightly longer.

The journal said the team now is trying to find out how to get the maximum response from DHIB and exactly how it works. It is also trying other chemicals with a similar structure, some of which have been found to have a similar effect.

Daylight Time: EEC In Dark

LONDON (CP) — Despite efforts of the European Economic Community (EEC) to co-ordinate life within the Community, the switch to daylight time this year is causing confusion.

Britain and Ireland moved from standard or Greenwich Mean Time (GMT) to summer time last weekend, moving clocks ahead one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday.

This aligned them with their Common Market partners, but the harmony will last only a week.

On March 28, France, having decided on a new form of summer time as an energy-saving device, will adopt a time of "GMT plus two" — putting clocks ahead by two hours. Two months later Italy will take the same step, co-ordinating its time with France.

To add to the confusion, the two will switch back on uncoordinated dates — France on Sept. 26 and Italy on Sept. 25. Britain and Ireland will stay on summer time until Oct. 24.

Aside from the impact on commerce and communications, the "system" will leave the traveller confronting a mindboggling array of different airline and train schedules.

A traveller from Britain, for instance, will have to put his watch ahead one hour on reaching France, then back an hour when crossing into West Germany, ahead an hour on entering Italy, and so on.

In face of such confusion the European parliament last week passed a resolution urging the EEC commission to produce a plan for at least a modicum of harmony on time, with the scheme to be ready by April 1.

But because of widespread disagreement — West Germany is opposed to summer time, for instance — the commission has already modified its original proposal that all member countries adopt summer time for the same fixed period each year.

'Safe' Cigarette Tasteless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. National Cancer Institute is trying to find a way to make low-hazard cigarettes taste good.

"We know we can remove many things from cigarettes known to be harmful, but what's left isn't smokable," said Dr. Thomas Owen, assistant director of the institute's smoking and health program. "What good is it, if no one's going to use it?"

Borrowing techniques used to make foods and perfumes more palatable, the institute is seeking chemical additives to improve the flavor of cigarettes that have had most of their tar and nicotine removed.

Arthur D. Little, Inc., a Cambridge, Mass., consulting firm, has a contract from the institute for about $183,000 "to try to make a cigarette people will perceive as being a real cigarette."

The research is an extension of so-called flavor profiles developed for foods and perfumes, said Loren Sjostrom, ADL's vice president for food and agribusiness.

But no single additive will work, and Little's Dr. Charles Kinsler said that once a tasteful low-hazard cigarette is developed it too will have to be tested for toxicity.

Spain Accelerates Reforms

By JIM HOAGLAND
The Washington Post

MADRID — Threatened by widespread social unrest and growing pressure from both the left and the right after only four months in office, the Spanish government is moving to regain its authority by accelerating promised political and social reforms, according to high-ranking government official.

The government has announced its decision to lift a ban on political parties except the Communists, anarchists, and separatists. It also said the penal code would be revised.

The new commitment to reforms that are supposed to give Spain political parties and free elections, a new Parliament and a carefully balanced constitutional monarchy within two years, represents a victory for moderates in the Cabinet of Premier Carlos Arias, according to those officials.

The moderates have been privately warning Arias and King Juan Carlos that the country faces an explosion unless Arias goes to the public with new political initiatives that would dramatize the changes promised after the death of Generalissimo Franco in November.

The Arias government has clearly been adrift in the past month as labor unrest has produced violent confrontations with the police and mass demonstrations throughout the country. Calls for the resignation of the 66-year-old Arias have grown.

Police repression of some of the demonstrations and the virtual disappearance of Arias from public view in recent weeks have fed the impression of a government retreat on liberalization.

The increasingly active leftist parties are unlikely to be impressed by the latest turn in the government's zig-zag approach to the post-Franco era, according to Spanish political observers, and the left can be expected to continue its pressure.

Despite fears of inciting new harsh reactions from the dead dictator's supporters and perhaps from the army, Arias has agreed to stress the need for reform and Juan Carlos has committed himself to a referendum on key political questions before the end of the year, the sources reported.

Although the highly volatile internal government crisis of the past week appears to have abated for the moment, sharp disagreement remains within cabinet over the pace of the reforms and the timing of the referendum.

At least one of the most important figures in the regime has told the king that unless a dramatic move toward liberalization is made within the next month, "The government will be a lame duck, on the defensive before the left and the right."

Officials supporting this view say the government "revolutionaries" will try to bring the government down through a mass strike April 14, the 44th anniversary of the Republic, which Franco overthrew in the Spanish Civil War.

The key pressures in producing the change have come from within the cabinet and, at least obliquely, from the king himself, who has attempted to keep the monarchy above the political battle while prodding the holdovers from the Franco regime to move on reform.

The ambivalent position of Arias, who was Franco's last premier and who appears until now to have preferred to let other government officials take the lead on reform rather than risking his own authority, has underscored the principal dilemmas confronting Juan Carlos after four months in power.

By promising limited reforms the king has disappointed the left and frightened the right in this increasingly polarized country. Moderates and rightists describe the king as "having lifted the lid on a pressure cooker."

The king realizes that any attempt to clamp the lid back on could trigger a terrible explosion, one of his advisers says. "Franco established his terror early in his regime and then did not have to kill any more to maintain order. Juan Carlos would have to kill far more people to rule the same way, and no one accepts that," the official said.

Until now the king has been unable to escape what one minister calls "the mousetraps" set by Franco, who established government institutions that he stacked with his supporters, ignored in his lifetime and then passed on to rule jointly with his successor.

The principal roadblocks are Arias' cabinet, the 56-member Cortes or national Assembly, and the armed forces. The king needs approval from the cabinet or the highly conservative Cortes for all decress or laws he signs.

In recent weeks the king has given new authority to the 16-member Council of the Realm, which is headed by one of his closest advisers, and indicated that he would use it as a counterweight to the cabinet.

He also gave what was widely interpreted as a warning to Cortes that he would go directly to the populance in a referendum if the assembly attempts to block reforms.

The interior ministry has already begun studying ways to carry out the referendum, highly placed sources disclosed. Those who favor rapid change want the voting to take place before the summer.

Interior Minister Manuel Fraga Iribarne, moderate in the Spanish contest and perhaps the strongest figure in Arias' cabinet, is known to feel that preparations cannot be completed until the fall and that for political reasons the referendum should be delayed until after municipal elections in November.

Cabinet sources say the king will ask for referendum approval of changes to the election laws that will permit universal sufferage for adults and a directly elected two-house National Assembly to replace the Cortes. He will also submit changes in the law of royal succession.

Despite the controversy the referendum plan has created in the cabinet — Arias' aides have told the cabinet that holding a referendum after this month's popular demonstrations would be political suicide for the government — it has not dissuaded activists on the left and the right that a direct confrontation is building up in Spain.

"The demonstration of 500,000 persons in Bilboa against the government this month was the referendum," a leftist asserted. "The government is through, and they have to give the people democracy now."

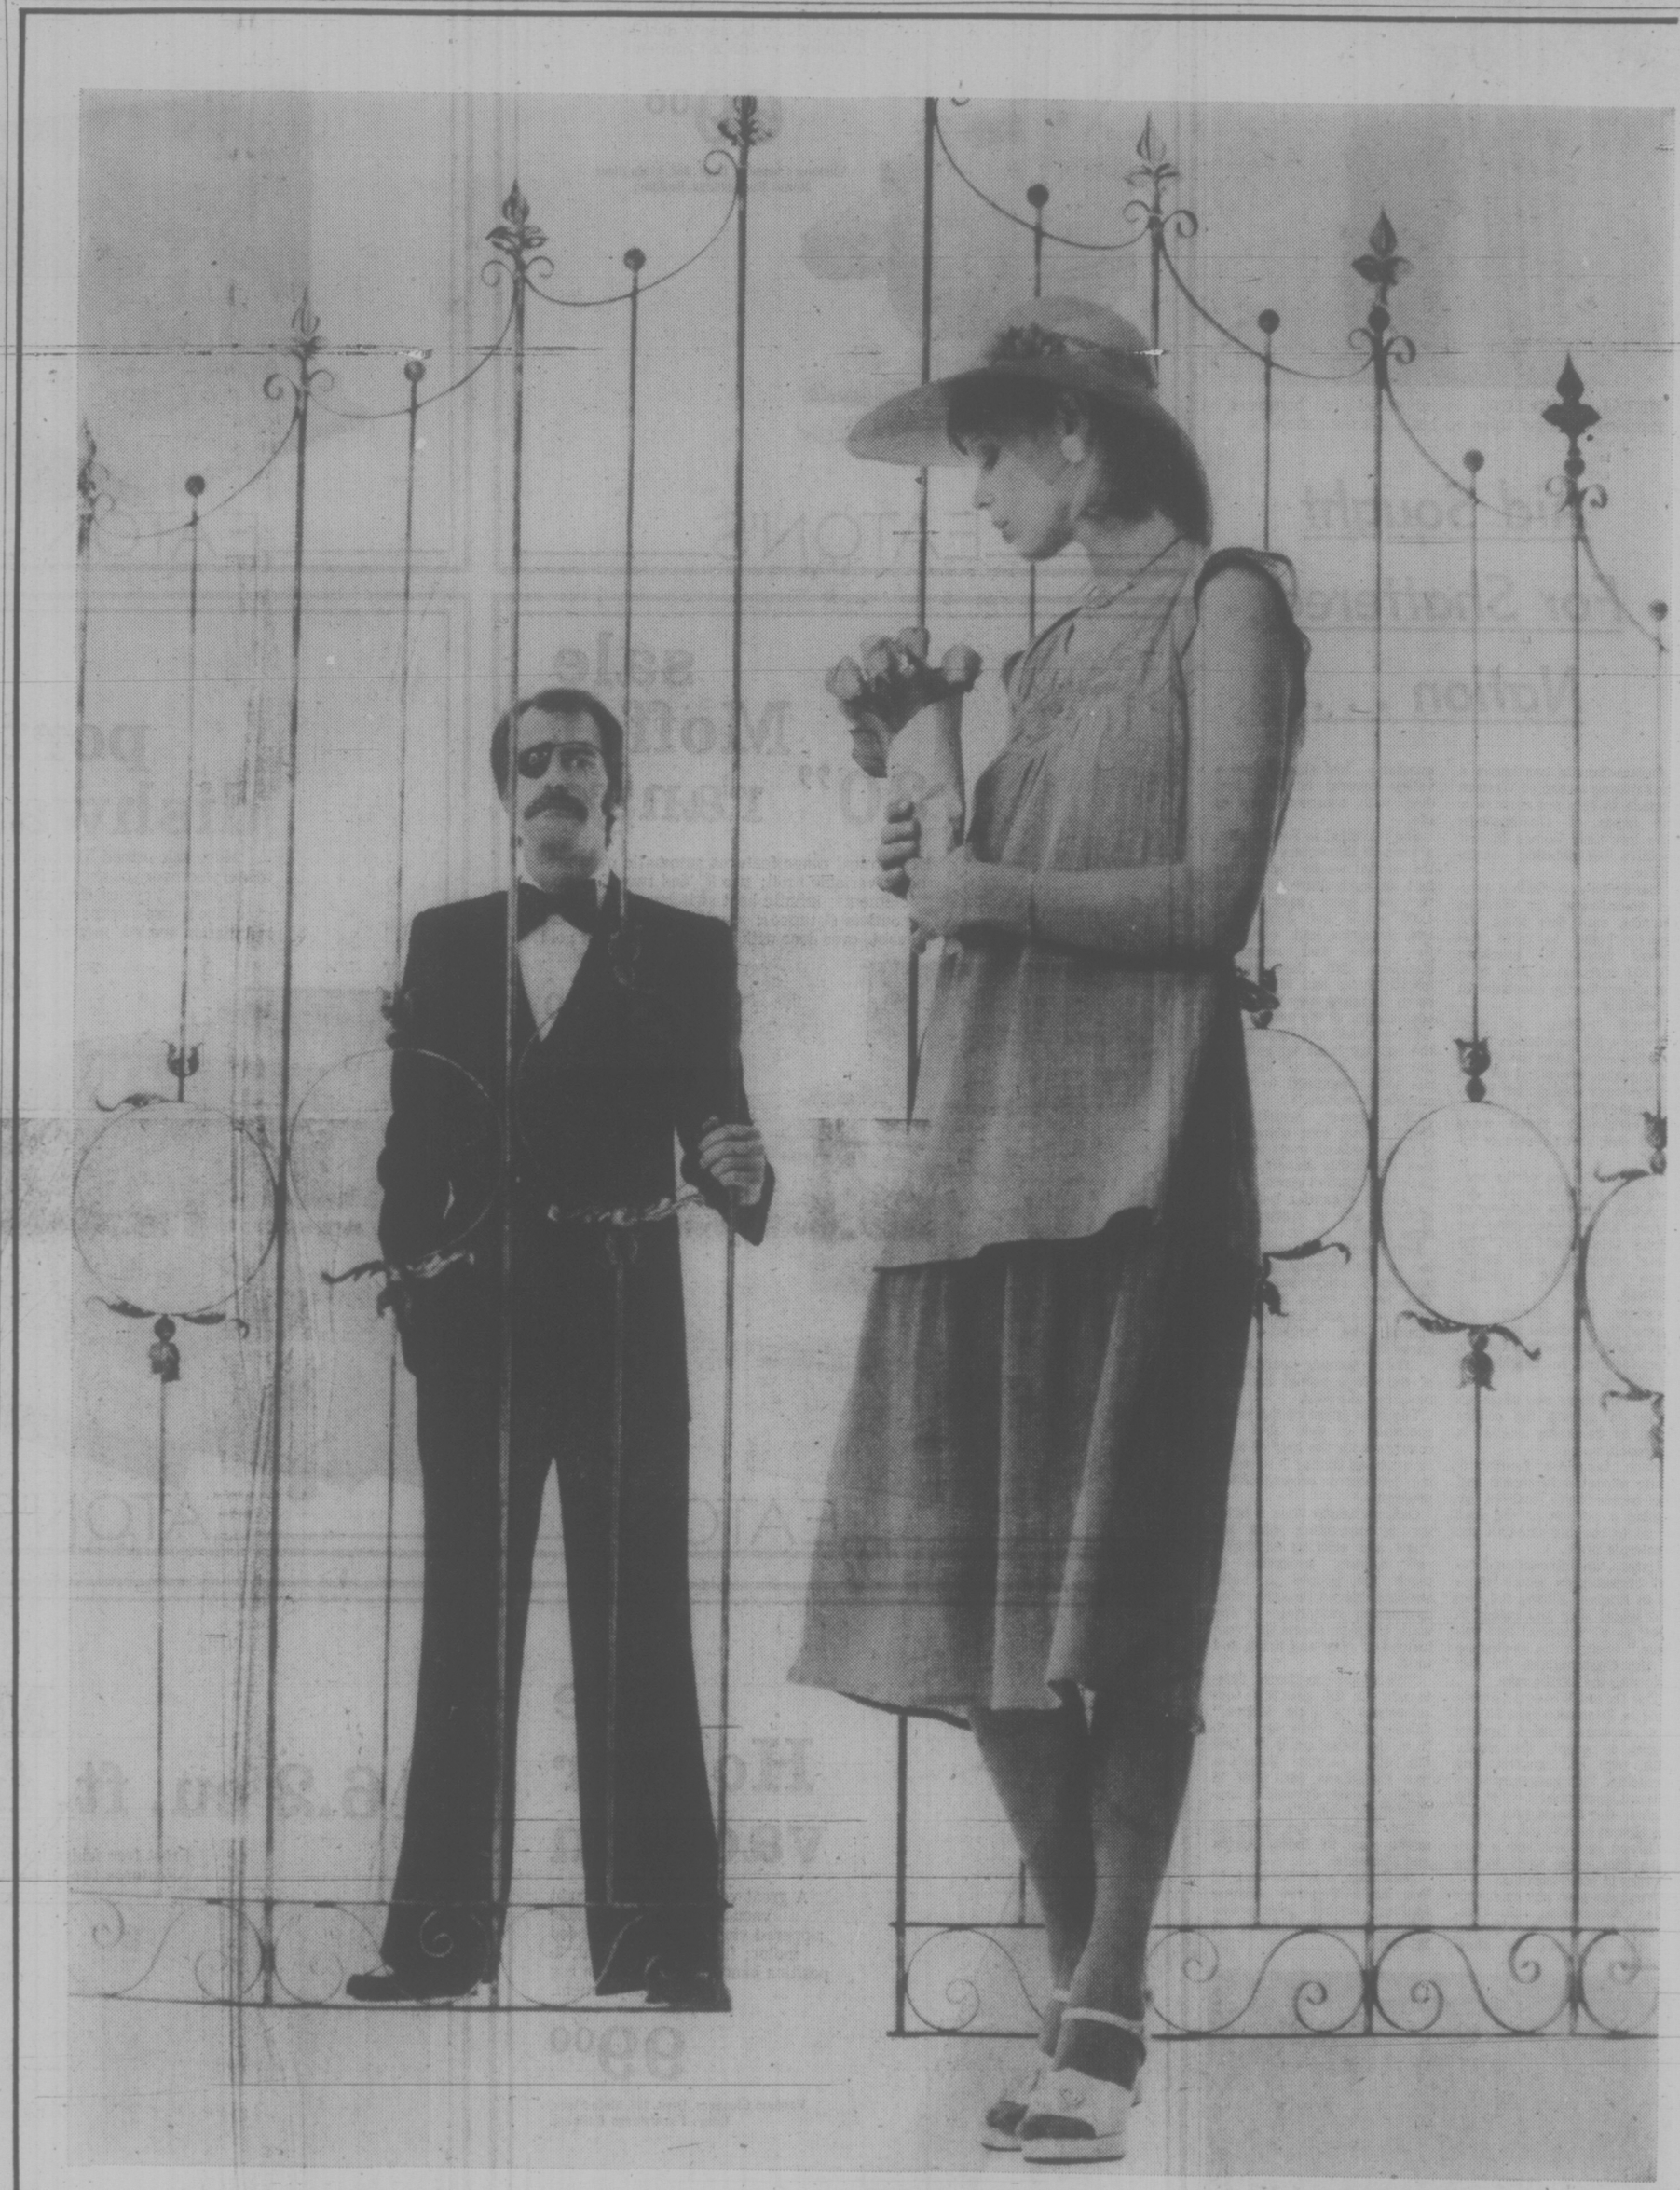
The millions who turned out for Franco's funeral "was the referendum," says Antonia Maria de Oriol, the Franco-appointed president of the council of state, the country's highest administrative body. "Elections can come soon only if there is social order, because the Communists want to use disorder to tear down the Spanish state."

More than a hundred political parties have popped up into the open since the government indicated that it would tolerate political activity from all but Communist and other far-left groups.

The principal opposition parties that have been formed in two blocks announced that they have formed a united front. One group, the Communist-led Democrats Junta includes several splinter socialist groups and the clandestine Workers' Commissions. The other, the Democratic Platform, includes Christian Democrats, the Socialist Party and various regional goups.

Cabinet ministers critical of Arias' failure to co-ordinate the changing political situation with his own cabinet and with the emerging political leaders outside the government say that only about 20 of the parties carry any weight.

"Arias could telephone 20 or 30 people and begin the political process for reform in a day," said one minister. "But he had to be forced to do anything at all. He is afraid of upsetting the extreme right."



"It's the little things, like giving him tulips, that makes him appreciate who I am. And to me, I feel more of a woman, and he's more of a man." She's wearing a new designer dress, the layered tunic overdress, by French Connection. Of cotton gauze in shades of purple and blue, for sizes s-m-l.

METAL SHEETING is allocated to homeless families to allow them to build sturdier shelters.

Aid Sought For Shattered Nation . . .

Oxfam-Canada has begun a fund-raising sweep of Western Canada to help put roofs over the heads of Guatemalans who lost their homes in last month's devastating earthquake.

Nancy Gibson, Oxfam project co-ordinator for Western Canada, said this week the agency hopes to raise sufficient funds to purchase 200,000 corrugated iron roofing sheets for the construction of shelters.

One million of that country's 5.7 population were left homeless after the Feb. 4 earthquake, described as one of the most destructive natural disasters of the century. An estimated 25,000 were killed and 50,000 seriously injured.

Gibson said one of the reasons for the widespread destruction was the majority of homes were constructed on adobe brick and clay. The metal sheeting will enable them to build sturdier shelters.

Oxfam has already arranged the purchase of $1 million worth of sheeting from a manufacturer in neighboring El Salvador.

She said there was some urgency in getting the orders filled as the rainy season is approaching.

Each homeless family is being allocated 10 sheets and the people have insisted on paying a portion of the cost equal to roughly one-half the wholesale price.

Oxfam, an international relief organization which started in England during the Second World War and refers to itself as a "financial fire brigade," went to the assistance of the Guatemalans the day following the earthquake.

The Oxfam Western Canada base in Edmonton sent $20,000 and arranged three mercy flights to supply the needy with tons of blankets and medicine. The government of Alberta sponsored two of the flights, the Community Nursing Homes of Alberta, one.

Gibson said she and a two-man film crew went to the country in late February.

What she saw, she said, was utter devastation. In Guatemala City one entire district — the Barranco or slum quarter — had slipped into a valley several hundred feet deep with enormous loss of life.

She travelled to San Martin, a town 70 kilometers north of the capital where Oxfam has had an agriculture co-op for the past four years. There 4,000 people had died. Only two buildings had withstood the quake and remained standing. But they subsequently have had to be torn down to make way for a reconstruction of the town.

Gibson said aid flowed into the country from all parts of the world. Some of the aid, she said, amounted to "eye-catching scandals."

One agency, which she didn't name, sent planeloads of such goods as meat tenderizer, disposable diapers, toilet paper and stuffed olives.

"Aid is essential but misdirected aid is worse than none at all," she stated.

Fortunately, she said, famine in the country isn't the problem it might have been. This year's crops of coffee, sugar cane and bananas are among the largest ever harvested.

"It's a bumper year, some of the crops should hit new records," she said.

The first phase of the relief operation is over and the country, with the help of such agencies as Oxfam is developing long-term reconstruction programs.

Oxfam-Canada West is helping by providing silos for crops and offering education and training programs to teach the people to build stronger homes through using reinforcing materials in the walls and iron sheets for roofs instead of clay and brick and mud.

"We want to keep Guatemala in the people's consciousness a little longer," Gibson said, "not so much from the relief point of view but rather to show there's a role Canadians can play in helping under-developed nations in the world."

The agency has projects under way in India, Africa and Malaysia.

FIRMS FEAR LONG TEAMSTER STRIKE

City Shelves to Go Bare?

The strike by Teamsters against 97 British Columbia trucking companies will produce temporary shortages of some food products and store goods, company spokesmen said today.

How serious the shortages are depends upon the length of the strike and the availability of alternative means of moving goods to Vancouver Island.

"Almost everything that comes from the mainland arrives by truck," said Herb Harris, manager of Johnston Termionals.

"The strike has stopped everything but some companies either have alternative means of transportation or are arranging for it. It is difficult to predict how serious this will be."

He said the companies were hopeful that talks today with the Teamsters and Labor Minister Allan Williams would prode a quick settlement.

"If there is no settlement today, this could be a long dispute."

The province's 4,500 teamster truckers and warehousemen walked off the job Tuesday afternoon with the union seeking an increase of $1.40 per hour in a one-year contract. The increase would give them $7.80 an hour, parity with long-distance haulers in western Canada.

Teamster president Ed Lawson said the union was seeking a quick settlement and would refer the contract to the anti-inflation board to determine whether it was within federal guidelines. The Teamsters were prepared to abide by the decision of the board.

The Teamsters have also been on strike against B.C. Railway for three weeks but Lawson said the union wanted to keep that dispute separate from the truckers' walkout.

Together with the BCR shutdown, the trucker strike will affect about 80 per cent of all freight shipments in B.C. directly or indirectly.

In Victoria, Simpsons-Sears store manager Jack Hutchins said the truck strike is "a great inconvenience" for department stores. His company uses its own truck, driven by Simpsons-Sears employees, for light hauling from the mainland warehouse. Larger loads were handled by private trucking firms that employ Teamsters.

As long as the goods could be delivered to the mainland warehouse, the store could continue to get small regular shipments on their own trucks. He said it was too early to be sure how the rail and truck strike might affect the flow of goods into the warehouse.

Spokesmen for other companies said they expected some independent (non-union) trucking firms would be into the area on a short-term basis.

Companies would also make greater use of their own trucks and employees.

Williams said this morning he would be meeting with both sides i nthe trucking dispute first and the would hold meetings with labor and management representatives in the B.C. Railway dispute.

He met Tuesday evening with the Teamsters in hopes of getting an agreement to send the dispute to binding arbitration but after "an exchange of information" the talks were recessed until this afternoon.

Told that Lawson had been quoted as saying the trucking strike need not last for more than one day, Williams replied: "If he thinks there is no reason for a strike, then he should stop it."

TORONTO (CP) — Two groups representing 124 magazines and 550 weekly newspapers have applied to take the post office before the Anti-Inflation Board for increasing international postal rates by up to 414 per cent.

First Surplus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. basic balance of payments was $1.4 billion in surplus for 1975, reflecting the first annual surplus since current record keeping began in 1960, the commerce department reported today. The basic balance had been a near-record $10.7 billion in deficit in 1974.

Seal Protest Ends

ST. ANTHONY, Nfld. (UPI) — The Greenpeace Foundation today ended its campaign protesting Canada's annual seal hunt after seals and sealing fleets moved beyond the range of the environmental group's aircraft. The volunteer demonstrators left today to return to Vancouver.

$1M FISH FIRM FIRE ON VANCOUVER DOCKS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A four-alarm fire early today destroyed the three-storey Norpac Fisheries Ltd. Building on Vancouver's waterfront, but the fire was prevented from spreading by the Burrard Inlet fireboat, Fire Chief Armand Konig said.

He estimated damage at $4 million. The fire was believed to have started just before midnight in a compressor machinery room below the Norpac cold storage area.

There were no injuries.

At the peak of the blaze there were 11 fire trucks, the Vancouver fireboat and various support vehicles on the scene.

Inside the building were 40 tons of herring roe which last year sold for about $6,000 a ton. There were also undetermined quantities of herring and other fish in cold storage.

Legal Aid Chops 13

Attorney-General Garde Gardom Tuesday promised to provide details of the firings of 13 employees of the British Columbia Legal Services Commission.

Gardom said in an interview he will ask departmental officials for a report on the firings and other cuts within the commission.

The attorney-general commented after a spokesman from within the commission said 13 were given dismissal notices Friday and are expected to continue working with the commission until the end of April.

The spokesman said money was needed for B.C. corrections operations and it was taken directly from the budget for the commission which resulted in cuts in staff.

There are indications that contracts of those dismissed had not expired and some will seek large cash settlements from the government.

Mr. Gardom said he was unable to confirm the exact number of dismissals or specify which programs have been cut or dropped.

Asked if belt-tightening within the commission could result in people appearing in court for the first time on summary offences not being able to get legal aid lawyers, Gardom replied, "anything could be a possibility.

"We just know that we've got to reduce or hold the line on some of the dollar impacts."

The commission was established last August under New Democratic Party legislation and was given the power to administer a $4.2 million Legal Aid budget.

It was also empowered to provide information to the public on B.C. law and develop experimental programs on the provision of legal services in the province.

Gardom said he had asked his departmental officials to study the effectiveness of the commission and look at all delivery of legal services in B.C.

The federal government is also examining legal services on a nation-wide basis, he added.

The attorney-general said more money is needed to maintain the commission and if funds are available, as many programs as possible will be retained.

A firm decision on the future of the commission has not been made, he added.

When the legislation to set up the commission was intro-

Kissinger Won't Deny Cuban Invasion Threat

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger refuses specifically to rule out a United States invasion of Cuba if troops of the Caribbean country engage in further intervention in Africa.

Kissinger declined to specify what action the United States would take if Cuba — as it did in Angola — sent armed troops into another southern Africa country.

"What we will do I cannot say, but we are serious and we have pointed this out to Cuba," Kissinger said here Tuesday during one of a series of regional visits designed to bolster support for U.S. foreign policy.

"We were accused of not making our issues clear in Angola.

But we are making them clear to Cuba."

In recent weeks, Kissinger repeatedly has said Cuba should not ignore U.S. warnings against further African intervention.

He was asked specifically during the news conference if the United States might invade Cuba if it defies the U.S. warnings. Kissinger replied: "I do not want to answer that question."

Meanwhile in Zambia, four African presidents gathered at Lusaka today for talks that might bring full black African backing for an all-out guerrilla war against Rhodesia's white rulers.

The three-day meeting follows the collapse last week of constitutional negotiations between Prime Minister Ian Smith and black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo in Salisbury.

Presidents Samora Machel of Mozambique, Sir Seretse Khama of Botswana and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania arrived this morning and were greeted by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

Another arrival was Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the militant faction of the Rhodesian African National Council, which opposes the moderate wing headed by Nkomo.

U.S. Eyes Mass Flu Vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two dozen of the top scientists in the United States are meeting President Ford amid reports that government health experts are recommending a campaign to inoculate every U.S. citizen against a rare and deadly flu strain.

Any such immunization program would be the largest in U.S. history and would be aimed at the swine flu virus, a strain that has been dormant for nearly a half century.

The swine flu strain was blamed for 20 million deaths world-wide during a 1918 epidemic.

Last month, the virus killed an army recruit and afflicted four other soldiers at Fort Dix, N.J.

Since then, public health specialists have been considering whether a public inoculation program should be launched. The Washington Post says that Ford's health advisers have concluded that such a program is needed.

Officials at the National Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta indicated that a decision will be announced shortly.

The centre said Tuesday it would take nearly six months to produce enough vaccine to provide shots for 215 million U.S. citizens.

Estimates of the crash program's cost range from $107 million to $150 million.

Lockheed Deal Lobby Denied

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — One of two former deputy ministers who have formed a consulting firm acknowledged Tuesday holding a contract with the controversial Lockheed Aircraft Corp. which is negotiating a billion dollar deal with the government. (See also Page 41).

But Jim Grandy, former trade and commerce deputy, denied lobbying with the government on behalf of Lockheed over the sale of 18 Orion long range patrol aircraft.

He stressed that the firm which he has formed with former deputy finance minister Simon Reisman never has and never will act as lobbyists for any corporation with the government. He also denied a suggestion that the firm has even had a contract with any government department.

The issue was raised in the House of Commons by Conservative House Leader Walter Baker who declared it would be improper for a former senior public servant to act on behalf of a company trying to get a contract with the Crown.

Baker stated that he has information that Grandy was under a consultation contract with the prime minister's office or other agency of the government in the past and asked acting prime minister Allan MacEachen whether this was after the firm "went to work for Lockheed." MacEachen said he didn't know.

The Tory MP noted that the firm of former deputy ministers has "immense influence" and said that it could have been used to give Lockheed "the inside track" on the contract.

He demanded whether the government will bring in guidelines to govern the freedom of retired public servants to "go to work for corporations precisely in order to lobby in areas of their intimate government expertise and with former colleagues."

Reagan, Carter Win

Times News Services

RALEIGH, N.C. — Ronald Reagan bounced back from five straight defeats Tuesday to beat President Ford in the North Carolina Republican primary and keep his sinking presidential campaign afloat.

Jimmy Carter beat Gov. George Wallace for the third time, giving the former Georgia governor four wins in six primaries and tightening his grip on the leadership in the race for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination.

Reagan's win was an upset that even the former California governor had not publicly predicted. It left him well behind Ford in the GOP nomination contest but no sooner under party pressure to give up his challenge of Ford, the first president to come to office without election.

Both winners scored clear-cut majorities — Carter crushing Wallace 54 to 35 per cent, Reagan whipping Ford 52 to 46.

Carter's margin made him the first Democrat to win a state with more than 50 per cent of the vote.

Ford conceded "I expected to win," but said the loss would fire up his campaign to more strenuous efforts.

Rogers Morton, Ford's chief political strategist, discounted the importance of Reagan's victory in basically conservative North Carolina.

"I don't think we've been dealt a very serious blow," Morton said in Washington.

Victoria May Bid for Western Canada Games

The Greater Victoria area may make a formal bid to host the 1979 Western Canada Games, but only if municipal councils can be assured on two important ns:

—Whether federal and provincial government funding will be available in generous quantities.

—And whether existing sports and accommodation facilities, with some renovation and upgrading, will be adequate without involving taxpayers in any disastrous capital cost commitments.

Careful investigation of these points as a preliminary to submitting a formal application was stressed when the matter was discussed Tuesday at the Greater Victoria Inter-municipal Committee.

No one actually mentioned Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and the Olympic Games fiasco, but the awful spectre seemed to be hovering over the committee room at City Hall.

A technical committee composed of the recreation directors of the four core municipalities has been studying the implications of hosting the Western Canada Games for several weeks.

What seemed to impress municipal representatives was the committee's report noting that Regina, which hosted the Games last summer, had no cause to regret the gesture.

Said the recreation directors: "The Games can be a financial success, as the Regina budget called for a $20,000 deficit and we have now been advised that a small profit will be realized."

Their report recommended that a bid be submitted if assurances of senior government help are obtained, and provided capital expenditures for new facilities can be kept to an absolute minimum.

After the meeting, Victoria Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of the Intermunicipal Committee, told reporters he is optimistic that the various sports facilities of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt will prove adequate for staging the event, even though some modifications may be required.

Pointing out that Regina has received provincial and federal grants totalling more than $600,000, Tindall said that base of financing supplemented by ticket sales and other sources of revenue could make the Games an attractive proposition for Victoria.

CLC Quits Two Councils

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress has pulled out of two major federal government advisory councils in its latest protest move against the anti-inflation program of selective wage and price controls.

The 30-member CLC executive council decided Tuesday to withdraw from the Economic Council of Canada and the Canada Labor Relations Council because it feels that further labor participation is pointless, CLC president Joe Morris said.

He said the withdrawal of labor representatives will effectively destroy both advisory councils "because they are tripartite councils and they cannot continue to operate if one of the legs is missing."

Labor Minister John Munro immediately described the CLC decision to pull out of the Economic Council of Canada and the Canada Labor Relations Council "as almost a self-destruct kind of action."

He said if the CLC sticks with its decision — and it says it will — the labor relation council is finished.

Morris said the CLC executive council also had discussed the possibility of calling a country-wide general strike to protest the federal anti-inflation program, but he had no announcements to make.

Student's Sweet Reason Softens McGeer Jab

One wet morning recently, a rather damp young man stood on the side of the road near Shawnigan Lake and waved his thumb toward Victoria.

I stopped my car. And he was grateful as he shook off the raindrops and clambered inside.

He was running a little late for classes at the University of Victoria.

Now, to one who commutes daily but has a reasonably reliable conveyance, that seems one hell of a hit-or-miss way of getting to one's desk.

But the young man didn't seem too concerned.

"Most days I have a regular ride," he said. "When I don't, I hitch."

Like many students, most of whom live a lot closer to the university though, he's a victim of the massive rate increases imposed by the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia. Taking advantage of a low rent offer, he moved to a cabin by the lake a month or so before the new rates were announced. But, because he couldn't meet the high premium for a driver under 25, he has been forced to take his car off the road.

That was it. I started to boil. It is always the have-nots, the poor and those struggling to get an education who suffer from such massive rate increases and from cutbacks in government spending on other programs.

A quick check at UVic showed that there, too, (Just like the two Lower Mainland universities) the number of students taking cars has dropped considerably since the new rates came in. Many parking tickets have not been re-issued; a lot of spaces stand empty.

I even found out that about 30 out-of-town students were caught with their insurance policies down. When they weren't able to get their cars home in time and then couldn't meet the new rates, their vehicles were left stranded on campus. Authorities asked the police to let them remain there without ticketing them until the end of the semester.

Ah, I thought. There's a ready-made chance for a hostile column. Another good opportunity to stick some more in McGeer's Ear (though I fear that either there isn't any more room or both ears have been sealed closed for some time).

Then I met Alistair Palmer and I cooled off.

Alistair is the 22-year-old president of the UVic Alma Mater Society and he doesn't hold the radical views often attributed to students. In fact, he thinks far too many students are radicals and expect too much.

"We don't even pay taxes so why should we expect everything when we don't pay into the piggy bank?" he asks.

On ICBC, Palmer says, there was some resentment over the rates at first.

"But it (the increase) wasn't aimed at students," he adds. "We are just caught in it — and that's too bad."

Palmer doesn't drive a car.

"Although I've got a prime parking spot out there if I want it," he laughs.

And he would like to see more and more students join him as non-drivers.

Many students are already riding their bicycles or forming car pools and Palmer, together with Dean Trevor Matthews, dean of administration, has been meeting B.C. Hydro officials to try to get an improved bus service for students by September.

UVic has already got the okay to build a terminal, complete with seats and a shelter, and a loop for the buses to turn around, behind the Student Union Building. It now has to get the funding approved.

Also aimed at are an extended bus route to and from the university taking in South Oak Bay (where a survey shows many students live and where there is no route at present); and the implementation of a bus-pass system.

The idea, although not yet approved by the transit people, is that UVic would issue the passes (probably for one semester), collect the money from the students and then give it to Hydro. Palmer says it could serve as a pilot project for Victoria, and if it works, might be extended to other groups or individuals.

This bid for better buses has been on the go at UVic for two or three years but Palmer feels it has been given impetus because of today's economic conditions.

"It's going to be a very grim summer with higher ICBC rates, gas probably rising to $1 a gallon, and a cutback in students' summer work programs," he warns. "The crunch will come in September when students will realize their car is an expense they just can't afford."

That though doesn't bother Palmer. As he says:

"We want to discourage as many cars as possible because we don't want to blacktop the whole campus."

But he wants to be ready in September with something else to offer.

"I feel the government and its agencies have got to show some good faith," he says. "I think the students are ready to take the bus but it's got to be made attractive for them."

"ICBC was an issue," Palmer admits. "But people are accepting it now.

"Let's get down to the alternatives . . . that's what I say."

City Budget: All Bad News

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Despite several weeks of rigorous budget-cutting by city council, and a few more still ahead, Victoria's taxpayers face nothing but bad news in the form of a 1976 mill rate increase of at least seven mills, or around 15 per cent.

That was the indication today as the city's elected representatives entered the final round of their fight against row upon row of expenditure estimates.

With a number of unknown factors still clouding the picture — notably the provisions of the provincial budget to be presented Friday — no one is prepared to make any guesses as to what the actual mill rate increase will be.

But finance committee chairman Ald. Bill Tindall said today, following council's latest budget-trimming session Tuesday: "I am hoping that we are going to be able to stay within a maximum of a seven-mill increase, and even that is horrendous when you think of it in terms of dollars and cents."

. . . "horrendous"

Last year's millrate was 43.65 so if the aldermen's reckoning is correct the 1976 rate will be in the region of 50 mills.

About the only consolation would be that it's less than the 55-mill level projected after the provisional $38.4 million budget was first presented last January.

Tindall said unless the provincial budget contains some relief for municipalities it's doubtful if council can come close to even the seven-mill increase, however.

"The alternative would be to say that we are going to have no more than, say, a six-mill increase over last year, and then go back and agonize over the whole thing again until we have cut back to that level," he said.

In other words, council might have to set an arbitrary increase which it felt taxpayers could live with, and then cut the services and expenditures to fit.

Tindall said all committee chairmen on council have been diligent in striving for the maximum possible economies within the departments for which they are responsible.

But one of the major difficulties confronting council is the fact that the budget reflects costs over which it has little or no control: The requirements of the Greater Victoria school board, Capital Regional District, B.C. Assessment Authority and other agencies.

City departmental estimates scrutinized by council to date total about $25.7 million, and from this sum the weekly caucus sessions have succeeded in cutting about $1.3 million — or a little more than five mills.

Still awaiting consideration over the next two weeks are the individual budgets for parks and recreation, totalling another $5.2 million.

Once the preliminary pruning process is completed and provincial budget details are known, the city comptroller's staff will present revised budget data including an estimate of the required mill rate.

And then, if the financial picture is still as gloomy as present trends indicate, the cutting and snipping will probably start all over again.

Vice-Regal Welcome

Forty-six new Canadians from 19 countries were presented certificates by Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen when he made a special visit to Victoria citizenship court Tuesday. Getting handshake from vice-regal visitor is Bernadette Mertens, who hails from Sweden, while Swiss candidate Margaretha Nordine, Judge Norman L. Oreck and family and friends look on. Citizenship ceremonies are held monthly in city and are followed by tea parties put on by the Canadian Women's Citizenship Council.

Ask The Times

Q. What pension did W. A. C. Bennett receive from the provincial government for his years of service? S.G.L.

A. That is confidential information, according to the provincial superannuation branch. However, the Times works it out to about $20,000 per year, based upon the pension formula, which is public information. The formula awards Bennett three per cent of his typical salary as premier for every year in the post. His typical salary, based upon another formula, was about $28,000. He was premier 20 years, so he would earn 60 per cent of $28,000 or $16,800. In addition, he would be entitled to three per cent of his typical salary as MLA for each year up to a maximum of 24 years. His typical MLA indemnity was about $5,000 per year and his pension from that source would be 72 per cent (three times 24) of $5,000 or $3,600. Together that comes to $20,400, which should be very close to the actual figure.

Q. I have heard that there is a firm in Ontario which specializes in the collection and sale of discontinued lines of good chinaware. My Spode pattern has been discontinued and I would like to know the address of this concern, if it exists. M.D.J.

A. There is such a firm but an even closer one is in Edmonton. Write Mrs. Joyce Gourdine, The China Cupboard, 11432 42nd Avenue, Edmonton.

TWO STUDENTS KILLED AT LANGFORD

Residents Protest Death Alley

Langford Lake residents are considering another appeal to the provincial highways department against hazardous conditions along part of Goldstream Avenue where two students were killed Tuesday in a collision with a loaded grain truck.

Colwood RCMP said the driver of the car Ronald Cruickshank, 16, of 965 Weaver, was killed in the crash in the 1100-block at 4 p.m. Passenger Mary Sullivan, 15, of 2780 Spencer, died at Victoria General Hospital at 4:55 p.m.

Truck driver Derk Vriezen, 21, of Duncan, employed by Buckerfield's Feeds, received minor injuries, was treated at Victoria General and released.

The victims were students at Belmont-Fisher Secondary School.

John McIlree, 1161 Goldstream, chairman of Langford Lake Improvement District Association, said previous efforts to have the highways department restrict speed along the former Island Highway bordering the lakeshore had been ignored.

"Speed is a real serious factor along there," McIlree said, although he did not attribute Tuesday's fatalities to speed.

The accident did point to the need for more traffic control in a confined residential area with no sidewalks, numerous uncontrolled accesses and limited parking that encourages some residents to leave vehicles projecting onto the pavement.

Police said the accident occurred at the intersection of Goldstream and an access road at the south end of Langford Lake.

Sgt. Jim Williams, head of Colwood traffic division, said Cruickshank must have seen the oncoming southbound truck as he pulled out of the access road, but the car was struck broadside and spun.

The truck apparently continued across Goldstream, but the impact sheared its metal grain bin from its mounts and the chassis continued through a ditch on the east side without overturning.

A long alumium grain auger was dislodged from the top of the bin during the impact and as the car swerved out of control the auger penetrated the rear window and continued through the car's interior to emerge through the passenger side of the windshield.

"We sit in our houses and hear the tires scream and wait for the bang," McIlree said, referring to the common occurrence of cars and trucks rounding two curves and a hill near the south end of the lake.

The deaths Tuesday bring to three the road-fatalities on the last curve before Leigh Road within 18 months. Two other cars have gone over the bank into private yards, one of them McIlree's, which drops about 20 feet from the road.

The resident said drivers ignore the posted 35 m.p.h. speed limit.

"It's just plain hell along here," said Benjamin Tennyson, 1217 Goldstream.

Cars, campers, semi-trailer transports and gravel trucks alike barrel along the avenue with impunity, Tennyson said. Vibration from the traffic has weakened a steel reinforced retaining wall at his property and complaints so far had proven useless.

"I've stood there (at the roadside) flabbergasted. It's unbelieveable. You have to see it. If there was a radar set up, there wouldn't be a person who wouldn't be taken," Tennyson declared.

"People won't take a walk any more," added neighbor John McLean, 1225 Goldstream. "You take your life in your hands."

BARRIERS TO BE LIFTED FOR JAIL INTERVIEWS

Victoria police board today agreed to alter proposed changes to the interviewing procedures at the city jail by disallowing the installation of bars on a window separating lawyers form prisoners in the interview room.

The action came after a three-man delegation from the Victoria Bar Association appeared before the board and argued that having bars separating lawyer from client would be a contravention of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Chief Jack Gregory had proposed the bars as a means of tightening security, which he said was essential in view of recent incidents in provincial jails.

David Wilson, spokesman for the lawyers, said "that sort of situation (the bars) is absolutely unacceptable."

"An accused has a right to see his lawyer face to face and instruct him confidentially . . . and that means the same room and in such a way he doesn't feel any pressure or intimidation."

The proposed changes suggested by police involved taking a couple of large interview rooms divided down the centre by a wall with an opening in the middle for an interview desk. The accused would sit in one room, the lawyer in the other, with a 32-inch by 22-inch window separating them.

Gregory said the changes were being made because of security problems and congestion in jail cells, where interviews have been held in the past.

"It got to the stage where you couldn't tell the lawyers from the prisoners," the chief said.

Board member Jeane Watchuk said allowing lawyers fact-to-face interviews with their clients was "pretty basic, affecting the whole criminal justice system."

She understood the concerns of the police to protect people and provide security but felt it was also incumbent upon them to protect age-old common law rights.

Wilson said he had spoken to the attorney-general's department which had advised him that "the accused person has the right to meet his own lawyer without impingements."

"You mean an open jail?" Gregory queried.

"No, I'm not suggesting that," Wilson replied.

The board agreed to use of a plexiglass window between the rooms when they were being used for meetings between prisoners and family members.

UNDER THE DOME

UVic's Astral World Soon to Expand

A permanent tenant resides under the dome at University of Vootira's Elliott Building for the first time in a decade.

Weighing in around three tons, the new fixture is an astral telescope with 20-inch reflector, which arrived on campus late last Friday after being on order more than a year.

The instrument is the optimum size which can be accommodated by the dome, a part of the original construction of the science building in 1964-65, but which has not been put to its best use with smaller telescopes provided for astronomy courses in the physics department.

Associate professor Dr. Colin Scarfe said the $43,600 telescope will enrich the bachelor, master and doctorate programs in astronomy and be put to a variety of uses by undergraduate and graduate students in astronomy, and research fellows or faculty, totalling 120-130 persons a year.

One of few research quality telescopes manufactured in Canada, the 20-inch model was made by Lorenz Scientific Co., of Toronto.

The largest telescope previously in use at UVic was a 12-inch reflecting type, with only about one-third the light-gathering power of the new instrument.

Scarfe said the 20-inch reflector would allow the observation of more distant stars because of its greater collecting area, besides affording the operator more control in following astral objects.

It is made with precision gears driven by an electric motor and governed by electronic controls.

Its movement is not synchronized with the sky dome opening as is often the case in larger observatories such as the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain.

Major component of the new telescope is its base casting, which accounts for most of the total weight.

A new observing floor was required under the dome, which carpenters finished Tuesday, and all parts of the telescope were expected to be fitted by next week.

Scarfe said some auxiliary equipment will be needed to allow the instrument to be used properly. This will include an astral camera, a photometer or spectrograph, some of which may be assembled by the physics department.

When assembled, the telescope will stand about 10 feet high fully elevated, with a tube some 6½ feet long.

The Solution: Keep Talking

Faced with deciding on the relative merits of a heritage house and a heritage tree, Victoria city council opted Tuesday to make no decision at all but merely to try talking itself out of the dilemma.

The house in question, at 913 Burdett, is valued by heritage enthusiasts as a prime example of the building skills of pioneer Sam McClure.

It's owned by the Sisters of St. Ann, and council was told Tuesday they want it moved because they have no use for it and they're afraid it will become a heavy tax burden.

A Victoria West resident has an option to buy the home and move it to that location, but the problem is that a fine old boulevard tree stands right in the way.

Either the tree would have to come down or, if it was preserved, the home would have to stay where it was until the demolition crews set to work.

"I guess it comes down to which is worth more — a heritage house or a heritage tree," commented Ald. John Hayes.

"Someone has to sit in the role of Solomon and make a judgment," agreed planning director Geoff Greenhalgh.

But rather than do that, Mayor Mike Young suggested city officials contact the Sisters to see if there is any way the house can be retained in its present location without posing a financial problem.

Conquer Cancer Campaign Sets Target of $160,000

The annual "Conquer Cancer Campaign" begins April 1 in the Capital district with a target of $160,000, Wilfred Burton, head of the Vancouver Island branch, said Tuesday.

Last year the district campaign raised $148,000. Objective of the provincial campaign this year is $1,050,000.

Burton said a mailing to 70,000 homes will go out the first week of next month, together with a pamphlet explaining where the money goes.

Seventy per cent of all funds is devoted to cancer research, 20 per cent goes to public education programs and assistance to patients and 10 per cent of administration and fund raising.

Only in Sidney and North Saanich will the district campaign be conducted door-to-door by volunteers.

Burton said research must continue because each year about 70,000 Canadians are told they have cancer of one form or another. While better diagnosis and treatment have increased survival rates from one in four to more than 50 per cent, more than 30,000 a year are still dying from the disease.

Busboy Tells Court How He Was Knifed

An incident involving a drunk in a hotel elevator led to a dispute over room payment and ended in a stabbing, county court was told Tuesday.

Frank Ross Ogilvie, who used to work as a busboy at the Wilson Motor Inn, 850 Blanshard, told a jury and Judge E. J. C. Steward he and fellow employee Ted Lemmen pulled a drunken man from the elevator between 1:30 and 2 a.m. June 19, 1975.

The drunk, who struggled and kicked, was escorted to the street but was then picked up and taken upstairs by Glen Scott Kelly, 20, of Maple Ridge, Ogilvie testified.

Kelly is accused of wounding with intent causing bodily harm to Ogilvie by stabbing him with a knife.

Ogilvie said he, Lemmen and Hayden Jones, manager of the Wig and Dickie nightspot in the hotel, followed the two men upstairs. When they knocked on the hotel room door, a third man answered.

He said the three were supposed to pay their bill and leave the hotel.

He said he saw the third man who answerel the hotel room door and the man who was drunk in the elevator and "they weren't going to pay the bill." Eventually all six ended up in the underground parking lot.

He said Kelly jumped in his van and started it up.

Ogilvie said he also jumped in the van and grabbed the keys from the ignition and was grabbed by Kelly.

"There was pushing and shoving and then I felt a sharp blow to my stomach," he said.

He got out of the van, started walking away and the next thing he remembered was waking up in the hospital.

He said he couldn't move either leg and was numb across the stomach. He stayed in hospital two and a half weeks.

Ogilvie said his health was excellent at the time but now he can't walk proberly, can't run and has pain "every so often."

He said he didn't see a weapon in or outside the van.

Defence counsel Bob Johnston questioned him closely on the reason he got into the van.

Ogilvie said the group hadn't paid the hotel bill, he didn't think Kelly could drive properly and he wanted them to stay until police arrived.

Questioned about his pre-Questioned about his preliminary hearing evidence, he said the reason was both because he was "sick and tired" of the situation and because he thought Keyly was incapable of driving. He said he didn't think he mentioned a third reason, the hotel bill, at the prelimiary.

Johnston suggested when he entered the van he wasn't worried about the three reasons but just wanted to get the van keys.

"I wanted the keys for those reasons," Ogilvie replied.

Lemmen said there was a struggle in the parking lot involving him with the elevator drunk and Ogilvie with the third person.

A little later, he saw Ogilvie and Kelly wrestling in the front seat of the van.

He said he also got into the van for 20, possibly 30 seconds, and pulled Kelly off Ogilvie. He didn't see a knife.

Outside the van, he said words were exchanged between Ogilvie and Kelly and it was at this time he saw a knife.

In court, he was shown a knife and said "that's the same knife I saw that night" in the hand of Kelly.

Both Lemmen and Jones said they saw Ogilvie slump against a door in the parking lot.

The trial continued today. The Crown's case is being presented by Ted Pollard, assisted by Scott Marshall.

Before the Judge

A 26-year-old Saanich man who pleaded guilty March 9 to a charge of possession of marijuana March 8 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking was given permission Tuesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler to change the plea to not guilty.

Ostler's ruling in the case of John Christopher Howard, 3463 Seymour, came after he disclosed an affidavit contained criticism of a Saanich police officer who was not named.

On March 9, Howard and two other persons were charged but the case against the other two was withdrawn after Howard pleaded guilty. Prosecutor Malcolm Macaulay then gave Ostler the facts of the case and Howard was remanded in custody to Tuesday for sentence.

Tuesday, defence lawyer Peter Freeman filed four affidavits supporting the request for a change of plea. Macaulay said the Crown would not oppose the request.

"The only issue is the voluntary nature of the plea," said the prosecutor. "The Crown is in part influenced by what the Crown would consider to be improper considerations."

Ostler then described one affidavit as "disturbing and somewhat startling." He said it contained "some astonishing statements" about actions of a civilian "and also an assertion of improper conduct" by a Saanich policeman in connection with negotiations which might amount to plea-bargaining.

The judge said that "I would have expected the crown to call the officer" to give his side but it had not.

After entering a plea of not guilty, Ostler remanded the case for one week amid indications the Crown might start again with a charge against the three persons originally involved.

He released Howard on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,000 and granted Freeman's request for an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details.

Similar no-publication orders were issued by Ostler after bail hearings for three persons charged with narcotics matters.

Blair Gordon Birch, 27, of 889 Cloverdale, and Jack Leon Case, 34, of 914 Inverness, were charged jointly with trafficking in marijuana March 11 in Saanich. Birch and Steve James Glover, 23, of 1495 Fort, were charged jointly with trafficking in marijuana Monday in Saanich.

Case was charged separately with trafficking in marijuana Monday in Saanich and possession of marijuana at the same time for the purpose of trafficking. Finally, Birch and Glover were charged separately with possession of marijuana Monday in Saanich.

Ostler ordered surety bail of $2,000 for Birch while Case was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,000 and Glover was released on his own recognizance in $1,000. All charges were remanded one week for further hearing.

The third and fourth adult convictions for possession of a narcotic brought a sentence for Gordon Robert Caton, 20, of 1007 Collinson, of one month in jail followed by one year of probation.

Caton pleaded guilty March 1 to separate charges of possession of small amounts of marijuana at 2:50 a.m. Feb. 25 in the 900 block Fort and at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 26 in the 1200-block Glasgow.

Ostler noted Caton had been fined $75 twice before for possession of a narcotic, Aug. 8, 1973, in Victoria, and March 27, 1975, in Calgary. Macaulay said a pre-sentence report indicated "regular soft drug usage" by Caton for five years.

Bruce William Mayell, 27, of 912 Linden, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of defrauding ICBC of $1,286.72 and mischief, and was remanded to March 31 for sentence.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Mayell told Victoria police in mid-March, 1975, his car had been stolen and then submitted a claim to ICBC four days later. Police later found the car had "been hidden" by Mayell "to get the ICBC payout."

Birkett said Mayell had already agreed with ICBC to repay the amount at $40 a month starting in April.

William Robert Robinson, 54, of 724 Yates, was committed by Ostler to a higher court for trial following a preliminary hearing of a Victoria charge of rape of a 54-year-old woman Feb. 18. Publication of hearing details was prohibited by an order issued by Ostler at the request of defence lawyer George Jones.

Drink-and-drive fines Tuesday:

Michael Kenneth Flynn, 20, of 2446 Bowker, $375 for impaired driving March 14 in Victoria, and William Alexander Stewart, 20, of 4151 Douglas, $325 for driving Nov. 23, 1975, in Victoria, with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent. Both pleaded guilty and were instructed to take the impaired-driver course.

Earl Ross Shepherd, 25, of 843 Craigflower, was fined $350 for impaired driving Wednesday in Victoria and must take the impaired-driver course, while Gurdial Singh Sandhu, 22, of 2310 Quadra, was fined $100 for driving Wednesday in Victoria with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent. Both pleaded guilty.

X-Rated Thefts Plague Street

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lovelace Avenue in Los Angeles has had a problem ever since the X-rated movie Deep Throat became a hit.

The street signs are being stolen so often that the street has become a difficult place to find. Marchants on the avenue complain that customers can't find their shops.

And on Monday, city council turned down a four-signature petition that the street be renamed Lykes Avenue.

CAR HIDDEN ON ICBC

A 27-year-old Victoria man pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday to defrauding the Insurance Corporation of B.C. of $1,286.72 and a mischief charge.

Bruce William Mayell, 912 Linden, was remanded to March 31 for sentence.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Mayell told Victoria police in mid-March, 1975, his car had been stolen and then submitted a claim to ICBC four days later. Police subsequently found the car had been "hidden" by Mayell "to get the ICBC payout."

Birkett said Mayell had already agreed with ICBC to repay the amount at $40 a month starting in April.

Dupont Shelves Polyethylene Plant Plans

RED DEER (CP) — Du Pont Canada Ltd. has announced it is shelving plans to build a $150-million polyethylene plant near here.

D. F. Brown of Calgary, Du Pont's western manager, said the company will not renew options held on more than 1,300 acres of land. One option expired last Friday and the other will expire in early April.

The company had announced last fall that it was delaying construction because of market conditions. The plant would have used feedstock from an Alberta gas ethylene plant in the area of manufacture high-density polyethylene, which is used for plastic products.

"It's a matter of the lack of an export market for the surplus product until the Canadian market catches up," Brown said.

"The market requirement for such a plant still is estimated to be a number of years in the future."

He said it would not make economic sense to hold the land in case there is a "distant need" for the plant.

Bob Dowling, Alberta's business development minister, said the decision merely reaffirms the company's earlier plans and "causes us no concern."

"Even if the petrochemical industry did not move ahead definitely it would not be a major detriment to the economy of Alberta.

"A petrochemcial industry is not the be-all and end-all. It's just a major attempt to deversify Alberta's economic base."

Opposition leader Bob Clark said the announcement "indicates a lack of confidence in government."

"This brings into real question the great petrochemical dream this government has placed before Albertans."

need skilled labour?

Even in the face of high rates of unemployment, many jobs are going unfilled for want of qualified labour.

Some of these jobs could be filled by trainees. To encourage this, Canada Manpower can assist employers to develop training programs and will share in wages and training costs. These programs are designed to take part of the cost pressure off employers who are prepared to train new workers, including apprentices.

There are also training programs to encourage employers who will retrain and upgrade existing staff to prepare them for promotion and to achieve higher production levels.

Enquire about the Industrial Training Program at your nearest Canada Manpower Centre.

That Big Band Sound Still Draws a Crowd

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Give a listen Benny, Buddy, Woody and Glenn — the Coppertones are playing your songs . . .

Big bands may never again have a big following as in the pre-TV era when full brass rhythms would ring out in concert halls and over the airwaves.

But every once in a while a new band for old swing arrangements comes along and enjoys a surge of popularity before its adherents lose interest or the musicians move on to higher priorities.

The 17-piece Coppertones, newest manifestation of swinging brass since The Big Band blew up a couple years ago, may be around somewhat longer.

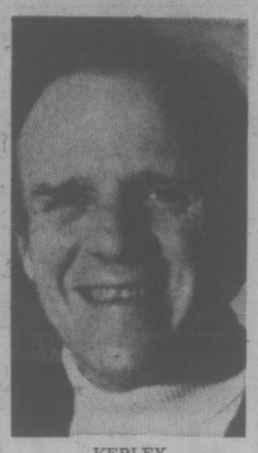
For one thing, all members of the principal sections are established in the community and are mostly 30 or older. In addition they play for themselves, as a hobby, and not for Saturday dances a la Trianon Ballroom.

"I don't think the big band will ever come back, but there is a place for it," said Coppertones leader Don Kerley, who is bandmaster at Dunsmuir Junior Secondary.

The place, initially, was Kerley's basement where a group of older musicians had gathered to do a bit of nostalgic jamming about 18 months ago.

Kerley, who had always dreamed of putting a stage-size band together, had some old swing arrangements lying around — like Feeling Funky, In the Mood and Little Brown Jug.

"Their eyes lit up when they saw some of these old titles," Kerley said. It was enough to plant the seed of the Coppertones, who are gaining the growing reputation of having the Glenn Miller sound.



KERLEY
. . . nostalgia serenade

Why Miller?

"It seems to be the music they like," Kerley explained. And certainly it has an unmistakable, full-throated, swinging beat that will be forever identifiable with the American band leader who was lost on active duty during the Second World War.

Kerley, who has been around a few years, musically speaking, has collected a number of old arrangements through local musical contacts. But many of these people won't part with the titles, some dating into the 30s and 40s.

He was in England recently where he shopped around for a few arrangements, but even in the U.K., where big band music remained in the popular idiom long after it first fell off the charts here, they were hard to come by.

So far, the Coppertones have things like Moonlight Serenade, Chattanooga Choo Choo, Song of India and Getting Sentimental Over You (both Tommy Dorsey numbers); American Patrol, String of Pearls and Tuxedo Junction, the latter, oddly enough, a recent arrangement of the standard jump.

Kerley is keeping an eye out for such others as the Miller version of Tuxedo Junction, Pennsylvania 65000, Kalamazoo, Adios and At Last.

But the list could go on — Sentimental Journey, It Don't Mean a Thing if it Ain't Got That Swing, Perfidia, One O'Clock Jump, Stompin' at the Savoy, Take the A Train — even such avante garde stuff as Kenton's Artistry in Rhythm, which was a kind of parting dichotomy of the Big Band Era.

"We'll never get rich," Kerley says. "If we could play once a month it's about what the boys want to do — not to go out (on stage) every Saturday night."

How does he explain the enthusiasm the band generates when it does play in public?

"It's something different," he said, compared with rock music. "There must be a lot of people out there who do like this music."

At first, the dance band was associated with the police community band, and most still play in it. But the Coppertones are now independent of the older band.

Most are old enough to have heard the original bands whose music they now play. Saxophonist Don Hauser, 30, considers himself one of the younger musicians of the main section. Lead player in his group is 69-year-old Maurice Pothier.

Retired from a lifetime of working on the railway, Pothier has played with a number of bands including George Kraeling's dance band and the Oak Bay senior citizen band.

Hauser said most players were good soloists, but coming from all walks of life and none having been professional musicians, it has been hard to blend them into what he called the Glenn Miller sound.

Among the saxes, "I'm the only one who hasn't played this music before," Hauser said.

A stalwart is lead trumpet Ernie Cairns who has worked hard to bring the brass together.

Lead trombone is Dave Lee, another player familiar with the Miller style.

Five saxes form the main section, including the baritone of John Grindley, who felt so strongly about the band he paid something like $1,000 for a new Selmer purchased on a visit abroad.

There are four trumpets and four trombones, piano, electric bass and drums.

Joan Bulmer, on paino, Rita Vinten and Terry Jones on Trumpet with Gale Nash as vocalist are the female members of the band, and the two youngest players are 17-year-old Dave Masini, drums, and Dave McLean, 15, bass.

Coppertones have about 130 arrangements in their book now, but they feel the basic minimum for variety is 200.

Some music publishers are reissuing old arrangements for swing band, and there are a number of new titles being arranged in the old idiom. But prices are high, Kerley says.

The band will get a boost toward music purchases when it plays for the Victorian Days cotillion ball at the Empress Hotel May 26.

Mortgage Exchange Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp. is unlikely to begin business April 1 as planned, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald says.

The main reason for the delay is that the government has not yet completed talks with mortgage lenders on how the corporation would be used, he said.

The corporation was created by legislation approved by Parliament in December, 1973. It is designed to buy and sell mortgages and make it easier for investors to enter and leave the mortgage market.

SITARIST Ravi Shankar will make his second appearance in Victoria at the University of Victoria gymnasium Saturday, March 27 at 8 p.m. Shankar, a classical master, played at the Monterey Pop Festival, 1967, Bangla Desh Benefit concert, appeared with Yehudi Menuhin at the United Nations, and has taught at University of California. He is accompanied by Tabla (drums) player Allan Rakha.

Truro Wins Battle for Gymnast

OTTAWA (UPI) — The town of Truro, N.S., Tuesday fought Canada's immigration bureaucracy to a standstill and prevented the imminent deportation of Polish defector Roguslaw Dudziak.

Dudziak jumped ship Aug. 15, 1975, but was refused refugee status by immigration officials. He was to have been deported back to Poland Thursday.

Truro fought deportation by making an issue on national radio of the impending ouster of Dudziak, who had become extremely popular due to his voluntary training of the local gymnastics team and free physiotherapy sessions for the aged of the area.

Tory MP Robert Coates brought the issue to the Commons but Immigration Minister Robert Andras said, "I think it is probably past the inquiry stage and beyond my jurisdiction."

Gus MacFarlane, a member of the governing Liberal party, then threw his weight behind the Tory and Truro protests.

Barely minutes after the exchange in the Commons and government lobby, Andras sent a message suspending indefinitely the deportation order.

A spokesman for Andras said he "messaged the department to delay the deportation indefinitely to give Dudziak time to find a country from which he could re-apply for landed immigrant status to Canada."

Andras said he had no power to overrule deportation orders but could postpone them.

Canada's immigration law requires that aliens apply for landed immigrant status from outside the country.

The parents of children in the Truro gymnastics club had asked Andras in a petition Feb. 10 to "give Mr. Dudziak a future, a future in a Canada that is as certain as the future of our children."

Unromantic Eviction Brought Court Fine

NESSEN
. . . enlightened

BRISTOL, England — A bird breeder was punished in court here for evicting an unromantic canary from its cage.

"The bird was cast loose because it had lost its sex urge," declared an indignant official from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

A £5 ($10) fine was levied on breeder Royston Chick, who lost patience with a male bird when it declined to show any interest in females.

Chick told the magistrates: "The canary was no good."

The RSPCA official said: "Luckily we were able to recapture the bird unhurt."

He added without elaboration: "It is now being looked after at a dog's home."

WASHINGTON — White House press secretary Ron Nessen says he has been assured by President Ford that in future he will be fully advised by all White House business.

White House aides failed to tell Nessen that Richard Nixon's China trip report had been sent to Ford last week. White House reporters asked Nessen about the report Monday, and Nessen said it was yet to be delivered. Nessen then learned that it had been delivered, and he said he "went up and talked to the president" about it.

LLEWELLYN
. . . no comment

LONDON — Roddy Llewellyn, close friend of Princess Margaret, has broken his silence for the first time since her separation last week from her husband Lord Snowdon — but only to say he would not comment on the matter.

But Llewellyn, 28, said he regretted any embarrassment caused to Queen Elizabeth and the Royal Family and asked reporters to leave him alone.

GREENE
. . . suing state

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A priest who was suspended last January because he refused to live in a rectory he considered too luxurious was reinstated Tuesday and assigned to a smaller, inner-city parish.

Father James Callan, 28, was suspended after informing the bishop of Rochester Roman Catholic Diocese that he would not reside in St. Ambrose rectory, claiming it resembled a castle and was above the means of the parishioners he was serving.

"I thought it was a scandal to be living above the people," he explained.

LOS ANGELES — Lorne Greene and Michael Landon, father and son in the "Bonanza" series, have gone their separate ways on the television screen but were back in the saddle together Tuesday to face a common foe — the State of California.

Greene and Landon brought suit against the state for failing to follow through on a promise to buy 2,000 feet of ocean front property they own. The state government decided in September, 1974 that the land should be a public park and appropriated $2 million to buy it, the suit said, but no offer has been made to them.

Meanwhile, Greene and Landon are forbidden to sell to any buyer but the state and must continue paying upkeep, insurance and taxes on the property.

Wooden Car Beats Rust

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP) — Richard Roung has no rust worries with his car — it's wooden.

The industrial management technologist said that since 1961, he has been sporadically constructing the wooden car, which has cost him about $800 in materials during the last four years.

Built on a shortened 1953 Ford chassis with a Rambler six-cylinder engine, the car is a box-like design with a front bumper made of a four-by-four-inch oak beam.

"I was always interested in cars and when I went out to build one of wood, all I got was laughter from my brothers," said Roung, the father of two girls.

He said he started the work in a shed on his father's farm, but after a few years his interest waned and the car remained in a half-completed stage for the next eight years.

Roung returned to working on it four years ago and now the car is on the verge of completion.

IRATE RACCOON SET ON POLICE

VERNON, Conn. (AP) — Randy the Raccoon may not have to appear in court on April 16. A prosecutor says a mug shot of the animal may be sufficient evidence.

The racoon's owners, Stephen Ference, 22, and Carolyn Shea, 38, have been charged with possession of marijuana and controlled drugs with intent to sell, police said Monday.

Ference was also charged with resisting arrest, disobeying police officers and attempted assault on police officers, and that is where Randy comes in.

Officers said Ference wrestled with them during a drug raid Friday and then "pulled out something that looked like a raccoon hat." It was Randy, said Detective Leo Arnone, who described the large raccoon as "snarling and flashing his teeth."

Arnone said Ference "started yelling to the raccoon, 'Get him Randy, get him!' " but the officer escaped with only a scratched hand.

Skall Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Skall, winner of the 1948 Academy Award in cinematography for the motion picture Joan of Arc, died Monday after a long illness.

Skall was nominated nine times for the award, as a result of work on biblical epics Quo Vadis in 1951 and Silver Chalice in 1954.

His career spanned 53 years. Skall is survived by his widow, Gertrude.

ESCAPERS BACK IN B.C.

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Three juvenile girls who escaped from the Haney detention home on March 11 and were captured near San Francisco three days later, were returned to the home Tuesday.

RCMP said the three had been charged with car theft, along with two youths who escaped and were captured with them, by United States authorities, but that the charges were dropped in favor of deportation.

The two youths also were being deported back to British Columbia

Police Hands Tied on Streetwalkers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police have stopped making arrests on charges of soliciting on Vancouver streets since a court ruling last November narrowed the definition of the crime.

And the head of the city's vice squad says streetwalking will in effect cease to be an offence if the ruling is upheld on appeal.

Police "would be out of the business of arresting streetwalkers" if County Court Judge M. I. Catliff's ruling is upheld, S. Sgt. Glen McDonald said in an interview.

"You can't arrest for something there is no offence for," he added.

A provincial court conviction against Karen Lariza was overturned on the grounds that the crown did not prove she pestered a city detective while negotiating with him.

Prostitution is not an offence, the judge noted, and a soliciting conviction should only be entered if the allged prostitute's conduct is of an "importuning nature."

Miss Lariza simply engaged the detective in a friendly conversation about the services she was willing to supply and the price, the judge ruled, and was not "pressing or persistent."

The decision was appealed by the Crown and the verdict is expected soon.

If it is upheld, S.Sgt. McDonald said, "it will, in effect, make prostitution legal in public places."

The ruling does not affect soliciting in private places, such as a bawdy house, or crimes such as living off the avails of prostitution, procuring or transporting a person for prostitution.

Arrests in those areas are continuing, but S.Sgt. McDonald said they represent "only a drop in the bucket."

Since November, there have been only a total of half-dozen charges involving pimps and bawdy houses, compared to the average of five or six arrests a night for soliciting, prior to the ruling.

Charges against alleged bawdy houses are difficult to lay, said S.Sgt. McDonald, because of the great deal of time involved in gathering information.

And convicting pimps on charges of living off the avails of prostitution is extremely difficult because "the girls are absolutely terrified for their lives of giving evidence against them," he said.

S. Sgt. McDonnald said he fears that if the legal stigma is removed from streetwalking, girls will soon find it glamorous.

"It would take away the taint from prostitution."

He said he is especially worried about how younger girls will view prostitution, "girls who have not made up their own minds about sex. It may just be looked at as an easy way to make a buck," he said.

Body-Rub Bylaw Passes

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bylaw to regulate body-rub parlors, body-painting studios and nude-model studios was approved by city council Tuesday despite protests from two aldermen that it isn't tough enough.

Aldermen Helen Boyce and Warnett Kennedy voted against the bylaw because they wanted the operations banned outright.

An outright prohibition, however, requires a unanimous vote of council and two aldermen — Fritz Bowers and Art Cowie — have said they won't vote for such a bylaw.

The bylaw requires employees of body-rub parlors to be clothed, bans suggestive advertising, regulates business hours, bars persons under 19 years of age from the premises and requires registration of all employees with the police.

Kennedy said the operations are "disgusting" and wondered what impression of Vancouver they would give to visitors to the United Nations Habitat conference in late May.

Mayor Art Phillips said the regulating bylaw will put a number of the operations out of business. It was approved on a 9-2 vote of council.

FAT PROFIT of $90 is expected to result from West Vancouver Secondary School project in which biology students are feeding two pigs with food from lunches tossed out by students. The aim is to demonstrate an alternate use to waste.

FRUIT MEN 'IN TROUBLE'

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Charles Bernhardt, president of the British Columbia Tree Fruit Growers' Association, said Tuesday that the province's tree fruit industry is facing a serious situation because of low prices being received for the 1975 apple crop.

Bernhardt said growers could expect only a 2½-cent return on a pound of apples — the lowest return in 20 years. And, he said, there is nothing the industry can do about it.

"As an industry, we don't even get the protection some others do," he said. "Our costs are rising, above those paid in the industry's major competitor, Washington State."

Turkey Producers Ready To Fight Panco Expansion

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia turkey producers unanimously decided Tuesday to fight a move by the government-owned Panco Poultry Ltd. to regain about $3 million worth of turkey quota it lost last year.

Panco, which was bought in February of 1975 by the New Democratic Party government for $10 million, has appealed to the B.C. Marketing Board to rescind a decision by the B.C. Turkey Board that gave Panco a quota of 40,000 heavy turkeys a year.

Panco previously had 27 per cent of the turkey production, amounting to 273,000 heavy and 238,000 light birds worth $3.5 million in annual revenue.

The marketing board set the hearing for April 5.

Bill Ritchie, chairman of the broiler board, told growers at the third annual meeting Tuesday the latest move by Panco is a contradiction of a Social Credit election promise to support the concept of family-owned farms.

He also accused the government of aggravating the situation by not having a full-time minister of agriculture.

Ritchie also said the move by Panco to regain the quota will create hefty legal expenses for the taxpayer in a time of restraint.

He said that if Panco, which kills about 50 per cent of the chickens in B.C. and about 70 per cent of all turkeys, insists on 27 per cent of the turkey production at the farm level, the province's other processing firms could demand equal treatment.

"That would leave the rest of us with about 10 per cent of the production," Ritchie said.

Uncle Ben's Brewery Open As Union Dispute Settled

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Uncle Ben's Brewery here is back in business and brewing starts again today.

A spokesman for the British Columbia Liquor Administration branch in Vancouver said Tuesday the firm's products will be placed in liquor stores as soon as they become available again.

The spokesman said a shortage of Uncle Ben's wine and beer was caused by production problems owner Ben Ginter had due to a dispute with unions representing his employees.

The B.C. Federation of Labor had place a "hot" edict on all of Ginter's products. No union member was willing to handle them and production stopped completely for several months.

The edict was lifted when a receiver appointed on behalf of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce settled the union dispute.

The Vancouver firm of Dunwoody and Co. was appointed because the bank called a note of about $3.9 million which Ginter was unable to meet. His holdings are still in receivership.

The liquor branch spokesman said 45,000 dozen bottles of beer stored in the Prince George brewery will be tested to see if they can still be sold, since liquor stores usually do not sell beer older than three months.

The 300,000 gallons of beer stored in vats at the brewery were found to be in "perfect" condition but contain a high percentage of alcohol. This beer will be blended with the new brew.

Ginter said from Vancouver that all his old employees would be back at their jobs again if they have not found other employment. There were about 36 employees at the brewery.

Ginter has been trying to sell the brewery.

Hydro Balancing Coal Vs. Water

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Bonner, chairman of British Columbia Hydro, said Tuesday that Hydro is faced with deciding if it should soon develop expensive water-generated power as a better long-term alternative than exploiting coal deposits which would be cheaper right now.

The problem, said Bonner in an interview, is related to the forecast high growth in demand for electrical power and the prospect of continuing high inflation.

He said Hydro now is having new studies done of development of Hat Creek coal deposits in the southern Interior, something he hopes will help make the critical decision.

Bonner also commented on other problems the Crown-owned power corporation faces.

He said he expects that by the end of 1976 Hydro will have to cut by attrition about 700 to 800 persons from its current 12,000 employees in order to cut costs.

Bonner also said Hydro will increase its fees for electrical connections and will start to charge for services such as checking house plans, which used to be done free.

He also said that Hydro will have to start looking at other water power sites examined over the years.

VANCOUVER (CP) — James William Vogt, 19, of Vancouver was committed for trial Tuesday charged with criminal negligence causing death in connection with the operation of a motor vehicle. Vogt was charged after Lois Elizabeth Kansa, 25, of Vancouver, was killed and eight other persons were injured when a car and taxi collided last Oct. 24.

INVERMERE (CP) — Toby Samuel Nicholas, 31, of the Windermere area, was charged Tuesday with murder in the death of Doreen Bernadette Stanley, 32, of the Windermere area.

She was dead on arrival at hospital Friday after she had been beaten.

Nicholas was remanded Tuesday to March 29.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Juniper Landa, a 1,000-acre housing development on benchland in the city is back on the rails after going bankrupt two years ago.

John Mason, a partner in Dunwoody and Co. of Vancouer, who was named trustee in the bankruptcy, said today contractors will start Monday to finish a water system and within several weeks building contractors will complete the 25 existing homes.

"I hope to encourage local builders to purchase lots during the next two weeks," he said.

About 118 lots will be available shortly.

MAYOR'S PAY UP 86%

ENDERBY (CP) — After Ald. Peter Gale voiced strong opposition, city council agreed Monday night to raise the mayor and aldermen's indemnities 86 per cent and 78 per cent respectively.

Ald. Gale said he believed the increases should remain within federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Mayor Bill Attlesey said that in comparison to other municipalities in the area, salaries of Enderby officials were low.

Concil voted to raise Mayor Attlesey's salary to $2,600 from $1,400 and aldermanic salaries to $1,600 from $900.

Council indemnities were raised 50 per cent in 1975.

Meanwhile, council agreed to raise city workers' wages between seven and 11 per cent this year.

Basic labor rate will be $5.76 an hour, an increase from $5.05 an hour.

Enderby is 23 miles north of Vernon.
